Heat 1-3 cup of French dressing just to boiling point. Add 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 shelled and sliced and chopped hard-cooked egg and 1-3 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Cook washed spinach in only the water which clings to leaves, turning it over after first 2 minutes over high heat. As soon as you can cut through it with a knife, do so, until it is fairly coarsely chopped. Drain off excess liquid (but save it for the soup pot). Pour over hot French dressing, mix in and serve at once.

CASSEROLE OF BROCCOLI WITH BREADCRUMBS AND CHEESE

Trim outer coarse skin from big stalks of broccoli but leave on the small leaves. Wash. Place in saucepan with 1-inch boiling water. Cover. Cook over high heat until barely tender—about 12 minutes. You will need 2 lbs. for this casserole, remember. Drain it and chop rather finely. Saute gently in 3 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon grated onion for about 1 minute, then add 3 tablespoon flour; blend in, then stir in 1 cup milk, 1-4 teaspoon each salt and paprika. (Or you may use a can of condensed mushroom soup.) Add the chopped broccoli to the sauce and heat the mixture for 2 minutes. Turn into baking dish. Sprinkle top with buttered crumbs or crushed cornflakes or potato chips, then top with at least 1-2 cup grated cheese. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. until mixture bubbles and top browns.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS AND CHESTNUTS CREAMED

Soak 1 lb. sprouts in salt water 10 minutes, then trim off yellow or wilted leaves. Cut crosswise again in base of stem. Drop them in boiling water to barely cover and boil ten minutes, covered. Drain. Add to them 1 cup of Italian chestnuts which have been boiled 30 minutes, shelled and skinned, and boiled in their bare state for about 15 minutes or until tender. Heat thrice golden brown 1 tablespoon butter, add 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar and add chestnuts and stir and cook them until they are golden. In another saucepan melt 2 tablespoons butter, stir in 2 tablespoons flour, then 1 cup Brussels Sprouts liquid or half liquid and cream and stir until thick. When the sauce is smooth and thick add drained sprouts and browned chestnuts. If desired you may substitute 1 cup chopped celery, sauted in butter, for the nuts, instead of the chestnuts.

CHANTILLY POTATOES

Make your fluffiest mashed potatoes, by parring, salting then and soaking in cold water 1-2 hour. Boiling in salted water until very tender, draining, beating over low heat until not one lump remains, adding plenty of hot milk and butter, and beat until your arm aches. Place these on a deep pie plate in a careful mound. Whip 1-2 cup cream until stiff and add 1-4 tsp. salt and pepper and paprika and cayenne. Fold in 1-2 cup dry grated cheese. Cover the mound of potatoes with the whipped cream mixture. Place in oven at about 375 deg. Fahr. until cheese is melted and dish has a light golden tinge. Serve at once. This kind of cooking lures your children home for Christmas.

RAWDON

Harry McAdam Installs Officers

RAWDON —District Master, Brother Harry McAdam, of Mount Pleasant, conducted the election and installation of the 1953 officers for Wellman's L.O.L. No. 172, on Wednesday evening at the lodge room.

Plans were made to hold an oyster supper in January. The lodge has a good financial balance.

The officers are: Wor. Master, Bro. Maurice Clancy; deputy master — Bro. Lorne White; chaplain — Bro. Carl Clancy; recording secretary — Bro. Keith Clancy; treasurer, Bro. Victor Graham; marshal, Bro. Raymond Mc. Connell, 1st lecturer, Bro. Ken Matthews; 2nd lecturer, Bro. George Russell; Sr. committeeman Bro Milton Hagerman; 1st tyler, Bro. Wellman Fleming and O. tyler, Bro. Wilmot Scott.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Here's the Real Spirit of Christmas on Plan for Gifts for Shut-ins.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am one of the six members of a sewing club, and at our meeting yesterday we all decided to plan on a special present to take (not to send) to shut-in relatives and friends. In other words, to dedicate part of Christmas Day to go to see each shut-in and to bring our present with us. Have you some suggestions, please, for gifts we could take?

— Dorothy S.

Salutations to all for this good thought — bless you!

Your plan is a manifestation of practical religion. A delight to a shut-in is a sea-garden in a glass aquarium, a gift to bring happiness and brightness for a long time; you can get artistically arranged ones in small sizes. Or a gold-fish aquarium, to sparkle vividly. Or a lovely framed picture or print of a subject you know is a favorite with your relative or friend. Records (perhaps one or two Christmas hymns) are an enchanting gift. Or a white glass vase, or pottery container, filled with branches of lily leaves, so popular now, for they are easy to care for, and thrive for months. A lingerie pillow — a pillow-rest — warm bed-socks — a quilted robe or bed jacket, all comforting gifts. A manicure-set. A book of verse.

Or take a card registering a subscription to a newspaper or basket of home-made cookies, or dates or figs — plain or stuffed — a fruit cake or pudding, various kinds of jams or jellies. A festive bunch of glistening holly, alone or with Christmas green. A long-lasting Christmas candle — white or red or green, plain or decorated. Christmas candles have never been so wonderful as this year. Or, very welcome, an attractive and sturdy bag, to be hung on a chair or bed, convenient to hold book, handkerchief, glasses-case and the like. May Good Fortune shine on your Christmas pilgrimages to the homes of these shut-ins who so much need your tender thoughtfulness for their happiness and comfort.

A Grateful-Guest Present to Bring and to Send Her Flancy's Mother.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance's mother has invited me to their home in the country for a week's visit, and I am wondering if it would be bad taste for me to take a box of candy to my hostess, and then when I return home send her an additional gift, perhaps sheets or something similar. Is it necessary for me to bring or send the daughters gifts also? One is married, and the other, unmarried lives at home.

— W. M.

An excellent plan — to bring a box of candy (perhaps a special kind for which your city is famous) to your hostess, and then, when you write your bread-and-butter letter, send her a most carefully chosen present. But I suggest not the utilitarian present as sheets. Something personal for her would be better; perhaps a daytime purse, or a dainty afternoon or evening bag; or sheer white handkerchiefs, monogrammed, or with the initial of her first name; or perhaps nylon stockings, or a nylon or silk slip. It is not necessary to take or send presents to the sisters — but it would be a charming and generous gesture for you to choose two simple and inexpensive presents to "make your bow" to them.

Women's Institute

MARMORA W.I.

Marmora — Articles of food for needy persons for distribution under the Canadian Legion program and dainty gifts for exchange with each other were brought by members of Marmora Women's Institute to their December meeting held on Wednesday evening at the new home of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Wells.

This was in lieu of the usual roll call and lent that much seasonal color to the proceedings.

Mrs. Harold D. Hayden, president, was in the chair, and Mrs. E. G. Prentice presided at the piano.

Finances Good

The financial status of the branch was shown by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. R. Brady, to be good. A letter of thanks was read from the Unitarian Relief Fund thanking members for a donation which had been sent in. A letter and accompanying list of persons requiring the Canadian Legion's program of Christmas cheer was read and explained.

A committee comprising Messdames R. Sexsmith, Fred Sexsmith and R. E. Neal was appointed to procure a new Tweedsmuir Scrap Book.

Keep Peace

Roll call on the month's motto, "Keep Thyself First in Peace, and Then Thou Shalt Be Able to Keep Others Peaceful" Observed given by Mr. W. J. Cottrell. Mrs. H. Vansilone read the history of Brady. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Then followed the exchange of the Christmas gifts and the serving of refreshments by the committee in charge.

"Arise my daughter" — and all at once the little girl was alive again.

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the text books written by the late Fulton Oursler, noted author of such works as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Neil O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER V

It is not easy to say "no" to something wrong. We have to be strong and brave to be good. Jesus became a man to show us just how to be strong when we are tempted to do wrong. He went hungry and thirsty for forty nights and days and then refused to do wrong. He knew that everybody on earth is tempted to do wrong sometimes, especially when they are weakest.

The very next day, after a good, hearty meal, Jesus began His work of talking to crowds of people and showing them how to be happy. From then on, He was never alone. In one place after another He met the young men who loved him and came to Him. They stopped work. They left their homes. They only wanted to be with Him and help Him as He went from town to town. His friends were called Apostles.

These friends were all poor workingmen. Some like John and Andrew, were fishermen. They sailed on the lake of Galilee. Andrew had another brother who also followed Jesus. His name was Simon, but Jesus liked to call him Peter, which means a rock. Philip came next and he brought along his cousin, Bartholomew, also known as Nathaniel. Others came later, including two named James.

With these followers, Jesus took the long walk home to Nazareth so that Mary, His mother, could meet His new friends. And right away a surprising thing happened. That night they all went to a house in a town called Cana. The young lady of the house was getting married and there was a happy wedding party. But something went wrong.

Mary came to Jesus and told Him the trouble. There was food for all but not enough wine for the guests to drink. What could He do to help?

Jesus wanted to please His mother and to help a worried family. He called the servants. They carried in six red jars, each one taller than a boy, filled with water. Jesus prayed over the water and then told the people to taste it. They could not believe their own mouths. It was no' just water any more. It was the red juice of the grape, the sweetest liquor that ever tasted.

That was the first miracle of Jesus. A miracle is a wonderful happening that only God can do.

From that time on Jesus did many miracles. He touched a blind man's eyes and the poor man could see, just as you and I can see. He laid His hands on men and women who were sick with a disease called leprosy and made them well again.

One day he stood in a house by side the body of a little girl. The father and mother were crying, but Jesus touched her forehead and He said: "Arise My daughter"—and all at once the dead little girl was alive again, being hugged and kissed by her father and mother. Then Jesus, who loved the little girls, just as He loved everybody else, told the mother and father they must go to the kitchen right away and bring their hungry daughter something nice to eat.

Jesus also told people they must have faith. Faith is believing something you cannot see, but you are sure of it just the same. You are very sure like knowing that your father loves you and mother loves you. Faith in God invites miracles.

Special Desserts For Christmas

What a wonderful joyous season Christmas is with all its gay customs and traditions. Take holly for instance. This beautiful Christmas green is said to keep away evil spirits, while the Christmas tree, used long before the Christian era has become a symbol of hope, life and merriment. In the time of the Druids, hatred and misunderstanding was supposed to burn with the Yule log in our day, and indeed the good faith and gay spirits that invade the whole season.

Christmas is a time to open homes and hearts and to welcome friends. The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, want to wish all their friends, old and new, a happy and joyous Christmas!

Dessert Parties Are Fun

Dessert parties are a charming, informal way to entertain at any time over the holiday season. This type of party allows the guests plenty of time to make other calls on a crowded holiday schedule and it does not put too much strain on the hostess. Since the hostess will not have as many items to prepare and some time will have passed since the guests have had the first courses of their meal, heartier and richer desserts may be in order.

A meringue pie is festive and Christmas-like. It is made by baking a meringue pie crust, then filling this crust with luscious well-drained frozen strawberries or raspberries and then topping with whipped cream or ice cream. A raspberry Bavarian cream may also be used for the filling.

Pies of all kinds with fancy toppings or edgings may also be served. Holes may be cut in the top crust in groups of three's, with a thimble or small cookie cutter, to resemble holly berries. The leaves particularly effective on a berry pie. Another idea is to cut a triangle from the center of the top crust and cut out of fashion a Christmas tree. Then place the tree in the center of the triangle.

As every Christmas party, gay whimsical, fancy cookies of all types should be in evidence. They may be plain ice-box cookies dressed up with candied fruit nuts, cocoanut, tinted sugar and wee silver or colored candies or gay cookie figures cut out in the shapes of Santa Claus, Christmas trees or stars, to delight the children.

Rich fancy cookies with thick marshmallow or chocolate toppings or glistening meringues are always favorites when making Christmas cookies are only the best ingredients. At Christmas time we do not mind using extra eggs and a little more butter.

Strawberry Fluff

Whether it is for a Christmas dessert party or for the final course of a Christmas dinner, a special dessert is called for. It is wonderfully smooth and rich and just the thing for a perfect ending to a meal.

Here it is:

20 marshmallows (about ½ ounces)
1 cup hot milk
¾ cup crushed frozen strawberries
Few grains salt
1 cup whipping cream

Cookies Worth Weight in Gold

What are probably the most expensive cookies in history are displayed by Mrs. Peter S. Harilb of Chicago. They were worth $25,000 to her. That was the prize presented when she won the U.S. national baking contest in New York City. The design of the cookies was made by one of Mrs. Harilb's young sons. — Central Press Canadian.

Chill this mixture and allow to partially set. While its setting add few grains of salt to one cup of whipping cream and whip until stiff. Fold the whipped cream into the chilled strawberry mixture. Pour into a refrigerator tray and freeze. This recipe serves six people.

DECEMBER DREAMS

The white homes in the hamlet
Gleam in the morning glow,
The smoke-wreaths curl above them,
The lake's calm waters show
Pictures of warm-robed cedars,
And trees all green and gray.
That all along the shore line
Like sentinels guard the way.

The morn is calm and silent,
The meadows brown and sere,
And o'er the heart come surging
The dreams of yesteryear.
When December snows brought visions
Of sports 'mid ice and snow—
The winter winds a challenge
In the days of long ago.

And through the throbbing mystery
Of this December morn,
Old longings and ambitions
Are in the heart reborn;
And in dreams we hear the tidings
By herald angels sung,
With the happy Christmas spirit
Makes all the old world young.

WARWICK NATIVE DIES

DETROIT (CP)—Dr. William A. Fenner, 71, native of Warwick, 23 miles east of Sarnia, died Sunday following a brief illness.

Women Of The Moose

On Thursday evening, the Women of the Moose, Belleville, Chapter 425, held their regular meeting in the Moose Hall with good attendance. The meeting was called to order by Sr. Rgt. Mary Hopkins, who then introduced Bro. George Minix, representative of the Loyal Order of Moose 1004, Bro. Minix extended an invitation on behalf of his lodge, to all Chapter members and friends to attend New Year's dance, before retiring Bro. Minix was asked by the Sr. Regent to draw ticket out of a bag on the tea cosey set, with Dorothy Hudgins being the lucky winner.

New Member Initiated

A new member, Thelma Fitzgibbon, was initiated into the defending circle and welcomed by the Sr. Regent and all co-workers with the sign of courtesy. Sr. Regent Mary Peoples congratulated Junior Regent Olive Roth for bringing her friend into the circle and hoped she would make her feel at home.

Christmas cards were received from Alice McKelvie, Kitchener; Margaret Magee, Toronto, and Dept. Grand Reg. Amy Winder, worth, Toronto. A letter was received from Margaret Cullie, Toronto, on the Chapter conference to be held in the latter part of January in Toronto, and the number of the members planning on attending. Two "thank-you" notes were read from families helped by social service chairman Leslie Hudgins.

Thanks Tendered

Thanks were tendered by sentinel, Luella Bull, from herself and Loyal Orders of Moose, Lady Hope, for gift given to them by the Women of the Moose for use in visiting Home of the Christ—mas tree fund. A card of thanks was received from Mrs. Mae Wardell for all cards received while in the hospital. Florence Carufel also extended thanks to all who had helped on the banquet for Nellie Gay Chapter, the proceeds of which were received. The Sr. Regent, also endorsed the thanks and congratulated co-worker Carufel on how well everything had gone.

Co-worker Mary Vandusen gave her report on the banquet and also turned in the proceeds, receiving hearty congratulations from the Sr. Regent. Also receiving commendation for the quarter was picked, co-worker Peggy Minix, Jr. Grad. Regent Selina Isles and Chaplain Emily Jeffery.

Christmas Plans

Sr. Regent spoke on plans made for the Christmas tree and asked all members to be sure the children's names were in. It was decided that the annual cheque be sent to the hospital for Sick Children, and that money be sent to Sunnybrook Military Hospital for veterans and that each member to that they may telephone to their co-workers and that each member may supper for all members to be held the first meeting in January with Recorder Nellie Scrimgeour as convener and Peggy Minix as assistant. It was reported that two members were ill and to send cards. A motion was passed that Recorder Scrimgeour and Treasurer Connel would send Christmas cards to all members.

After the meeting was brought to a close, a social was held with playing cards with prizes going

Women's Activities

MELROSE W.M.S.

The December meeting of the Melrose W.M.S., was held at the home of Mrs. S. Denslie with the attendance of 12 members and two children. The president, Mrs. B. McFarlane, presided for a short worship service. She was assisted by Mrs. John Verne, who read several passages of Scripture and Mrs. S. Denslie, who acted as pianist for the singing of several Christmas carols.

During the business session, and invitation to attend an open meeting of the Gilead W.M.S. was read. The treasurer, Miss M. McLaren gave the financial report, which proved that the, roiasonary effort of this society has been most successful for the year 1952.

Mrs. McFarlane expressed her appreciation to all the members for their devotion during her three-year term of office as president.

Program

The program was in charge of Miss M. Bailey, Mrs. C. Osborne gave a reading entitled, "Long Ago at Christmas"; Mrs. S. Denslie read the story of "The First Christmas". Miss Bailey conducted a candlelighting service.

In the centre of the room was a table with four small candles, representing "faith," "prayer," "love," and "thanksgiving", with one larger candle placed in the centre representing the Christ Child, whose life is an example to all.

The candles were lighted at the appointed time. Those assisting in this service included: Mrs. E. Embury, Mrs. John English, Mrs. E. Badgley, Mrs. William McMechan and Miss B. McFarlane.

Miss Bailey closed this impressive service with these remarks: "We have lighted these candles as symbols of the Christian way of life and may we, as missionary workers, ever keep them burning."

The installation of the officers and treats were served.

Club Activities

ELDORADO-UNION M.B.

The December meeting of Eldorado-Union Mission Band was held in the form of an 'open meeting' with the guests being the W.M.S. members; the Rev. J. F. Lane and Mrs Lane, and the parents, who were welcomed by Patsy Blakely.

The treasurer's report was given by Melvin Blackburn. Reuben Robinson will have charge of the next meeting, and Edna Derry, the worship service.

Beverley Hurley and Joanne Childley sang a duet, "Baby Jesus", with Carol Bailey as accompanist. Marlene Blackburn read the Scripture Lesson, followed by a story, "Dream of Two Houses", by Raeburn Robinson.

A little play, "Gifts We Can Bring", conducted by the juniors, and "Have You Heard of Jesus", a play by the seniors, were both enjoyed, as were a recitation by Gordon Hurley; a piano solo by Janet Blackburn; a "Christmas Story", by Anne Cook; the piano solo, "A Visit From Santa," by Ronny Peate; a solo by Joanne Childley, "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day", and a piano solo by Carol Blackburn.

This was followed by a dialogue entitled "Candy Kids", by a number of children.

Mr. Lane closed the meeting for 1933 will take place at the January meeting.

At the close of the meeting, the hostess served refreshments and a social half hour was enjoyed.

'New' Patricias Had Brisk Clash With Chinese

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

IN KOREA (CP)—The "new" Patricias had a brief clash with Chinese on their first fighting patrol the night of Dec. 4. They killed at least five Reds, wounded at least two.

(This dispatch reports in detail an action first mentioned by Boss in a Dec. 7 story. At that time censorship prevented him identifying the unit or the individual soldiers involved.)

Two weeks later if was first committed to the Korean front in a counter-attack after Britain's Black Watch had a hilltop battle with Chinese who briefly overran its positions. The Patricias reoccupied the lost ground.

The battle already had been won by the Black Watch. Reports of that action, implying that the Patricias fought "ferociously" with fists, knives, bayonets and grenades embarrassed the regiment. They remained in the line four days.

Allowed to Feel Out Ground

Committed later with the Canadian brigade, their own brigadier, M. P. Bogert of Ottawa, allowed them to feel out the ground ahead of them for several nights before allotting them a major mission. The battalion held a major mission. The battalion held a series of ridges, including the famous Hook hill. The nearest Chinese outposts were on hills a bare 800 yards across a narrow valley.

Lieut. R. J. Campbell of Saskatoon led the unit's first fighting patrol. It's aim was to blow up a Chinese bunker-outpost on a ridgetop 450 yards from the Hook.

Said Lieut. William Beeman of Portsmouth, Ont., battalion headquarters officer:

"They crossed the valley quietly, hearing and seeing nothing until they reached the top of the ridge on the other side. The bunker they were after was some distance along its crest."

Chinese Just 'Freez'

Silently the men worked their way along the crest, led by Cpl. F. G. Kincaid of Penticton, B. C.

In a narrow trench ahead they saw eight men silhouetted in the moonlight. Said Cpl. M. E. McAllister of Brantford, Ont., leading the section following:

"The Chinese were so surprised when they saw us that they just froze. You could see their jaws drop in the moonlight. We were just 10 feet away from them. Then Brown (a private not further identified) opened up on them with a Bren gun. Three of them were hit. Two duck away but three, at least, were cut down there."

The eight men in the trench were either killed or wounded or ran away. Two men coming up from behind were shot dead.

BIG DEFENCE CONTRACT

OTTAWA (CP)—A contract for $1,189,283 has been awarded to International Harvester Co., of Canada Ltd., of Ottawa, for trucks, tractors and automotive spares, the defence production department announced Monday. This contract topped a list of production department orders placed between Nov. 17 and Nov. 30 totalling $12,322,426.

Meteor For 1953

Newly styled Meteor passenger cars for 1953, including the Customline Four-Door model shown above, are available in the widest range of models, colors and interior trim selections in Meteor history. They are being displayed at Mercury-Lincoln-Meteor dealerships across Canada. Again in 1953 Meteor offers a choice of two powerful V8 power plants, 130 h. p. engine in Customline and Crestline series, and a 110 h. p. engine in the Maline series. The front and rear suspension has been newly engineered to provide a more comfortable, safer ride than ever before.

Work Knocked Out for Weeks At Chalk River

CHALK RIVER (CP) — Isotope production in the Western world's most powerful heavy water atomic furnace has been knocked out perhaps for many weeks as a result of the radioactive "burst" last Friday.

Dr. David A. Keys, one of the top men at the $40 000,000 plant here, said Monday night there will be no more isotope production from the big atomic powerhouse until scientists locate and repair a tiny "leak" in the squat, vat-like structure which forced the evacuation last Friday of hundreds of workers.

Previous reports were that about 350 atomic workers retreated from the 10,000-acre area when an excessive amount of radioactive particles escaped from the furnace stack. But current reports placed the number of evacuees at about 1,200, including a number of men on construction projects.

Not Dangerous

The "burst" of radio-active particles which erupted from the stack and spread over the 100-building area was not considered particularly dangerous to the human body. But it was strong enough to set off alarms in all buildings.

In Ottawa, Defence Production Minister Howe, told the Commons that the damage was "negligible as far as money is concerned."

He said a special Commons committee on atomic energy will be reconvened after the Christmas recess to reopen discussion on the plant.

All workers returned to their jobs Monday, following the three-day decontamination clean-up by a rubber-clad squad.

Dr. Keys said he believes investigation into the leak will in itself be important to science since it may unveil some hitherto unknown atomic energy reactions on metals.

Back From Korea

Wing Cmdr. R. T. P. Davidson of Vancouver has returned to Canada after serving as an RCAF exchange pilot with the United States Army Air Force in Korea. A Second World War veteran with a record of six enemy planes destroyed, he will return to No. 1 RCAF fighter wing at North Luffenham, Eng., and his old job as chief operations officer. (CP from National Defence.)

Wants Outside Members

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Alderman Archie Munro, one of city council's representatives on the board of directors of East Windsor Hospital, said Monday he will ask early in the new year that council appoint two more members who are not members of city council.

Representatives for 1953 will be appointed early in January.

One recommendation included in the 50,000-word report filed recently by commissioner Gordon L. Fraser following a lengthy probe into hospital management was that the present board dissolve itself and a new board be appointed.

Royal Etiquette Bars Windsors From Crowning

PARIS (CP) — The Duke of Windsor announced today neither he nor his American-born wife would attend the Coronation next June.

The Duke's statement to the press claimed it would not be according to royal etiquette for him to attend as a former king.

There have been widely circulating reports in Britain recently that he would attend, healing the family split which has kept him remote from Buckingham Palace since his abdication in 1936.

Several newspapers have adopted a "let bygones be bygones" stand.

His press statement said:

"The Duchess of Windsor and I will not be present in Westminster Abbey on June 2, 1953, because it would not be in accordance with constitutional usage for the Coronation of a King or Queen of England to be attended by any sovereign or former sovereign of any state."

PHILOSOPHER TO MANY

LONDON (AP) — Philosopher Bertrand Russell, 80, will marry a 52 - year - old American teacher-author, Miss Edith Finch, today. Russell, three times divorced, met Miss Finch 10 years ago when she was teaching at Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania.

PICTON

97th Birthday Is Celebrated By David Clark

Picton — David Clark who lives beside the site of the ancient Hallowell Mills, celebrated his 97th birthday last week-end. Mr. Clark lives in the roughcast house just below the Picton Golf and Country Club, lives alone and likes it. He is in unusually good health for his years, and this year again cultivated a large garden. He does his own housework. He enjoys reading sometimes with glasses, sometimes without them.

"Uncle Dave" as he is known to many friends, expects to reach the century mark at least.

Born at South Bay

Born at South Bay, he was the son of Capt. Paul Clark who was a well known sailor during schooner days. He farmed at Cherry Valley and then at Elmvale. For the past 35 years he has resided in his present home. He has been a member of the Masonic Lodge for many years.

Mr. Clark has one brother, Fales, in Calgary; a son, Percy, in Oshawa; three daughters, Mrs. Stanley Thompson, Cherry Valley; Mrs. Chester Longwell, Picton; Mrs. Thomas Howell, Twenton; two granddaughters, Mrs. Elmer Gerow, Picton; Mrs. L. Grooms, Montreal, and several grandsons.

Boy Started Fires

COBOURG (CP)—A 15-year-old boy who pleaded guilty to starting three fires in Cobourg Collegiate and to theft of a car collapsed in court Monday just before his case ended.

He was remanded in custody of his father until Jan. 6.

The boy said he didn't want to go back to the collegiate, but wanted to continue his education to become a pilot. Principal R. N. McKenzie said he was willing to take the boy back.

"Christmas used to drive me crazy!"

"Every year it was the same. Presents to buy and cash at low ebb. Running up bills . . . then I got smart. I started a special Christmas account* at the Royal Bank, adding something each pay day . . . and leaving it there. This year I'm all ready for Christmas, with cash to pay for all the things that mean so much at this season of the year."

*You can have cash next Christmas, too. Decide now to open a special Christmas account early in 1953. It pays to do your Christmas saving early.

THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

SUCHAN

But they did not remain in custody. Brought to Toronto, they escaped with Edwin Alonzo Boyd, leader of the gang that for months terrorized much of Toronto, and William M. Jackson, no relation to Leonard, Sept. 8. All four were recaptured nine days later in suburban North York.

Boyd was sentenced to life imprisonment for armed bank robbery; William Jackson got 20 years. Other members of the gang were taken into custody and received lesser sentences.

Administered Last Rites

Before the pair started their last walk, Rev. John Kelly administered the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church in their cells. The St. Michael's College lecturer said:

"I can say they both went like brave men They didn't tremble. I've seen men in a lot more happy circumstances do worse than they did. They did wonderfully, spiritually."

During their last few hours, spent mostly in prayer with Father Kelly, Suchan and Jackson refused sedatives. The priest had gone to the jail at the request of Suchan, a Roman Catholic. Gerald Jackson, born Jewish and raised an Anglican, asked to be accepted into the Roman Catholic Church.

Saw Him Sunday

Mrs. Leonard Jackson, with Jackson when he was captured in Montreal amid blazing police revolvers, last saw her husband Sunday. Suchan's mother also saw her son then.

Arthur Maloney and J. J. Robinette, the lawyers who defended the pair at their trial and appeals both visited their clients Monday. The Supreme Court of Canada refused to hear an appeal, and Monday the justice department rejected a plea to reduce the sentences to life imprisonment.

Both lawyers described Suchan and Jackson as composed and said that in their 45-minute chat the condemned men told jokes of events during their trial. No mention was made of the fate awaiting them.

Jackson told Mr. Maloney he hoped his infant son, only a few months old now, would grow up to be a "healthy and fine man."

DEFENCE INQUIRY

It reported a collapse of security, a carping attitude of officers of a wartime mentality interested much more in speed than in cost, an indifference to administration, weaknesses in the provost corps, the work of detachments, and in security generally.

It gave a vivid picture of the "irregularities" at Petawawa which touched off prosecutions and the inquiry. Most bizarre was the replacing of horses on the payroll of one project and listing them as laborers.

Remedies Being Taken

But the document said the inquiry could find no other extensive irregularities to match those at Petawawa and it said remedies can and are being taken.

The report described the army works services as overwhelmed with work since the start of the post-Korea expansion, badly organized, badly staffed and urgently in need of reorganization. It recommended 44 changes in organization, in security and in other fields.

It overshadowed any other development in the defence story.

At the night sitting LL-Col. Gordon Churchill, ERO, (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) a veteran of both world wars, again raised questions about Canadian casualties in Korea, the supply situation and the war effort.

He said it seemed to him that Canada is "unnecessarily" sacrificing the lives of her soldiers in Korea which could be saved by supplying adequate stocks of munitions.

Wants More Yanks

The Korea-born Winnipeg soldier-member said he doesn't think patrol action is proper strategy for defensive action in Korea. Canadian troops should have more tanks to protect them.

Elsewhere in the general debate, George McIlraith, parliamentary assistant to Trade Minister Howe, said government policy has resulted in a sharp general increase in Canadian trade. It had not lingered in "palsied impotence" as George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, had suggested.

George Nowlan (PC—Annapolis-Kings) took a different view. He said there is gloom among the exporters of Canada because they have lost their markets through government inefficiency.

In the wake of the Currie report there were immediate rumblings from the Opposition, topped by Gen. Pearkes' speech at the night session. He read one part of the report after another and charged that they simply substantiated what his party has been saying.

The Opposition had warned against too-hasty demobilization in 1946 and now the Currie report said the army couldn't cope with the post-Korea explansion because it wasn't big enough.

The Opposition had charged waste, extravagance, improper supervision and the report said inefficiency is a greater menace than dishonesty. This was true in a haste-before-cost mentality in the defence department.

Only a full inquiry could satisfy the suspicion that what was found wrong in one branch of one service may permeate all three forces.

But the most surprising statement came from Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre) who arose with what he described as a copy of the Currie report and said it didn't jibe with the report tabled in the House.

The CCF copy, he said, had come to his group "a few days" ago and there were notable differences—both omissions and alterations—between it and the one Mr. St. Laurent tabled.

To his demand that the government explain how and why the changes came about, Mr. St. Laurent promised a reply but also said there would be an investigation of how the CCF got the report early.

Mr. Knowles declined to tell reporters outside the House how his party got the document. Gen. Pearkes, in his speech, referred to the two documents as the abridged and unabridged Currie reports.

Mr. Drew indicated that his party intends to lay the full blame for the army situation on the defence department and not on the army itself.

The report, in its reference to a serious collapse in security, says "there was little to prevent or to detect the organized plundering of military stores on a systematic scale though apparently comparatively little of it took place."

It recommended a number of measures to tighten security including an enlarged provost corps, the stationing of a Mountie in every large army camp, closer supervision of gate guards and greater barriers to the coming and going

By SAM HUMMERLIN

PONGAM ISLAND, Korea (AP) —American soldiers today told in detail how U. S. and South Korean guards shot and bayonetted to death 94 Communist prisoners of war in quelling an attempted mass breakout by 4,500 fanatical Reds Sunday.

A grim force of 300 guards clustered the muttering thousands in 55 frenzied minutes with machine-guns, rifles, carbines and bayonets.

Two Americans and three South Koreans as well as 118 prisoners were injured.

Ignored Volleys

The captives, locked arm-in-arm fanatically roaring the choruses of Communist songs, ignored volley after volley of close-range fire before they were cowed.

Newspaper men today toured the island and entered the compound where most of the captives died.

Guards made the prisoners, many of them limping and wearing bandages, file into another stockade before the correspondents entered.

Lt.-Col. George P. Miller, boss of the island's 9,200 North Korean captives, said he regretted the deaths but added sternly:

"They brought it on themselves. They tested our strength and lost."

He said the tension mounting on the island before Sunday's outbreak was vanished.

Pongam is a dumbell - shaped island near Koje Island, scene of the first POW riots last February. Both islands are off the southeast coast of Korea.

Would Have Got Loose

Miller said "had I not taken the action, I would have had one-half the prisoners loose on the island and we would have lost many more lives. The hardcore cannot hold determined prisoners."

Miller said he was tipped on the planned outbreak, largely by two notes scribbled by prisoners.

Prisoners in compound "Tom" burst out with Communist songs. That was the starting signal for the outbreak. Five neighboring stockades quickly joined the chorus.

Miller rushed to the scene and shouted "stop." But the Reds kept singing.

They locked arms and jammed three-deep in front of their barracks, set on a rocky terrace cut into the steep hillside.

Ordered Into Compound

Miller ordered one platoon—about 40 men—of U. S. military police service company and one platoon of South Korean soldiers into the compound. Another Rok platoon surrounded the stockade outside the barbed wire.

Miller again yelled "stop."

The Reds answered with a hail of stones, thrown down from the terrace at the guards about 20 feet below.

"It would have been suicide if I had ordered my troops to go up there and break up the body of prisoners," Miller said.

The colonel ordered all men with shotguns to fire one volley into the ranks of the POWs.

Weapons Lifted

"It had no effect," the island commander declared. "The wounded kept right on singing—and the others lifted the wounded as they

23 Homeless By $100,000 Fire at Sarnia

SARNIA (CP)—At least 25 persons were made homeless Monday night as flames raced through the top floor of a three-storey building in the heart of Sarnia's business district.

Damage caused by the fire and by the tons of water poured in by firemen was variously estimated from $80,000 to over $100,000.

Alex Swartz, owner of the Front street building and proprietor of the British Clothing Store on the ground floor would not place an exact figure on his loss.

He indicated, however, his stock alone would run to well over $30,000. Both building and stock were insured, he said.

A few tenants of the eight apartments on second and third floors managed to save some personal effects, but many lost everything but the clothes they escaped in.

The front ranks of prisoners went down. The captives behind them, again yanked up the slumping dead and wounded. The roaring songs went on.

At nearby "Baker" compound other rioting prisoners jammed into the courtyard. Miller said "they were about ready to force the gate or fences."

The hail of bullets ripped into the prisoners and many fell.

Quebec Lawyer Argues Witnesses Are Anti-Religious, Anti-Social

OTTAWA (CP)—A Quebec lawyer argued Monday in the Supreme Court of Canada that the Witnesses of Jehovah are "anti-religious and anti-social."

Ernest Gobout, counsel for Quebec City, said the Witnesses criticize all religions.

"They claim they are the chosen sons of Christ and that their duty is to destroy governments by force," he said.

Mr. Godbout presented his arguments in French during the fifth day of a hearing on the validity of a Quebec City by-law which prohibits distribution of literature without a permit from the chief of police.

W. Glen How of Toronto, counsel for the Witnesses, asked the court to declare the by-law invalid. He also asked the court to declare that the Witnesses form a religious denomination, entitled to the same freedoms as other denominations.

Before the adjournment, Emery Beaulieu of Montreal began presenting argument on behalf of the Quebec attorney-general's department. The department supports the contention of Quebec City that the by-law is valid.

Mr. How, criticized by the court for taking more than four days to present his case, said in concluding remarks that a freedom of worship statute of 1852 guaranteed freedom of religion to the Canadian people.

However, the Quebec by-law prevented exercise of freedom of religion. It prevented Witnesses from distributing bible tracts and other literature.

Mr. Godbout said the Witnesses preached religious and civil revolution.

From a book distributed by the Witnesses, he quoted a statement that the witnesses do not constitute a religion.

No Charge Laid

SARNIA (CP)—Crown Attorney S. A. K. Logan said Monday his office will not lay a charge against Mrs. Ladislav Pilous, recently accused of trying to sell her five-year-old son for $1,000.

He said there still is a possibility the mother could be charged under a section of the Children's Protective Act by the Children's Aid Society.

A. P. Bates, children's aid superintendent, said:

"The case still is under consideration by our office, but I have nothing to say beyond that."

The boy has been placed in a foster home under supervision of the society until the investigation is completed.

The mother denied she had tried to sell the boy and said the accusation arose from a misunderstanding.

PLAN NATIVITY CRIBS

TORONTO (CP)—Three nativity cribs will be erected on the University of Toronto campus, it was announced Saturday. One will appear in the window of the University Bookstore and others in St. Michael's and Trinity College grounds. The cribs are being erected at request of members of the Bring Christ Back to Christmas campaign.

Detroit Man Shot Three Times Near Windsor

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Edgar Fresdo, 36, of Detroit, was shot three times Monday night near a small hotel between Amherstburg and Harrow, about 18 miles south of here.

He was brought to hospital here where authorities said his condition is serious. Police said Fredo was shot in the left cheek, in the left arm and in the neck.

Police said Fredo told them he was shot by a man he knew. They said the two men and another man left Windsor earlier in the evening to go to a party in Harrow.

Japs Probing Spy Ring Report

TOKYO (AP)—A foreign office spokesman said today no lice are investigating reports of an international spy ring in Japan. He acknowledged, however, that unless U. S. secrets are involved, nothing can be done to the spies because Japan has no anti-espionage law.

Japanese newspapers reported, without confirmation, that a member of the Soviet mission here is involved.

Masayoshi Kakitsubo, foreign office spokesman, told a press conference the national rural police have made one arrest—a radio engineer charged with violating the Japanese radio control act by sending coded messages to Vladivostok, Siberia.

Japanese newspapers said the radio-man's arrest revealed the existence of a big spy ring.

Reasonable Doubt of Loyalty Of Career Diplomat Vincent Found, May be Action

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's top loyalty review board has ruled there is reasonable doubt as to the loyalty of career diplomat John Carter Vincent, but the state department kept the way open today to accept or reject its recommendation be be fired.

Some officials speculated that, after discussing the matter with President Truman, probably next week-end, State Secretary Dean Acheson may decide to reopen the whole case and may eventually reinstate Vincent. Acheson is in Paris and there was no official word to support this theory.

The state department announced the review board's action Monday night and said it suspended Vincent Monday and ordered him home from Tangier. He has been minister and diplomatic agent there. Board Clears Others

Simultaneously, the state department announced that the loyalty review board had cleared John Paton Davies Jr., another veteran diplomat and like Vincent a controversial figure for several years, of any reasonable doubt as to his loyalty. Davies is deputy director for political affairs with the U. S. high commission in Germany.

The department, in its announcement of the decision on Vincent, made public a letter to Acheson from board chairman Hiram Bingham. Bingham wrote that the board was not called upon to find that Vincent was disloyal, and did not do so.

But he added, "his conduct in office ... forces us reluctantly to conclude that there is reasonable doubt as to his loyalty ..."

Bingham's letter cited what it termed Vincent's "studied praise" of the Chinese Communists in the early 1940s and his "equally studied criticism of the Chiang Kai-shek government." The U. S. was then supporting Chiang, Bingham added.

And, Bingham said, Vincent had "close association with numerous persons who, he had reason to believe, were either Communists or Communist sympathizers."

Vincent, 53 and a veteran of more than 30 years' government service, has been investigated by various government agencies over several weeks. He has denied Communist affiliations and last February the state department announced it had fully cleared him of loyalty and security charges.

Reverses Finding

The board, after hearing Vincent last September, reversed the state department's previous finding.

The board said that in reaching its conclusion on Vincent, it took into account "without expressly accepting or rejecting" testimony which it attributed to ex-Communist Louis Budenz that Vincent was "under Communist discipline."

At Scene of Sinking Ship in San Francisco Bay

Only the prow remains above the surface of San Francisco Bay, as the Norwegian freight Fernstream sinks, following collision with an Hawaiian freighter at San Francisco, Cal. No lives were lost as all 50 persons aboard the Fernstream, including 42 crewmen and eight passengers were reported by the U.S. coast guard to have been saved. The collision occurred midway between Alcatraz Island and the Golden Gate bridge in heavy fog, blamed as cause of accident. The Hawaiian Rancher suffered some damage but managed to dock under her own power after the crash. — Central Press Canadian.

Safe at last, crewmen of the foundered Fernstream debark from lifeboats at San Francisco pier after collision with freighter from Hawaii. The Norwegian craft sank 26 minutes after she received a gaping hole in her side. Most of the survivors took to lifeboats immediately after crash. A few, however, leaped into fog-shrouded water to be later picked up by coast guard patrol boats. — Central Press Canadian.

Truman Blasts "Mao" At Press Conference

At an extraordinary news conference at the White House in Washington, which he permitted to be filmed and recorded for radio and television broadcasts, President Truman is seen as he denounced President-elect Eisenhower's trip to Korea as "pure demagoguery" and declared he does not believe that General MacArthur has any workable plan for ending the Korean war. He told assembled newsmen that if General MacArthur has any Korean peace plan it is his duty to report it at once to his superior officers in the Pentagon. The president declared he has not asked MacArthur to come to see him, does not intend to, and does not want to see the general. — Central Press Canadian.

Atomic Drama Off Coast of Australia

Vancouver ratepayers have approved a by-law to provide $750,000 for construction of a 36,200-seat stadium, intended primarily for the British Empire Games to be held in Vancouver in 1954. He later announced that he would donate part of his winnings to the Red party and bestow a personal gift on Togliatti. — Central Press Canadian.

Grand Coulee Slows to Trickle

A feeble trickle of water now runs through the sluices of Grand Coulee dam in Washington. Prolonged drought has almost emptied the reservoir back of the dam, which normally releases millions of gallons a minute to make an awe-inspiring sight of foaming, turbulent power. Lack of water means lack of hydro-electric power and many industrial plants dependent on Coulee power, have been forced to shut down. Little Benny's Note Book

I saw pop getting off the bus and started to walk home with him, and a truck driver drove passed eating his lunch out of a paper bag, and he threw away a half of a tomato without looking where it landed, being rite in frunt of pop with a skwush, squerting tomato jooce all up and down one leg of his pants, and pop said, Horse blankets to bits and blast it to blazes, an idiot like that should be permanently put away for mental observation and fizzical incarceration.

G, pop, our Sunday school teecher always tells us to count up to 10 when we start to get mad, before we do anything or even say anything, and he claims we will feel mutch better, I said, and pop said, Thanks for passing on the advice, I'll try it rite now, dont interrupt me while I'm counting.

And he counted 10 like lightning and I said, How did it make you feel, pop?

By golliks there's no comparison, pop said, I have nothing but kind thanks for that tomato herter. He is probably a loyal member of the Amalgamated Cleeners and Dyers, and he is only doing his duty when he provides stains for them to remove. The poor faithful chap cant get mutch exercize riding around flipping tomatoes, so I hope for his sake he'll get a flat tire and every muscel in his body will get a good workout trying to get his truck propped up. Then he'll brake out into a profuse perspiration, which is a fine thing just before a warm shower, but unfortunately he has no shower bath in his truck, so he will be laid up by a severe cold which will give him a wunderful chance to catch up on his reeding, even though his taist in litterture, I am afraid, is deplorably low. Yes, thank you, I feel very virtuous now, pop said.

Being just how he looked.

Economic Progress in Britain Conditioned by New Policies Brought in by Conservatives

Written For The Canadian Press
By GEORGE ANDREMASSON

LONDON (CP)—Economic progress in Great Britain during 1952 was conditioned by the new Conservative government's preference for monetary means of control, the fall of world commodity prices and continued concentration on the defence program.

The trade recession in consumer goods industries noticeable before the end of 1951 deepened early in the year. By June textile production was 30 per cent below the corresponding period in 1951. A sizable improvement did not develop until the last quarter of 1952.

Short-time working rather than unemployment, however, was the consequence. Through unemployment rose from 209,000 in July 1951, to 518,000 in May 1952, the shift of labor into engineering industries prevented serious dislocation. Total industrial production recovered after a spring and early summer decline, but only sufficiently to end the year around the 1951 closing level. Thus 1952 was the first post-war year not to show an appreciable output increase.

Credit Restrictions

Credit tightening by higher interest rates, direct instructions to commercial banks as well as restrictions on instalment buying and other special forms of borrowing soon was making itself felt. But inventory provoked by high prices led to sharp price cuts, especially for durable consumer goods. At the same time the trend of production costs, with prices of most industrial commodities and services, continued upwards. The curve flattened out towards the end of the year.

Gradual lowering of food subsidies, offset by income tax concessions, higher old-age pensions and family allowances, resulted in a further rise in cost of living by eight per cent, accompanied by an average rise in wage rates by six per cent.

Though further import cuts were avoided, the balance of trade improved substantially. Cheaper raw material prices largely accounted for a 19-per-cent decline in imports during the first 10 months, compared with the same period in 1951, while the value, though not the volume, of exports, was fully maintained in face of more competitive world market conditions.

External Trade

By October external trade was favorably in balance so that the whole of the appreciable "invisible exports" was surplus. Also, because of import economies in other sterling countries the drain on gold reserves was arrested, but not until after the end of 1951 total of £254,000,000 had been sliced to £584,000,000 by April 30. At the end of November, however, the reserve had recovered to £677,000,000.

Britain's own external payments were maintained in balance during the year. The fall in trade surplus with the Commonwealth was offset by a shrinking deficit in other directions.

Physical controls were eased as raw material shortages tended to disappear and private trading was encouraged wherever possible.

Government bulk-buying was ended for lead, zinc, softwood and other commodities. Restrictions on private housebuilding and repairs were relaxed.

A more cautious outlook was engendered in industry and commerce by stock depreciation and narrowing of profit margins.

The less favorable profit outlook and higher interest rates for short and medium-term money following a boost in the bank rate from 2½ to 4 per cent in March forestalled any marked recovery in security prices even when the foreign exchange position improved.

The 2½ per cent console fell from 85.6 in October 1951, to a low of 58.4 per cent in July, from which they recovered to 69 by Nov. 30. The yield on this gilt-edged security meanwhile rose from 3.61 per cent, before the government raised the bank rate for the first time in November, 1951, to 4.32 per cent 12 months later.

Back on Broadway Bette Davis Not Too Impressive

By MARK BARRON

NEW YORK (AP) — At long last, and that phrase is the only appropriate one to use in this case, Bette Davis has arrived on Broadway in the starring role of the new musical revue, "Two's Company."

Miss Davis' appearance on the Broadway stage Monday night is her first since her departure 22 years ago to cast her lot with the Hollywood films.

She returns in a song and dance revue that is light, full of Valentine lace and seldom with enough of Miss Davis, even though most of the time she is so suffused with make-up and costume that it is difficult to distinguish her from the props.

Is her major scene she does an imitation of Tallulah Bankhead. It's a night club sketch in which Miss Davis looks remarkably like a twin sister to Miss Bankhead.

Hiram Sherman, David Burns, Nora Kaye and the score by Vernon Duke and Ogden Nash do much to lift this revue out of the ordinary class. But it needs Miss Davis more as a personality than as the character actress she is in too many scenes.

HAWKS COME THROUGH!

Don Barrett's Junior Black Hawks tossed aside the vanished Cobourg Bees threat in rather easy fashion in Bowmanville last night. The hide came through with a 9-3 win to maintain one of the best scoring sprees seen in Junior "B" company in these parts in many a moon. The Hawks have rapped home forty — count 'em—forty goals in their last four appearances as against eleven fired against them. They defeated Lindsay 8-2; Peterborough 13-4; Cobourg 11-3 and Oshawa 9-3 in their last four starts. Not bad in any man's league.

And thirteen of these counters have come from the blazing stick of "Hammerin' Hank" Therrien. M'sieu 'eeni, 'e come frou wid tree more" in Bowmanville last night, and it seems the chappie from Chapleau has hit a real scoring stride.

The Hawks now lead the chase with 16 points for eight wins and two losses with the Peterborough Petes in second spot with 16 points for five and four. Kingston Vics are third with seven points, Lindsay next with six, and then comes Oshawa with five and Cobourg with two.

GOODIES OUT FRONT!

The Kingston Goodyears replaced the Stouffville Clippers at the top of the senior "B" heap last night with a close 7-6 win over the Peterborough Petes up in Pembroke. No details at this writing, but it must have been a real old-fashioned Kingston-Peterborough tilt. And the score denotes added strength on the part of the Pembroke crew. We ignore to have kept pace with the power-adding activities of the Roddenville crew. The Goodies now pace the pack with sixteen points, one in front of the Clippers, two up on Oshawa and four ahead of the Glens and Roys. The Glens take on the Petes here Friday evening in what will be their last appearance until the New Year.

MOIRAS IN ACTION

Bill Spafford's basketball Moiras, at present leading the Bay of Quinte Intermediate League, with two wins and a loss have a brace of tilts scheduled for this week. Tonight they meet the Picton Town team in the collegiate gymnasium here and tomorrow they take on the Picton Army. The Moiras dropped a close one to the fast-travelling Trenton Flyers last week in their first defeat of the season, and they're out to avenge the loss at the expense of the Picton squads. The league is producing some exciting basketball and fans should not miss these tilts. Tonight's game gets under way at 8.30; while tomorrow evening's tilt starts at eight o'clock.

TRY IT, SOMETIME!

Battling the ocean-going "hawse", seaweed, or giant tuna, the Jack Dempseys of the underwater world is not all cakes and ale, even when you're equipped with machine guns and bombs, and a murderous ocean-going yacht, but to tackle a 600-pounder with an axe and a jack-knife from a rowboat even shades the David and Goliath story.

According to a New Yawk outdoor editor, Kiwood Mallock, native of Campobello, New Brunswick, who was one of the heroes of the piece, said: "it was like wrestling with a mad bull."

They should have filmed this show. We've seen movie heroes in south seas pictured yarns, battle bloody, man-eating sharks in a very fare-the-well but this real life murderous drama must have taken the cake.

Mallock and his father found a 600-pound tuna in their weir when they went out to drive herring for bait. They had a lighted net for vision and had begun to dip the herring.

"The tuna," goes the story, "attracted by the light, swung close to the Mallock dory, and threatened to overturn it. Mallock, senior, grabbed an oar and started beating the huge fish about the head. When it appeared to be partly stunned, Kiwood opened an ordinary jack-knife, slipped over the side and started to carve the tuna into manifish steaks.

Then started a terrific battle between the knife-armed fisherman and a wounded tuna. The weier was a scarred battler man but the fight-to-the-death went on. It lasted an hour, and the Mallocks won. They eventually sold the fish to a buyer. Yep that one, if you can.

SHOTS 'N FLASHES!

'Tis said Truman Gibson, International Boxing Club secretary received an offer of $500 from a furnace company for Rocky Marciano's appearance at a company banquet, which he relayed to Al Weill, Rocky's manager. "The date we can't get together on," said Weill, "but they'll have to come up with $1,500." Gibson explained that all they wanted Rocky to do was sit beside the president of the company and would he take $1,000? "Nope," replied Weill, "we want $1,500. $1,000 is our price for vice-president." . . . Here's what "Ole Satch" Page says about that perennial question of his age. When he was in Cleveland in 1948 a judge in California said he was 48. "Says I was 41 seven years ago when he fined me. I can show you a man who says he is over fifty. Everybody's got a different number. They're playing bingo with me." . . . . Hear Bill Turland will coach the Trenton town entry in the Trent Valley loop this season. . . . Manager Teo McKevin took the weekend count from "Kid Flu" and didn't see his Glens in action. And what happens? They come up with the best display of the season. Now he's wondering. . . . a lot of baseball experts across the line figure Allie Reynolds should have gotten that "most valuable player" award instead of Bobbie Shantz. They figure a pitcher who won the fourth straight game for his team was "more valuable" than a hurler who belated his club from sixth to fourth position. . . . A quartet of American Baseball League umpires watched a pro hockey game the other night in Providence. At least the referee had four sympathizers. . . . So you'd like to own a pro hockey club? It takes an average attendance of 9,000 at $1.67 each for the Boston Bruins to break even during a season. In other words, a $15,000 house. . . . More NHL players were born in Winnipeg than any other city, 11 all told. And Pete Babando is the sole American-born player in the NHL this season.

Red Wings, Habs Rudest of Lot In Breaking Up Nice Parties; Canadiens Grab 2nd-Place Tie

MONTREAL (CP)—The National Hockey League boys don't seem to be taking seriously the Christmas spirit.

There's a knock-'em-down-and-drag-'em-out scramble for five of the six positions, and the team standings undergo revision with practically every game.

Detroit Red Wings and Montreal Canadiens were the rudest of the lot last week by breaking up happy hockey parties. The Red Wings politely took over first place. Canadiens unabashedly shoved through from fifth to a second-place tie with the slipping Chicago Black Hawks.

And the Vezina-award minded goalies have turned their private feuding into a bitter dog-fight, right out in the open. Only Sugar Jim Henry of the Boston Bruins showed any respect for the season.

From a distance in the Boston Garden last Thursday night, Henry appeared to be wearing a red suit and looking very comfortable as Detroit took from him 10 goals.

Those goals helped Henry to slip most handily into fifth spot, 0.06 ahead of standing to third and Gerry McNeil of Canadiens. McNeil has the points department Detroit's Gordie Howe widened his margin in the top flight. Red Wing star rigid of four, moved in among the first 10 players.

The official statistics, released today, show Detroit in front by four points. On the games the Red Wings collected five of a possible six points and now have a total of 35.

Canadiens came out of the week with seven of a possible eight points. With 31 they are tied with the Black Hawks who picked up only one point in three games.

Boston Bruins, although collecting three points in as many games slipped off from a third-place tie to fourth spot, only one point behind Canadiens and Hawks. Toronto Maple Leafs, with one point in three ties, fell to fifth place. New York Rangers are still deep in the cellar. They picked up one point in two games.

With Gerry Lindsay, Alex Delvecchio, Metro Prystai and Red Kelly in the first 10 point-getters the Red Wings at the moment are the hottest team in the circuit.

Howe added three goals and two assists during the week for a total 32 points. Five points back at 27 are little Wally Hergesheimer of New York and Lindsay. Harper collected one goal and one assist during the week and Lindsay had two assists.

Ted Kennedy of the Leafs and Maurice Richard of Canadiens follow with 26 points, Kennedy with a one-and-one count for the week and Richard could get only a single assist. Delvecchio is one point back with 25, followed by Prystai with 24.

Red Kelly's two goals and three assists sent him into a tie with Toronto's Sid Smith with 21 points.

Gerry McNeil, with only three goals against him in four games, leads the goalies with a goals-against average of two a game. His margin over Terry Sawchuk of the Red Wings is one for a 2.07 average. Henry, with a 2.92 average a week ago, now has 2.18.

Remember When

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lionel Conacher, one-time "big train" of Canadian sport, was traded 20 years ago today to New York Americans by Pittsburgh Pirates for whom he played his first professional hockey. In an outstanding hockey career he later played for Chicago and Montreal Maroons.

Ezzard Charles TKO's Buford In 7th Round

BOSTON (AP)—Ezzard Charles, former world heavyweight champion, scored a technical knockout over young Frankie Buford of Oakland, Calif., Monday night in 2:13 of the seventh round of their scheduled 10-rounder in Boston Garden.

Charles dropped Buford for a four count with a two-fisted attack to the stomach and then referee Joe Zapustas stopped it after a straight right to the jaw felled Buford for eight in the next round. Charles weighed 187 to Buford's 202.

The 26-year-old Buford—whose most notable ring feat was a decision over Clarence Henry for the California heavyweight title—was on the defensive most of the way, but Charles was unimpressive as he tried to attack from the opening gong.

Charles slammed both hands to Buford's head in the seventh and then shot a smashing straight right that landed flush on the California's jaw.

The gross gate was $13,921 with a net of $9,630.

Moore Believes Title Fight 'Just a Dream'

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Archie Moore has to pinch himself now and then just to believe he's actually getting a crack at Joey Maxim's light heavyweight title here Wednesday night.

"Year after year I went along knowing that I deserved the chance at the title and hoping that I would get it and nothing happened," said Moore in his room at the training camp. "Then all of a sudden I've got it —and it seems so sudden, just like a dream."

Now that he has his opportunity, the husky, 36-year-old Negro intends to make the most of it. He's trained harder and longer for this 15-rounder than for any other scrap in his 16-year pro career.

"I've got the best schedule training and have boxed between 130 and 140 rounds," said Moore. "I'm ready now as I'll ever be and I'm going to take that title. That's what I've been shooting at for years.

"I think I can beat Maxim—I know I can."

Long hailed as the "uncrowned champion" as titleholder after titleholder passed him by for easier opponents, Moore has been set at 3½ as good now and maybe better than ever before.

In the last 3½ years, Moore has lost only once in 88 fights and has scored 19 knockouts. His victims included heavyweight contenders Clarence Henry and Jimmy Bivins.

Pair of Rookies Deadlocked In A.L. Point Race

NEW YORK (CP)—A pair of centres—a rookie and a veteran—share the lead today in the American Hockey League scoring.

Gayle Fielder, St. Louis Flyer, newcomer this year, and George Sullivan of Hershey Bears were deadlocked with 31 points each.

Fielder had 13 goals and 18 assists in 22 games for his club while Sullivan had five goals and 26 assists.

Sullivan's play making efforts gave him the lead in assists.

Marcel Bonin of St. Louis followed the leaders in the point parade with 30 points. Lorne Davis of Buffalo Bisons was next with 29. Three players, Arnie Kullman and Sam Bettio of Hershey and Hildebrand, were tied with 28.

Frank Sullivan of Pittsburgh and Vern Kaiser of Buffalo were tied for penalty honors. Each had a total of 53 minutes made up of 19 minors, a major and a 10-minute misconduct.

Johnny Bower of Cleveland registered his fourth shutout of the season last week and was the leading goalie with a 2.30 goals-against mark.

Reports Say Sugar Ray's Retirement Announcement Just Few Hours Away

NEW YORK (AP)—Sugar Ray Robinson was back in town Monday night from the Boston cabaret floodlights and there were fresh reports that his retirement as middleweight champion is only hours away.

A close friend and adviser said Robinson, 31, has prepared his retirement announcement and is ready to submit it to Abe Greene, commissioner of the National Boxing Association.

"My understanding was that the announcement would be made today and Sugar Ray notified that it should come from Paterson, N.J. where Greene maintains his NBA office," added the source, who asked that he not be identified.

In Paterson, Greene said he had received no word from Robinson and knew of no impending announcement.

Robinson could not be reached for comment.

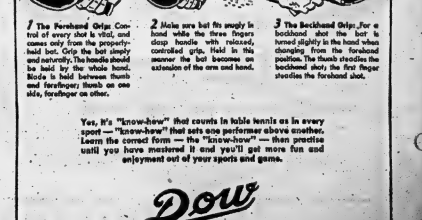
The champion's manager, George Gainford, insists his protege is not planning to quit but is committed—and ready—to meet England's Randy Turpin in a title fight in either London or Dublin in June.



Jack Solomon, London promoter, said Sugar Ray definitely has agreed to meet Turpin and Robinson compounded the confusion by declaring in Boston last week that he will retire "after the Turpin fight."

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!

TABLE TENNIS THE GRIP

1 The Forehand Grip: Control of every shot is vital, and comes only from the properly-held bat. Grip the bat simply and naturally. The handle should be held by the whole hand. Node is held between thumb and forefinger; thumb on one side, forefinger on other.

2 Make sure bat fits snugly in hand while the three fingers drop handle with relaxed, controlled grip. Hold in this manner the bat becomes an extension of the arm and hand.

3 The Backhand Grip: For a backhand shot the bat is turned slightly in the hand when changing from the forehand position. The thumb steadies the backhand shot; the first finger steadies the forehand shot.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in table tennis as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practice until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and game.

'Hammerin' Hank Therrien Gets 3 to Pace 8th Victory; Hawks Widen Lead Over Pack

By JOHN GOODFELLOW

In the first game of the season between Oshawa Bees and the Black Hawks last night at Bees-queen Park, Bees 9-3 in a junior "B" hockey tilt played at the Bowmanville Arena. The victory sent the Hawks farther ahead in the six-team league race.

The Bill Cook-Don Barrett crew was once again paced by Henri Therrien. Hammerin' Hank was better than a four-dollar pistol at he pulled off the hat trick with three goals. He was ably assisted by Pat Gilmour and Tom Paranuik, who each scored twice, and Fred Perlini and Ray Hermiston, who each got single tons. Pat McDonald tallied twice for the losers with the other counter going to Joe Piontek.

Period 2-1 Lead

Bellerville moved into a 2-1 lead in the first period as both teams played sloppy hockey. Gilmour opened the scoring at the 7.37 mark by picking up a pass from Davey Jones and backhanding one past goalie Mike Chirko. After the latter had robbed John Casey twice, Bellerville went two up when Hermiston moved from a loose frozen of the Oshawa cage. Pete Green got an assist on the play.

McDonald cut the score in half by taking a relay from Woodcock and sticking a backhander behind Barclay. Hawks made it 3-1 near the end of the period, Gilmour connecting on passes from Jones and Therrien.

Right after the start of the second canto, Therrien potted a passback from Jones to send the Hawks farther ahead. They kept the pressure on Paranuik finishing it 5-1 off Perlini's rebound. It reached 6-1 as Jacklin passed from behind the net to Perlini and the latter cashed it.

Piontek got the second Oshawa goal on a breakaway from his own blue line. His shot to the corner beat Barclay. The Hawks struck back immediately, Paranuik dribbling one home that had Chirko doing the carioca and it was 7-2.

Picture Deal

Oshawa came out for blood as the third period opened. Barclay made five sparkling saves before McDonald stole the puck at his own blueline and took it down the ice with a drive to the net corner.

Therrien then scored the picture goal of the night at 13.35, dashing the length of the rink to slide the identical puck behind Oshawa netminder Chirko. Stocton drew an assist on the play. The same Mountie-Therrien wound up the scoring three minutes later after Jones had made a beautiful play to set him right in front of Chirko.

Therrien, of course, was a stick-out for the winners. Gilmour played a nice game, as did the always reliable Barclay. The line of Hall, Casey and hermiston was especially effectively both coming and going. McDonald, Zadic and Chirko were the pick of the losers who declared they are expecting more plugging strength shortly.

Summary:

First Period.

Bellerville, Gilmour (Jones) 7.37
Bellerville, Hermiston (Green) 15.20
Oshawa, McDonald (Woodcock) 17.18

Allie Reynolds American League Earned-Run Star

NEW YORK (AP)—Allie Reynolds of the world champion New York Yankees pitching staff climaxed a brilliant season in 1952 by capturing American League earned-run honors, official statistics showed today.

The durable 33-year-old righthander, who won 20 games for the first time in his career, gave up 88 earned runs in 244 innings for a league-leading 3.07 mark. It was the lowest earned-run average since Hal Newhouser, Detroit Tiger hurler posted 1.94.

Unofficial statistics compiled by the Associated Press and released on October also had Allie the top E.R.A. man at 2.07.

Reynolds also paced AL pitchers in strikeouts with 160 and shutout shutouts to share the lead with Mike Garcia of Cleveland.

Bobby Shantz, the league's most valuable player, won the most games, 24. The Philadelphia lefty lost only seven games and his .774 winning percentage put him on top in that department. Bobby was third in the earned-run listings with 3.48. Garcia compiled a 3.77 average.

Cleveland's Bob Lemon, a 22-game winner, hurled the most complete games, 28 and the most innings, 319.

Detroit's Art Houtteman was charged with the most losses, 20. He won eight games.

Share Honors At Dufferin

TORONTO (CP)—Stewart Proximity and Tom C. Grattan shared honors Monday in the featured sixth harness racing event at Dufferin Park. Each won a heat.

Stewart Proximity is owned by A. Devlin of Lake Placid, N.Y., and Tom C. Grattan by Art Balcombe of Ancaster.

Our Victory, owned by A. Giard of St. Hyacinthe, Que., and driven by Leo Pelletier, won both heats of the fifth and secondary feature.

MACKINTOSH TO RANGERS

VANCOUVER (CP)—Ian Mackintosh, high-scoring Vancouver Canucks' forward, has been called up by New York Rangers, club owner Coley Hall announced Monday.

Mackintosh will join George Sedlick of Saskatoon, the Western Hockey League's leading scorer, when the Canucks arrive in the East for games with the Rangers, parent club for both players.

Hall said he expects a replacement from the Rangers, probably Andy Bathgate.

Galt's McBurney Takes Over Top Spot In Junior 'A' League Scoring Race

TORONTO (CP)—The top three spots in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring race have new occupants this week.

Statistics released by the OHA, including games of Dec. 14, show Jim McBurney of Galt Black Hawks leading with 22 goals and 18 assists in 30 games for 40 points. McBurney's 22 goals top the league in scoring.

Orv Tessier, recently traded from Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen to Barrie Flyers, and Wally Maxwell of Toronto Marlboros are in a second-place tie with 47 points each. Both lead all Barrie Flyers but the race last week, has dropped to a fourth-place tie with Murray Costello of Toronto St. Michael's. Each has 44 points.

Toronto Marlboros continued to top the standings, winning three games out of four to boost their lead over last week. Windsor Spitfires vacated the cellar and pulled into a seventh-place tie with Oshawa Generals. Kitchener-Waterloo replaced Windsor in the basement.

Johnny Henderson of Toronto Marlboros continues to lead the goalscoring with a 3.36 average in 27 games. Dennis Riggin of Windsor is second with 3.74 in 23 games while Ed Chadwick of St. Michael's is third. Norm Defelice played his first game for St. Catharines this week and scored a shutout.

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP)—Prize money for the Ontario open golf championship at the Scarlett Woods Golf Club June 25-26 will be $2,500, secretary Harold Banks of the Ontario Golf Association said Monday. Previously prize money amounted to $1,000 at the 6,631 event compared to $750 for first in 1952.

EDMONTON (CP)—Edmonton's Georgie Gross, world's ninth ranking lightweight, will meet Carlos Chaves of Los Angeles here Dec. 26 in an afternoon fight card.

Promoter Jack Berry announced the match Monday night after confirming arrangements to get Chaves to Edmonton and to obtain the Edmonton Gardens for the bout.

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia may have a new horse racetrack operating in 1954. Royal Property Parks Ltd. proposes to build a track and exhibition buildings on 130 acres in suburban Saanich. Ratepayers approved the plan Saturday in a referendum, 2,186 votes to 1,262. The project still requires approval of the Saanich municipal council.

Police Doubt 'Serious Attempt' At Boxing Bribe

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police said Monday they are convinced there was no serious attempt to bribe city boxer Eddie Jones.

Jones reported last week that two men had offered him $300 to "throw" a fight. He was a five to one favorite in the first round of a middleweight fight with Bill Brenner here.

Detectives said they had not located the persons who made the suggestion but were convinced the attempt was "not serious" and not followed up. They were satisfied, however, that someone had spoken to Jones, they said.

Police also said they had been unable to trace the source of a $6 earned run average by Dave Brown, Police Mutual Benefit Association coach, if three of his amateur boxers fought in Japan.

FRANKFORD Bowling League

Frankford—For the first time in several weeks, Monday night at the Frankford Bowling League saw a number of changes in standings. Leading the pack in the league is that Preston Chase's Big Gill, Little Gill, Big Jill, and downed Lloyd Hanna's Robbers for five points, tumbling them into fourth spot. Chase has now jumped from fourth to second with their seven point win over Karl Austin's Curley's Crew, and Rob Arbuckle's rampaging Hoodlums take five from Gib Gilmour's Gib's Gang.

First week ever see Jack's Jokers and the Hopefuls on 1 & 2; Racketeers and Hoodlums on 3 & 4; Gib's Gang and Outlaws on 5 & 6; Curley's Crew and Jill's on 7 & 8. This will be the night of the annual league turkey roll, with a large bird being given away to each of the high ladies' and men's average, and the high team cap. A special prize will also be given away for hidden score.

Individual scores over 67 points; Racketeers 62; Gib's Gang 60; Hoodlums 58; Hopefuls 56; Jack's Jokers 49; Curley's Crew 43; Jets 32;

Division "B" of the league saw no change in standings this week, as Milford Mcaulay's Aristocrats strengthened their hold on first place, by taking five points from Selbourne Sharpe's Kareckes. Bill Reers' Reers' Rattlers baldly blanked Earl Rogers' Merry Men in the other contests.

15 TRAFIC DEATHS

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London's 1952 traffic toll has reached a record of 15 Sunday with the death in hospital of Lillian Pegler, 75, who was struck by a motor car. The city had 14 traffic deaths in 1937 and again in 1950.

The Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

It's Christmas again. And no matter how hard-boiled and impervious to sentiment you may think you are, or as folks may believe you are, and, indeed as perhaps you are, as a general thing, Christmas does get you a bit. It did mine. Christmas does something for a few little nieces and nephews, but no one else—and no partying, and running around to other folks' homes. Christmas at your own place, with a good book, curl up in front of the fire, and relax.

Then the Christmas cards start to come in. You hear from folks that, in many cases, you'd forgotten, from others who form a bond or attachments in your life that, you strangely find, is a great deal stronger than all the anti-Christmas resolutions you'd mentally made. You see the light in a child's eyes as he sees a hungrily licensed Santa Claus, and the glittering array of tempting toys crowded about a giant Santa Claus and, somehow, you remember the last time sleigh-bells across the frozen snow. Or the boys who sing the Christmas carols touch some half-forgotten chord of other days that was buried deep in memory.

And all of a sudden, you realize what you knew all along, that there's a real Santa Claus, a real Christmas for all of us, in the spirit of the season. It's something you can't escape. And when you come right down to it, who wants to? You'll go through with that once resolution, though, to curl up in front of the open fire with a good book. And the book will be Dickens' Christmas Carol, and you'll rejoice in the reformation of Scrooge, in the joys of Tiny Tim, and all the rest of those folks in the grand old Christmas story that never ever wearies, so poignant that it still can bring a lump to the throat of one who has read it from boyhood, which is many years back than he cares to think. And a day when you can make the old wish that never seems to become trite:

A Merry Christmas to everybody

Sightseer, Scribe Ted Schroeder Takes 'Belt' at Former Team-Mate

By GAYLE TALBOT

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Ted Schroeder, out here this time strictly as a sightseer now, a paper expert on the approaching Davis Cup matches, has asked and been granted permission to take a long distance belt at his old cup teammate, Gardnar Mulloy.

Incensed at Mulloy's reported criticism of the makeup of the current U.S. squad, Ted sat down and carefully wrote this out in pencil:

"Gardnar might, I think, be thankful to the organization which gave him many an ungraped opportunity. Failing in this, he might keep his counsel or possibly even show a little sportsmanship by backing his country's team while it is competing abroad."

Having got that down on paper, Schroeder enlarged upon it orally.

"What I mean," he said, "is that this guy has had every chance in the world in the biggest events at Wimbledon, Fforest Hills and elsewhere and yet never once in his life came through when the chips were down. Yet now he has the nerve to criticize players who have gone out and won the big ones."

Mulloy reached the finals of the U.S. championships at Forest Hills last September, where he lost to Australia's Frank Sedgman. Mulloy has been tentatively ranked No. 1 by the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association's rating committee.

It was not reported here that Mulloy made any cracks about Schroeder himself, but Ted obviously remembers criticism he took in other years when he was chosen to play for his country.

Ted has been known to pick up the phone after midnight and argue across country with some long distance party who had wounded him. He pays for such calls, too.

Per will have troubles, real or imaginary, at home, Ted remains possibly the most popular American player ever to visit Australia.

The newspaper for which he is writing a new type article will be really writes it—gave a large party in his honor Monday night.

SEDGMAN MAY GO PRO

MELBOURNE (AP) — Frank Sedgman, the world's top-ranking tennis player, has applied for a tax clearance to travel to America Jan. 2 for the United States, leading credence to reports that the great Aussie player will turn professional, Sedgman, however, said: "It doesn't necessarily mean I am turning pro. I just don't want to comment."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

An upside down bridge rule is not as odd as it looks. It has a practical purpose that could not be plucked out of a rightside up rule. As when responding to a takeout double.

West opened the bidding with a diamond. Your partner in north doubled for takeout. East passed. In response to your partner's request for a bid, decide what you do with this sixth hand:

♠K
♥10 7 6 5
♦3
♣J 9 7654

Ordinarily, rule says to show first the longer of different length biddable suits. But such rule applies in normal situations; that is, where partner is not forced by a signal.

In answer to a forcing signal, special replies are requested. But these, too, are in the form of rule. In this situation your correct first bid is hearts. Not your longer club suit.

When partner doubles for takeout you have a definite first choice. Show him any unbid major suit containing any four cards or more. It need not be biddable. Any four cards in it.

This choice comes before showing an unbid minor suit. Even if the minor is biddable. Even if the minor is stronger. Even if the minor is longer and stronger. Even if the minor is rebiddable.

You heard me right. We are talking of the response to a takeout double. Show first any four card unbid major. Even before showing a biddable or better minor of greater length.

The logic is this: Opponents have opened the bidding. Partner can probably take three tricks or any trump suit you may prefer. At least, this is generally true.

If so, you are not likely to take 11 tricks that game in no minor would need, if there is hope for game by your side if will have to be in a major. Most likely so, anyway.

Put two and two together and make sense.

Major Ownership Of Minor Loops Said 'Unsound'

CINCINNATI (AP) — General Manager Gabe Paul of Cincinnati Reds declared Monday that major league ownership of minor league clubs, "except for operational reasons, is unsound."

Paul made the statement to Reds' stockholders as he reported the Cincinnati club ended the 1952 fiscal year with a net loss of $54,706.20 despite an increase of 15,829 in home attendance.

Mounting operating costs were blamed for the deficit and Paul said the largest increase in expenses was in player development. He reported that the Reds' farm system now holds title to many player contracts as it did a year ago but, he added:

"The ownership of minor league clubs by major league clubs is becoming an increasingly hazardous financial undertaking."

Explaining that the ratio of expenses for most minor league clubs is greater than for major league teams, Paul continued:

"The ownership of minor league clubs, except for operation reasons, is unsound. It is necessary to have one or two ownership clubs in a farm system for operational reasons but, beyond that, the ownership is a distinct hunry as the same benefits can be gained, from working agreements without the possibility of large losses."

The Reds now have working agreements with three clubs and own three outright.

Bowling

MEN'S COMMERCIAL

Four teams went down via the shutout route in the Men's Commercial Bowling League at the Bowl-O-Drome with Gourley's, Bostak's, Star Welding and Pat's Barber Shop taking 7 points from O'Neil Sales, Stephens-Adamson, Almelite & Plastic and Brenton. Gourley's had the high pinfall of 3070.

Ron Saylor had the night's high triple of 867 with Art Whalen coming up with the high single of 405. Whalen's single, it was stated, is the highest rolled in the city thus far this season.

The Scores
Gourley's	3070
O'Neil Sales 0	2522
Bostaks 7	3476
Stephens-Adamson 0	2829
Star Welding 7	3356
Almelite 0	2965
Pat's Barber Shop 7	3295
Bairds Bros. 0	2931
Quinte Distributors 4	3084
Welding Gases 3	3323

Individual Scores: R. Saylor, 861, A. Atkin 742, G. Anderson 732, S. Doran 731, D. Batchelor 723, J. Valcke 721, A. Kelly 716, V. Sagritz 706, M. Callaghan 699, L. Vance 695, G. Bell 694, D. Young 692, H. Deline 681, B. Corbett 670, H. Whittaker 670, J. Fitzgerald 666, S. Laurie 663, R. Brown 660.

Bryan Kelly Verdicts Terry

QUEBEC (CP)—Bryan Kelly of Niagara Falls, Ont., Monday night won a unanimous eight-round decision over Terry of Gaspe in a fast and furious boxing bout here. Kelly weighed 143, Terry 144½.

Kelly went down for a nine-count in the fourth round but came back fast to send his opponent to the canvas for the count of eight in the last round and get the nod from the three judges.

The Cuban won a previous encounter Nov. 3 last with a technical knockout in the sixth round.

1953 Monarch

Styling refinements with a Coronation year theme mark the new, 1953 Monarch passenger automobiles being displayed in Ford-Monarch dealerships from coast to coast. A freshly-designed, massive - appearing grill and bumper combination with sectional windsplits, or vertical bars, spaced across the grill bar, and new bullet-shaped bumper guards distinguish the Monarch's frontal appearance. There is a more lavish use of chrome inside mouldings extending virtually the entire length of the car. Gold finished crowns mounted front and rear add a Coronation flavor as do the crowns centred in the wheel hub caps. All interior fabrics and trim schemes are completely new. Eleven solid exterior colors and 12 two-tone combinations will be available on the four Monarch models, the four-door sedan, two-door sedan, convertible, and Monterey (hard top convertible).

AT THE ROXLE—One of the happiest film-going events of the Twentieth Century—Fox per cent—"The Moral of the Story" is coming to the Roxle Wednesday and Thursday. Frank Lovejoy, Janet Leigh, Richard Carey, Cecil Kellaway and Catharine Craig are starring. Opening Wednesday to the Roxle Theatre.

John L. Sullivan Scores T.K.O. Over Rubicini

TORONTO (CP)—John L. Sullivan of Preston, Lancashire, England, third ranking middleweight of the British Empire, Monday night scored a technical knockout victory over Gus Rubicini of Toronto at 2:35 of the sixth round of a scheduled eight-round bout. Sullivan outweighed his opponent 164¾ to 161¾.

The 10-year-old Briton, still limited to eight-round bouts because of his youth, had little trouble disposing of Rubicini. He threatened to knock him out early with three first-round knockdowns and was in complete command except for the third and fourth rounds. He was leading 3 to 2 on the Canadian Press score card at the end of the fifth.

Gordon Wallace, Brantford middleweight, knocked out Jimmy Burke of Milwaukee, Wis., at 1:33 of the second round of a scheduled 10-round bout. Wallace, who weighed 162¾ against Burke's 158½, opened up in the second round after a cautious opening three minutes. The Canadian connected with a left and right to the head to put Burke on the canvas for an eight-count and polished him off with a hard right to the body.

This was Burke's 29th pro fight and the fourth time he had been knocked out. He won 22 bouts by knockouts and one decision and one draw. Wallace competed for Canada in the 1948 Olympics, turned pro two years ago and has been campaigning mostly in Detroit and Toronto.

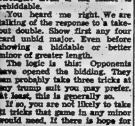
"Ah, youth!" sighed the 75-year-old actor as he reflected on the two glamor girls with whom he is appearing in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."



"I have always made it a habit to watch young people; that's the best way to find out how people are living and thinking," he said.

"And I can't think of any more pleasant work than watching Miss Monroe and Miss Russell. Each possesses sex appeal to a remarkable degree. That is a kind of animal magnetism which is rare in human beings."

"Each has a sense of humor, and that is a valuable attribute in a woman," he said. "Neither has let fame go to her head; they are regular girls. I don't put on airs.

"Miss Russell seems like a very smart woman, she has apparently managed her career intelligently. Marilyn has had less experience in pictures, but she seems eager to learn. She will listen to direction and advice, which is something a lot of newcomers won't do."

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, DEC. 17, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Excellent period for vigorous action, for things requiring delicate handling. Finances can be bettered. But avoid needless sudden decisions.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Have no anxiety this fine planetary day. Menial, physical work, engineering, electronics, research in usual fields sponsored. Don't strain.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—One of your promising days during balance of this month; be sure to make most of it. Every field of endeavor now favored.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Today and remainder of month most encouraging. Put aside nonsense that could hinder you from moving ahead. Blessings!

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—You are in for gains if you show right spirit. You in our fighting forces helped by prayer. Never lose faith in God!

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Authors, journalists, stage, television and radio personnel, scientists among the most honored by today's fine planetary aspects.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Your personal interests, all artistic professions, skilled workers in railroading, engineering, electronics generally favored now in money and domestic matters.

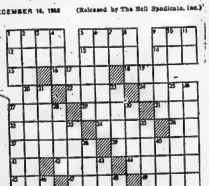
October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Undue aggressiveness won't be necessary to get things done well. Accents freshly beneficial influences. Lucky day.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Favour Jupiter among the planets beneficially aspected. Plan wisely and have tasks properly allocated to save valuable time. Fine for money matters.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Though your Saturn is not strongly aspected, other planets are so benefic you should be able to garner helpful influences and profit thereby.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Uranus advises against sudden, thoughtless promises or action. Heed this influence and you can have a bountiful day.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—You can finish tasks, perhaps start new undertakings depending on your demands and attitude. Have faith, enthusiasm this most promising day.



YOU BORN TODAY: Engaging, vibrant personality; usually generous, charitable and self-reliant. These God-given assets worth developing and using every day. They can bring you much success, inner contentment, worthy friends. Balance of '52, and first three months of '53, especially advantageous.

U.S. Says Further UN Peace Plans Pointless Unless Reds Agree on the POW Issue

By OSGOOD CARUTHERS

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) —The United States says flatly it won't compromise on the issue of prisoner issue and it sees no use pushing any more peace plans through the United Nations unless the Communists agree that POWs won't be forced to go home.

The state department took this determined stand last night in a stiffly - worded communique which also accused the Chinese Reds of rejecting peace in Korea when they turned down the general assembly's plan for breaking the prisoner deadlock nothing up an armistice.

Britain and France also expressed regret that the Communists had closed the door on the UN peace proposal.

A British spokesman said the Red rejection "raises serious problems" which will require careful consideration by Her Majesty's government.

UN delegates were busy studying the 3,000-word rejection note, sent Monday by Chou En-lai, foreign minister, Chou En-lai, to assembly president L. B. Pearson of Canada. It laid down terms for a settlement identical to those proposed in which the 60-country organization overwhelmingly rejected.

The Peiping note "nullified the UN plan, written by India's V. K. Krishna Menon, "illegal" and "unreasonable" and demanded that the assembly rescind it and order the U. S. to resume the negotiations.

The "no compromise" stand taken by the U. S. appeared to cut off any further action in the UN until after the new U. S. administration and its new delegation leaders in the UN are installed.

The American statement laid full responsibility for peace in Korea on the shoulders of the Chinese and North Korean Communists "and their supporters" — a clear reference to the Russians.

Both the British and American governments reaffirmed determination to continue to discharge their responsibilities in Korea.

The United Nations command remains ready to meet again with the Communist negotiators at Panmunjok whenever they accept the proposals contained in the United Nations resolution or any of the other numerous proposals which have been made to them by the United Nations command, or whenever they advance constructive proposals of their own which could lead to an honorable armistice," the U. S. statement said.

"However, there can be no compromise with the basic humanitarian principles contained in the (UN) resolution," it said.

The British statement differed only in wording. It also upheld the principle against forcing prisoners either to return to their Communist homelands or to remain. But it added that the British government will "examine earnestly any way round the deadlock which can lead to an honorable armistice."

The Communists stood firm on demands for an immediate ceasefire, with a political conference session thrashing out the prisoner-of-war problem afterward along with all other problems regarding peace and the reunification of Korea.

Menon, author of the UN resolution, commented, however, that the situation still is "not hopeless."

During their session today foreign ministers of the 14 Allies meeting as the North Atlantic treaty council also were to review global strategy.

It appeared that the naming of Lord Montgomery to the newly-created NATO post was a compromise to end a long Anglo-American feud over who should command Allied sea power in the Mediterranean — might be the major concrete accomplishment of the session.

Defence and finance ministers Monday night were reported to have failed to settle differences over a proposed $628,000,000 program to build new airports, military roads, garrisons and naval facilities next year.

This was the other major item on the council's agenda, but Lord Ismay, NATO secretary-general, told reporters after the meeting that only the more urgent requests might possibly be approved.

It thus seemed likely most of the program, which U. S. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, NATO commander in Europe, and his staff had wanted under way with 1953's first good weather, would be left over for the next council session, in March or April, to thrash out.

Mountbatten's assignment will be to keep open vital Allied sea lanes from Europe to Africa and the Middle and Far East. Warships of Britain's Mediterranean fleet,Italy Greece and Turkey will help him.

The U. S. sea forces will remain under the command of U. S. Admiral Robert B. Carney, Lieut. Mountbatten, Carney — head of the Allied southern - European command — will report directly to

American Public Power Association Favors Project

By JAMES C. MUNN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Public Power Association, describing itself as having a "friendly interest" in New York's application to join with Canada in construction of the St. Lawrence river power project, urged Monday its "earliest possible development."

Ontario has already been designated as the Canadian partner in the project.

Several other diplomatic and military developments were reported by allied officials:

1. Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France urged Anthony Eden, his British counterpart, to arrange closer British association with the projected European army at all levels. He maintained that would encourage the reluctant French and German parliaments to ratify the project.

2. Eden and State Secretary Dean Acheson of the U. S. arranged a lunchtime conference today on the Anglo-Iranian oil dispute and other aspects of Allied policy in the Middle East.

3. France planned to call on the Allied powers for more support in her Indo-Chinese war against the Communist-led Vietminh rebels.

Defence Minister Douglas Abbott of Canada and John Deutsch of the finance department represented Canada at the meeting.

Radin said it was "clearly within the public interest" that marketing of the project power, estimated by engineers at 12,600,000,000 kilowatt hours a year, be done as in the past, about "the most widespread distribution at the lowest possible rates to the ultimate consumer."

Will Continue Hearing

The hearing, which opened Dec. 9, had been expected to end Monday but through inability of some witnesses to be present, will continue today.

R. J. Fletcher, an Aluminum Company of America (Alcoa) hydraulic engineer, testified that an Alcoa subsidiary — St. Lawrence River Power Co. — would lose millions of dollars unless the state's plans for the development are revised.

Immediately, he said, presently diverts 25,000 cubic feet a second of river water the generation of about 500,000" kilowatt hours of power a year for use in Alcoa's aluminum smelting and fabrication works at Massena, N.Y.

Would Block Canal

Under the authority's plan for developing the St. Lawrence hydroelectric potential, the canal which the now diverts the water to the Alcoa subsidiary would be blocked off during the period of construction.

The diversion, he said, would be halted for at least four years before Alcoa could begin receiving power from the proposed project.

He urged the installation of headgates on the canal dike that would permit continued diversion of water during the construction period for the Alcoa generating plant. Not to do so, he said, would be sheer waste.

Army Radiation Detection Men Helping in Work

CHALK RIVER (CP) — Army radiation detection men are helping to locate the excessive radiation which escaped last Friday from the reactor at Canada's big atomic energy plant here. They are also getting some welcome relief, too.

Dr. A. J. Ciprian, in charge of decontamination following Friday's radio-active "burst," said that four officers and eight men of the army's No. 1 radiation detection unit at Kingston arrived Monday.

The men, who were trained here for use in the event of atomic attack on Canada, will map the radiation which fell on the ground after escaping from the reactor's stack.

Flt. Lt. Frederick W. Evans, D.F.C., 32, of Saint John, N.B., and Ottawa has been posted to Korea for a tour of fighter operations with the United States Air Force. A Spitfire pilot during the Second World War, he has been with RCAF No. 421 fighter squadron at Gros Tenquin, France. He will be in Korea approximately six months. — (CP from National Defence.)

Harry Meldrum Moore

"You're not a quitter, are you, Curly?" he asked bravely.

"Well, hardly," Curly said, face reddening, "but what can a fellow do when the cards are stacked against him? In the matter of running for the reeveship, Bill McTaggert has the still vote to a man. He's well known and well liked in the township. What chance would I have against a man like that?"

"Listen, Curly," Halder said, placing a hand on his shoulder, "A council is no bigger than its reeve. If you were reeve, you'd have the whip hand. You'd get what you want and what you want is what everybody, except the McTaggert council, wants. Get it? You must run for reeve! We're all behind you. And you'll lick McTaggert. The Echo cannot come out boldly and back you, but it will support you just the same. They tell me McTaggert is a rotten speaker, but you are good—the best in the north and probably the best in the county. Now here's what you do. Sit down in the quiet of your home, prepare a speech that will knock 'em cold, then leave the rest to me. The Echo will be out in lots of time before election day. So you see, you must run for reeve, Curly. It's what the people expect you to do. And when it is all over, you and Bill McTaggert will end up being just as good friends as you ever were."

During the next few days Curly was asked the same question over and over again, "Are you going to run for reeve?" The answer was always the same, "I don't know." Father Finucane and Mrs. Butler, went to Curly, urging him to stand for election. The business men said they would back him, even though the walks he had been talking about had not yet been built.

At a loss to know what to do, Curly asked Hazel what she would do if she were in his place.

"Put your hand to the plow, and never turn back. That was your promise, Curly," she said, "you must never turn back now. You must run for the reeveship."

Meanwhile Bill McTaggert, through the Echo, stated that he had no intentions of quitting at the end of the year and that he would contest the reeveship with any man in the township.

Finally Curly sat down and prepared his speech. He would run. He would give the people of the united townships something to think about, something to remember. If it was his good fortune to be elected, there would be no stalling in council any more. He would see that things were done. But if he should lose? Well, that was something else, something that might slow him up, but would never stop him now.

On the night of Friday, December 27th, Curly Brown, who had been nominated during the afternoon for both reeve and council, sat on the platform before a capacity crowd, waiting his turn to speak. George Riley, George Kilmer and Peter Dawson had been re-nominated for council and had announced they were in the field. In the event that Curly ran for reeve, another man would have to be nominated later to take his place in council.

Reeve McTaggert gave his annual brief summary of the work of county council, told of his efforts to secure a new constable, division court and clerk, and a justice of the peace. He was pleased to report that Les Barraud, Liberal member for the riding, had acceded to his request and that Don Caswell, townships clerk, had not only been appointed clerk of the new division court but had been created a justice of the peace as well. He went on to say that he was definitely in the field for the reeveship for the tenth consecutive year, and, of course, he solicited the support of every voter in the township.

Curly Brown's address was brief. He started off by saying that two years before he had stood on this same platform and he had made some suggestions that were later twisted into promises which had placed him in a bad light. He would not say that his relations with his fellow-councillors during the past two years had not been harmonious, but he would say they had been most disappointing.

However, like the old year, these things were now in the past. They stood on the threshold of a new year, and it was a year of great promise. And if every man, woman and child in the united townships stood side by side, shoulder to shoulder, to work for the things that were so sorely needed to better that integral part of the county there could be one result. As a chairman of roads and bridges for two years he had tried to make hundreds of dollars do the work of thousands of dollars. In other words, his hands had been tied by lack of money. It was his belief that a higher tax rate was imperative. He said that statute labor should be abolished in the township, that the time had come to hire a township foreman and hire men to do day labor on road improvement.

At this point Curly digressed to the history-making events of the past year—the death of Queen Victoria, the accession of King Edward VII, the part Canada was playing in the Boer War. He hoped that peace would come shortly.

Back to local affairs, he thanked Bill McTaggert for what he had done in regard to judicial appointments. The reeve had made a good start. And Hugh Maitland and Don Caswell should fill their positions with skill and satisfaction. He welcomed to the community that excellent writer, good printer and fine gentleman, Jack Halder. While it was possible that he had the new editor's work always going to be in accord, that should not matter in the long run as long as they were both working for the same thing, the improvement and betterment of the united townships.

In conclusion he said: "I understand my good friend, Bill McTaggert, to say that he is once more in the field for the reeveship, even though I am bold enough to oppose him. Tonight I'm accepting Mr. McTaggert's challenge(Cheers). I'm going to find out by your votes if I'm right about two things: the abolition of statute labor and the necessity of a higher tax rate. I wish my opponent the best of luck. I trust that after the ballots are counted on the night of January 6th, that regardless of who is victor, we will still be able to look each other in the eye and shake hands—the best of friends."

As Curly completed his speech, Mrs. Butler, Father Finucane, Matt Hawkins, Banker Northcott and many others crowded up the hall to shake his hand and wish him well.

But despite the congratulations and the ovation he'd received, Curly was not so sure that he would win that election. He had known of instances where one candidate had received all the applause, while the other had been given the majority of votes. And that could happen again.

A heavy fall of snow ushered in election day. Curly, with his team, was kept busy most of the forenoon, snow-plowing the roads in the village, while out in the country farmers and their horses were doing the same. Curly had been meeting Bill McTaggert regularly, but the approaching election or their respective chances in the battle of ballots had not been referred to.

At home, Hazel was doing her utmost to convince Curly that he stood a good chance to win.

"It's not that I can't take defeat," Curly said soberly, "it's just the knowledge that if I'm defeated, all the things I've worked for and remain to be done, will go by the boards."

"Aw, gee, dad!" Peter spoke up. "You can beat you. I'll bet you a million dollars!"

"A million dollars is a lot of money for you to bet at one time, my son," Curly grinned, but even so, the boy's high-ring of him gave him courage.

The first returns of the election that night gave Brown, 67, McTaggert 2. That was the vote cast in the townships hall. The mill vote came in minutes later, Brown 7, McTaggert 37, Curly puzzled over that. But Hugh Maitland gave the explanation. That morning Bill McTaggert had told his men that there was no strings on their votes, but they must get out and use them.

The return from the nine polls in the townships were slow in coming into the hands of Townships Clerk Don Caswell. But when they did straggle in, the race was to become more and more exciting. One poll was for Brown, the very next one was for McTaggert. As Caswell said: "This is anybody's race. It's the closest race for the reeveship of these townships that I've ever seen."

At long last the returns were in. The crowd pushed up to the front of the hall to hear the result. Curly Brown found himself standing shoulder to shoulder with Bill McTaggert. Neither knew where he stood in the voting in the confusion of careless figuring.

Caswell checked and re-checked his figures, and then he was on his feet.

CNR Conductor Killed, Two Hurt In Train Wreck

Freight Hits Standing Caboose East of Chatham

ST. THOMAS (CP) — One man was killed and two severely injured when a westbound freight train struck a standing caboose a half-mile east of the city limits early today. Nine boxcars were pushed from the track and overturned by the impact.

Missing in the wreckage of the caboose and presumed dead is Frank J. McAteer of St. Thomas, conductor of the standing train. Severely hurt were train firemen Charles Fraser and Harold Clarke.

Railroad authorities said the moving freight on the Canadian National Railways first struck a shunting engine, driving it through the caboose of the standing train and buried boxcars from the track.

Rear Flareback Switch

Authorities said the westbound train ran through an open switch onto a siding. There it smashed into the single engine and standing train.

McAteer's body was found in the wreckage some time after the crash. Fraser, engineer on the shunting engine, William Collins of London, jumped seconds before the impact. He was not hurt. Harold Clarke of St. Thomas, another fireman, suffered shock and injuries.

Trainmen said rails made slippery with heavy frost made it difficult to stop the momentum of the westbound train.

A fire which began in the wreckage of the caboose shortly after the crash was quickly extinguished.

Conductor McAteer met the same fate as his father, Bernard McAteer, a pioneer St. Thomas railroader who was killed in a similar accident years ago.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Burglars broke into the Hollywood aquarium stole a six-foot ancondal water boa snake, an eight-foot indigo snake, a six-foot indigo snake, two five-foot constrictors and a rare Siamese gekko lizard

The gekko, complained owner Sylvester Chichester Lloyd, will be easy to recognize, because it's the only one in captivity here.

"It had a big feet," Lloyd explained. "Its underside is like a venetian blind and it uses suction up and down walls like a venetian blind, in Southeast Asia the gekko is kept in hotel rooms to eat the roaches. It runs around there at night making a noise that sounds like 'gekko, gekko, gekko.'"

Toronto Woman Beaten, Robbed

TORONTO (CP) — Masked prowlers early today beat a 75-year-old woman into unconsciousness and robbed her of $800 she kept in her nightdress.

The victim, Mrs. Molly Katz, a grocery store owner, heard noises in the shop below her living quarters. She went downstairs and was met by two masked men who struck her twice on the head with an iron bar.

Mrs. Katz was knocked out by the blows. When she revived and tried to call police she found the telephone wires cut. Bleeding from a cut on the head, she ran outside and shouted for help. A passerby called police and Mrs. Katz was taken to hospital. Her condition is serious.

The thieves apparently were looking for two cigar boxes in which Mrs. Katz normally kept money, when she came downstairs

Five Cars Hit In Wild Chase

TORONTO (CP)—A chase which sent one man to hospital and caused damage to five cars resulted Tuesday night when a woman was reported to have been kidnapped, thrown from a car in central Toronto.

A passing motorist told police he saw Theresa Powers fall from a car which turned into the path of a vehicle driven by Verdan la Fortune. La Fortune swerved to avoid but lost it. It was reported again it hit two parked cars and then met a taxi into a passing truck.

Robert Lilley, 23, of Toronto, was charged with driving while his hospital authorities said his injuries and those of Miss Powers were not serious.

APPOINTED DIRECTOR

MONTREAL (CP) — Rev. Dr. G. Ar Lulle or Toronto, has been appointed director of the United Church Observer every family plan, Rev. C. H. Dickinson of Toronto, book steward, announced today.

He will have the task of stepping up circulation of the United Church Observer from 30,000 to 300,000 copies in two years to reach every family of the United Church in Canada.

Dr. Lil.le has been editor-in-chief of the United Church's Sunday School publications for 30 years.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis— Stashine and temperatures near the 45-degree mark continue to favor southern Ontario. Even in the north despite cloudy skies, temperatures continue above normal for the season. Thursday's prospects are for little change but a slow cold front is easing weather appears evident from latest weather charts.

TITO BREAKS OFF RELATIONS WITH THE HOLY SEE

Belgrade Not Happy Over Choice of Cardinal

BELGRADE (AP) — Premier Tito's government today broke off diplomatic relations with the Vatican today as a follow-up to the naming of Archbishop Aloysius Stepinac to the College of Cardinals.

Alec Stefan Fisher, Britain's minister, informed a Vatican diplomat, Msgr. Silvio di Oddi, of the action. Monsignor di Oddi said he had no comment. Fisher has been carrying on Britain's affairs here in the absence of the American Archbishop Joseph P. Hurley, the Vatican minister to Belgrade.

Marshal Tito, in a speech Tuesday to workers in a factory near Belgrade, accused the Vatican of "open hostility" to Yugoslavia. Tito also threatened to call off a visit planned to London, because of British charges of religious persecution here.

Touched off by Papers

The furor was touched off by British newspaper reports quoting Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, Britain's archbishop of Canterbury, as saying that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden had agreed to ease the ban on religious persecution when the Belgrade visit was made in early March.

Tito, speaking before a crowd of about 15,000 in a small factory town Tuesday night, said that the "open hostility" of the Vatican were inspired by the Vatican. He said he would not go to British soil unless at least half the British people want him to come.

"I am not going to England to make concessions," he said. "Churchill is not my discussion of our internal affairs."

Patriarch Asks Warning

Vincentije Prodanov, patriarch of the Serbian Orthodox Church, added his warning against foreign interference in letters sent to two Belgrade newspapers, Borba and Politika.

The Yugoslav people are free to worship where they please, Prodanov wrote, but "our friends abroad can help us best by leaving us in peace and refraining in a hostile manner our relations with the church."

The Belgrade protest over Pope's nomination of Archbishop Aloysius Stepinac as a cardinal and declaration ceremonies scheduled for the day were permitted to seven even as an Italian church feast day.

Stepinac was conditionally released from prison in December last year after serving five years of a 16-year sentence on a charge of collaborating with the Germans. He is not permitted to leave the small parish in which he now lives.

ASSAULT CHARGE

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—Police booked Angus MacDougall, 42, today on a charge of assault occasioning bodily harm. They said he inflicted bruises and cuts on an eight-year-old daughter and a six-year-old son and broke the leg of a four-year-old son.

GUILTY OF THEFT

BRANTFORD (CP) — Carl Miller of Woodstock was today pleaded guilty to car theft. He was remanded to Feb. 3 for sentence.

Fletcher Wilson of Paris, Ont., who was charged with receiving, said it had not been damaged "except that the gas tank was nearly empty."

Ships Buffeted, Some Grounded As 100-Mile Gale Hits British Coast

LONDON (AP) — The crack new American liner United States was grounded after shipping lines imperiled today by furious winds buffeting the British Isles. There were reports of gales of over 100 miles an hour.

The United States had just pulled away from the Southampton dock on her maiden voyage to New York when a gale caught her broadside and drove her back to the pier.

The port side of the ship's bridge was damaged in between two high docks side cranes denting the bridge work and scraping paint off the observation deck.

The liner quickly worked loose and tugs resumed trying to get her out to sea After an hour of tricky manoeuvring in the gale - force gusts, it was decided to wait until the wind died down. The liner was tied up at dockside and the passengers aboard were told that the delay might be a week.

The 5-636-ton Swedish vessel Lapland radioed today she had picked up six of the crew of the 247-ton Dutch ship Spica. They had drifted all night in open lifeboat after their boat sank 180 miles east of Aberdeen.

Lifeboats and tugs rushed to Lamlash, Isle of Arran, off the west coast of Scotland, where the gale drove the 1,837-ton Finnish ship Kilmun ashore. The ship was refloated at midday.

Another victim of the gale was the 1,600-ton Estonian trawler Keelsegsburg, driven aground at Keso, in the Baltic Sea, early today. Three men were rescued by breeches buoy.

Road and rail services in Denmark were dislocated. Torrential rain over Paris and most of France flooded the Seronne river in the southwest, threatening the town of Bordeaux. Livestock was the worst

U.S. Grand Jury Indictment Charges Far East Specialist Lied About Red Associations

WASHINGTON (AP)—Owen Lattimore will get a chance to reply formally Friday to an indictment charging that he lied under oath when he said he had never been a sympathizer or promoter of communism or Red interests.

Lattimore has said "I am, of course, innocent," of the charges in the indictment, returned late Tuesday by a federal grand jury here. He is the controversial Far East affairs specialist and occasional state department consultant often accused by Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wis.).

Cite Seven Points

The indictment accused Lattimore of perjury in giving testimony during his testimony before the Senate internal security sub-committee last spring. The indictment termed all seven points "material."

Lattimore will be arraigned Friday and trial date may be set then.

"Pure nonsense," replied Lattimore, 52-year-old director of the Walter Hines Page school of International affairs at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

The university president, Dr. Detlev Bronk, announced that Lattimore has been given a leave of absence, with pay, "until a federal court shall have passed upon the charges."

Senator Arthur Watkins (Rep. Utah) commented that Lattimore's indictment "vindicated the judgment" of the internal security subcommittee, of which he is a member.

The sub-committee recommended last July that the justice department lay before a grand jury the question of whether Lattimore committed perjury.

Head of Institute

The seven-count indictment grew out of Lattimore's testimony before the sub-committee during its long investigation of the Institute of Pacific Relations, privately-financed research organization.

The sub-committee said Latti more "is the prominent figure in IPR affairs, "was, from some time beginning in the 1930s, a conscious articulate instrument of the Soviet conspiracy."

Pending his innocence, Lattimore said:

"That innocence should have to be so long defended against such charges is unbelievable to me. I am subjected to for three years, is something that can be better commented on by others than by myself. . ."

Received Gift

A man approached him, asked for and received a lift. After the passenger had started the car, the man pulled a gun and told him he was going to rob the bank.

When they drove back at the bank a second time, after a first visit to get cash for the gunman, a number of persons on the street, the bandit fired one shot to intimidate the manager and took the money.

"We entered the bank," the manager said, "and he ordered me to unlock the vault."

The bandit said he was unlocking the outer door of the vault when the bank accountant, Donald Marx, and a friend, seeing the front door open, came in to investigate.

Wounded Manager

"Put 'em high, the gunman shouted as he ordered Hellyer to front of the building. He then fired, wounding the manager, and fled. Two hours later, a man driving away from this Caribou cattle town, Quesnel, picked up a hitchhiker man, leaving a clear trail as he dashed through a fresh fall of snow, was arrested and told to stay in Quesnel.

When the desperado opened fire, police retaliated. He fell with a bullet in his chest.

Eight Bags of Canadian Mail To Korea Lost, Commonwealth Plane Jettisons Cargo En Route

OTTAWA (CP) — Eight bags of Christmas "mail" to Canadian soldiers in Korea have been lost or dumped between Japan and Korea by transport passengers in a Commonwealth plane.

The post office department announced Tuesday that officials of Canadian Pacific Airlines were in charge Jettisoned by the plane, flying to Commonwealth divisional headquarters in Korea.

One of the Canadian bags was recovered and a search is being made for the others but there is little prospect of that. Parcels are lost, the post office said.

It was understood the mishap occurred Nov. 27 when the DC-6 aircraft, with both passengers and cargo aboard, had trouble maintaining altitude after the take-off in Japan.

Decided to Dump Mail

Rather than risk lives, the pilot decided to dump the heaviest freight. Some of the bags dropped on land and others in the Japanese Sea. The lightest were dropped over Korea safely.

A red Christmas was indicated for some of Canada's 25th brigade in Korea. Postal authorities believe the bags contained a big proportion of first-class Christmas mail.

The letters were those mailed in Canada in time to reach the army post office in Korea by Dec. 15 or about Nov. 22, the department said. It was the deadline for Christmas mail for the troops since the Korean war began some 30 months ago.

Maybe $5,000 Lost

Postal authorities were unsure how many Christmas parcels there were in the lost bags. A mailbag in Canada normally carries about 2,000 letters and on that basis the loss could be about 25,000 letters or small packages.

Authorities suggested some of the lost mail may be recovered, as was the case in some Christmas mishaps during the Second World War. That they added that Canadians who sent letters to soldiers in Korea sometimes may get them delivered after the deadline.

TWO DIE IN CRASH

STONEHAM, Que. (CP)—Two men were killed Tuesday when their delivery truck crashed head on into a bus in this small town, 20 miles north of Quebec City. The dead were identified as Harold McKee of Valcartier, Que., and Albert Bourgoin, Quebec, owner of the truck. No one was injured in the bus, police said.

Bus Into River, Stops Short Of Niagara Gorge

William Ackroyd kicked out the windshield to free the passengers when his vehicle, previously damaged in a crash in Canada Coach Line Bus, went out of control on the Niagara parkway, smashed into a tree, rolled on its side and slammed into three feet of water, jamming the emergency exit door on the under side.

"Everyone forgot the children and were screaming and shouting," said a passenger, Mrs. Yvonne Ackroyd of Toronto. "Then the bus driver smashed the windshield they were all scrambling over each other to get out."

Another eight yards from where the bus stopped, the water drops to a depth of 35 feet.

The driver and passengers were slightly injured. The bus was eastbound from Buffalo to Toronto.

Six Children Burn to Death In Arkansas

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Six children were burned to death and their parents and relatives were severely burned after an explosion and fire destroyed their three-room house early today.

The dead, children of Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Bryant, are Ruth Ann, 9; Patsy, 8; Billie, 6; Ronnie, 4; Jimmy, 3 months.

Deputy sheriff Johnny Hardin said the gas explosion apparently occurred when the father used kerosene to start a fire.

POLIO CAMPAIGN

TORONTO (CP) — A 28-day campaign to raise $200,000 for 1953 operations will be launched January 5 by the Ontario chapter of the Canadian Foundation for Poliomyelitis.

Most of the money collected will be used to set up a polio treatment centre where victims of the disease may get therapeutic treatment.

GUNMAN SHOT, BANK MANAGER HURT IN HOLD-UP

Subdued by Posse's Gumfire After Chase

WILLIAMS LAKE, B. C. (CP)—Formal charges are expected to be laid today against a man RCMP say wounded a bank manager in a robbery attempt and was subdued by a posse's gunfire after a chase into the wilds.

Both the suspect and his alleged victim are recovering in hospital here. A slug tore into the alleged desperado's chest and Leonard Hellyer, manager of the Williams Lake branch of the Bank of Commerce, suffered a flesh wound in the thigh.

RCMP said placing of formal charges was delayed by the problem of identifying the man in custody. They said he was carrying another man's papers, but they expect to find out shortly through fingerprints who he is.

No Explanation

Mr. St. Laurent said the deputy minister had no discussions with the Currie royal commission on the wording on that page and that "I have no explanation" of the alleged insertion in the last department.

He was asked whether Lt-Gen. G. G. Simonds, chief of the general staff, saw the draft copy and said he doesn't know but will inquire.

Mr. St. Laurent went on to say that it should be noted that the period covered by the report was that during a time when Gen. Simonds was not responsible. Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes then was chief of the general staff.

It was a period when Korea and Atlantic Pact commitments kept Gen. Foulkes out of the country a good deal of the time, and it was eventually decided to make him chairman of the chiefs of staff and let him concentrate on international matters.

As soon as Mr. St. Laurent called on the CCF to explain how it came that a statement by a party called a copy of the Currie report. He said the government intended to make inquiries to try to find out how this happened but that the prime clear the matter up much more quickly.

C.C.F. Answer Available

Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre), who first exposed the fact the CCF had in which there was that tabled, said he would discuss the question with his leader, M. J. Coldwell, "as soon as he returns."

Mr. St. Laurent said he is curious about when the final copy of the Currie report was completed and signed because it was dated Nov 28 but didn't come out of the department until Dec. 8. However, he felt it would "be improper for me to discuss the matter up with Mr. Currie because "I don't want to interfere" in any way.

It was Mr. Knowles who asked whether it is customary to refer

Presidents Will Meet Leaders On Thursday

MONTREAL (CP) — The presidents of the two major railways and the chief executive officers of leaders Thursday in connection with a current series of negotiations.

A spokesman for the companies said the meeting is at the request of Frank Hall, general chairman of the negotiating committee for the 17 brotherhoods involved in the negotiations.

The presidents—Donald Gordon of Canadian National Railways and Sir Edward Beatty of Canadian Pacific Railway — will meet in the CPR's board room with Mr. Hall and a couple of other labor representatives.

Discontent, Rebellion Admitted By Red Chief of Czechoslovakia

VIENNA (AP)—Czechoslovakia's premier admitted today there is a "discontent and rebellion" in the country, and indicated that the Communist government has been taken aback to bring popular defiance under control.

The admission was published in Rude Pravo, official Czechoslovak Communist newspaper. Premier Antonin Zapotocky was quoted as blaming the rebellion on shortages of food and goods.

The Communist president, Klement Gottwald, earlier admitted that the production of milk, eggs and farm goods in Czechoslovakia has fallen lower than it was in 1947, before the Communists seized power.

The admissions lent weight to Western reports that the Soviet Union's industrial demands on Czechoslovakia have been severely disrupting industrial and production chaotic conditions. The production of heavy industry goods for Russia has cost the satellite country heavily, pushing down its former high standard of living. There have been reports of open "hunger demonstrations" in defiance of Communist police.

Zapotocky's admission came in an address to miners in Kladno, 15 miles west.

"People complain among other things that they cannot get coal for the winter and that their food rations are insufficient," he told the people with coal that is required for our industrial needs. We know about the shortage of thousands of tons of coal.

"Among the discontent there is discontent and rebellion, but against this rebellion there is no help. It can only be eliminated by fulfillment of the plan. . .

"People say that although we have done away with capitalists and landowners we still reap profits for the state through the exploitation of human labor and that there is no difference.

St. Laurent Gives House Changes Made In Report

Expresses Surprise Draft Handed Out in Advance

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent disclosed today that an advance draft copy of the Currie report was handed to the defence department and that some changes suggested there were incorporated in the final report.

He expressed surprise that the Civil Service accounting firm of Montreal had taken this step but said it was done simply to make sure that the facts were right in view of criminal proceedings arising from the Camp Petawawa thefts.

He read into the Commons record a series of changes suggested by the department's deputy minister, C. M. Drury, and said some were accepted by the Currie firm and some weren't.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, pointed out that Mr. St. Laurent had not mentioned one change which appeared in a copy of the report which the CCF recently produced in the House.

In the CCF copy of the report, there was criticism of people "at or near the top" in the defence department for inefficiency in administration and a haste-before-cast psychology. In the report tabled in the House, the reference was to "higher-ups."

Minister Is Sentenced

BELGRADE (AP) — Djafer Jodra, a former minister of the Iranian provincial government, Tuesday was sentenced to 25 years in prison on charges of conspiring with the Russian-led Cominform.

Endicott Goes To Bat Again For Uncle Joe

VIENNA, (Reuters) — Jas. G. Endicott, president of the Canadian peace council, today told the Communist-sponsored Vienna peace congress that Mau Mau terrorists in Kenya colony have more right to be there than Britons.

"I don't see why we consider the Mau Mau with their butcher knives to be terrorists and the English with their tommy guns not," he said.

"Anyway, the Mau Mau have more right to be in Kenya than any English lord or duke."

MINISTER IS SENTENCED

advance reports of this kind to the government department under investigation.

Mr. St. Laurent said he couldn't say. He had never been an investigator. But he was surprised to find that it had been done in this case. It was a consequence of the fact that much of the factual material the Currie representatives had come from government sources. It was not illogical that they would want to make a last check of them before closing out the probe.

OTTAWA (CP)—A storm of parliamentary condemnation has swept down on the cabinet as result of the Currie report.

Dipping deep into its spectacular findings, one opposition member after another has charged across the floor of the Commons Tuesday and said the cabinet and only the cabinet can clear the responsibility. The report said there was a general breakdown in one branch of government and made other sweeping allegations.

The Progressive Conservatives demanded the resignation of Defence Minister Claxton and called for a full-scale inquiry into the entire defence department. A CCF member used the report as a springboard for an attack on early election.

Claxton May Return

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said he could not "lift the roof off" the scalp, said "perhaps there are others who can do that" Mr. Low and advised the government to "crack down hard" on those responsible for the frauds discovered, including people "at the top."

The cabinet decided Minister Garson in at night to urge members to reserve judgment until the Commons defence expenditures committee has had a chance to make a full study and investigation of the report. Acting Defence Minister Claxton expected to supplement his statement today.

SIX DIRECTORS ELECTED BY C. OF C.

Results of the final ballot for the election of six directors for the Chamber of Commerce were announced today by President John Buchan. The six directors were chosen from among 13 of the highest on the primary ballot and will serve for a two-year term with six elected last year.

The newly-elected directors are: E. P. Bernstein, C. M. Cawker, Q. H. Cook, G. A. Freeman, Malcolm Robb and J. N. Vanover. The directors will elect a president from among their number.

Fireman Frees Locked-in Girl

Getting locked in the bathroom may strike the average person as being a bit amusing but it is no fun when it happens to a three-year-old girl and firemen have to chawl in through the window to free her.

Just this happened this morning to a young Goldale Road miss who accidentally locked herself in the bathroom. The mother tried every conceivable trick to get the door open without success. Finally as a last resort she calle the fire department. One of the members went through the bathroom window and unlocked the door from the inside.

Consider Two-a-Day Mail Deliveries

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Côté said today the possibility of restoration of two-a-day mail deliveries is "still under consideration" by the department.

The minister made the statement in reply to a question by G. R. Prud'homme (CCF—Parkdale-West).

Mail deliveries were reduced to one-a-day by the government as an economy measure at the last session of Parliament.

Three Days Overdue

WINNIPEG (CP) — A light aircraft carrying a bush pilot on a short flight in the Northwest Territories Tuesday night was reported three days overdue as its blizzard-swept destination, 275 miles northwest of Churchill, Man.

The RCAF said a search will be launched as soon as weather clears enough to permit planes to land at Churchill.

Tabernacle Men's Club Appoints 1953 Officers

The regular monthly supper meeting of Tabernacle Men's Club was held in the church auditorium with the president in the speaker of the evening being Rev. R. W. T. Middleton of the Bayside United Church.

Mr. Middleton, who was introduced by Rev. Ray Rowley, chose as his subject "Christmas" and he recounted many incidents to prove that the proper "stance" had done wonderful things. He said that "you don't stand for something you will fall for anything."

Mr. A. D. Archibald thanked the speaker.

Officers Elected

That being the last meeting of the year, the election of officers took place, with the Rev Ray Rowley conducting the election. Following are the officers for 1953.

President — W. Poulton; vice-president — E Schlievert; secretary-treasurer — A. Firth; entertainment committee — Lee Field, A. Nayler, R. Irwin, with Mr. Field as chairman; visiting committee — R. Goodfellow, A. D. Archibald and R. L. Johnston.

The retiring president, A. Mulvey, thanked the club for the splendid support that had been given during 1952.

President-elect Boulton asked all members to bring along a new member to the January meeting.

Boys Forced To Pay for Trees Cut in Lot

With a number of Christmas trees being offered for sale on the market square, on street corners and even being peddled from door to door, it would hardly seem necessary that people would have to resort to theft to obtain their Yuletide tree.

Such seems the case, however, with two reports of Christmas trees thefts being heard this week.

During the week-end a West Hill woman said an ornamental spruce had been cut from her front lawn, while a Sidney township farmer claims tree thieves raided his two acre reforestation plot.

But they didn't get away. Horace Knight, 4th concession, Sidney township, said he heard the sound of chopping coming from his nearby spruce plot. He investigated just in time to catch several boys all with young trees.

Six Mentioned For Wardenship Hastings County

The names of at least six county councillors are being mentioned as aspirants for the wardenship of Hastings County for 1953.

The six reported as being interested in the coming election for the highest county honors are Reeve Jack Kincaid of Sidney village; Reeve Gordon Tyron of Bancroft; Reeve Tracey Adams of Dungannon; Reeve Verney Heath of Rawdon; Reeve James Sprackett of Tudor and Cashel and Reeve T. C. Graham of Tweed village.

All of the six councillors with the exception of Reeve Heath have been re-elected by the respective municipalities for another term. Nominations in Rawdon township are not until late in December.

Motorists Must Show More Co-operation With Reels Going To Fires Says Chief Vance

Failure of motorists to show co-operation in clearing the way for the fire reels when they are racing to a fire with the sirens sounding will bring court summonses, Police Chief Walter Fire-hearn warned today.

The police chief noted that in the past there have been instances where cars raced in the scene of the fire by following the fire reels. Also firemen had been delayed in reaching the scene of a fire through motorists failing to clear the way for the fire engines.

"Traffic regulations say that motorists must not follow a fire engine within a distance of 500 feet, and that on the approach of a fire engine with its siren sounding the motorist must pull to a standstill as near the curb as possible and clear of intersections," he said.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance supported the police chief's claim that there had been many violations of the traffic act by motorists where fire engines were concerned.

"Lately there have been several instances of motorists failing to clear the way for the fire reels," he said. "Under traffic regulations offending motorists can be summoned into court."

The fire chief went on to say that because of motorists failing to clear the way there had been many near accidents while firemen were answering fire alarms.

Police Chief Probert summed up the matter up this way: "We feel that motorists should show a bit more co-operation when fire reels are concerned. If they don't, traffic summons will result."

Pup in Pound To Become Pet Of Little Boy

A small pup, which recently wound up in the brig will wind up under a little boy's Christmas tree on December 25th., an official at the local dog pound informed The Ontario Intelligencer today.

The pup, described as part Boston bull terrier and part something else, was selected by a Belleville woman, who wants a pet for her son. Thus the only long walk the reprieved canine will take will be a stroll down the street with his new master.

Three other dogs which may not be as lucky, are also in the pound. One is a female cocker spaniel, another a terrier pup, and the third a little fellow of doubtful ancestry.

Dogs which have been picked up are usually kept 72 hours before being destroyed. Some people, desirous of buying dogs as Christmas presents, often visit the pound this time of year to make a selection, the official explained.

A PRESENTATION

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Mayor Arthur J. Reaume Tuesday mailed a letter to Princess Margaret inviting her to make Windsor a major stop if she visits Canada in 1954. The letter mentioned rumors that the Princess might make such a trip and said that Windsor will celebrate its 100th anniversary that year.

Outline of Man's Development Told to Kiwanis

"I never cease to be amazed at the obvious indifference of people today to what is happening in the world around them or what is going to happen," Mrs. Robert Lee Moffett, lecturer and educationalist told members of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville and Quinte at a Tuesday luncheon.

Commenting on science and the world today, she said, "Now or all times, is the period when we need the wisdom and the problems of the present and of the problems yet to come. Right in World One facing a critical situation and this is the time to awaken to our realization."

Great Developments Predicted

"The study of science," continued the speaker, "has become the study of possibles and not the improbables. It was not always so," she added. "And with these studies the new trend to be bridged is spread into a great gulf, for science is fast beginning to realize new definitions for time, space, light and life. With this new trend in the field of science great developments are coming about."

"With every new discovery and new invention, there are going to be requirements for new skills and new efforts and a greater degree of thinking is necessary."

The speaker broke down history and the future into various phases or periods, as she labelled them. "First of all came the cave man, the first period. As he progressed with his weapons, beginning with his club, a protection against man or animal, and then moved to the spear, he discovered it required a greater skill to operate the bow and arrow and the spear than it had to use his club. However, he found he could derive infinite greater damage with these newer weapons at less risk to himself. The second period, empire building, came about when man discovered he could do still greater things when he banded together with other men. His found safety in numbers and very often a satisfactory conclusion to his endeavors."

"There were other periods in history, the world wars, the arms-lifting periods and those yet to come. If man would only learn there is power in unity. Let him look forward, not to a United States of America, nor indeed to a United States of Europe, but rather, to a United States of the World," the speaker concluded.

Mrs. Moffett was introduced by S. C. Moon and thanks were expressed by George Currie.

Christmas 'Rush' For Railways In Full Swing

Today inaugurates the annual Christmas 'rush' for the railways. From now until the first week in January the "iron horses" will roar over tracks carrying near record loads of mail, passengers and freight.

Ushering in the Christmas rush from the passenger point of view, will be the exodus of school and college students. Queen's University, Kingston, and the OSD here send large quotas of students home for the holidays.

Extra passenger cars were placed in service today, CNR officials said, and will continue in use until the holidays are over.

Weather may have some effect on railroad transportation. A "green" Christmas would alleviate congestion somewhat, due to travellers using motor vehicles, but if storms bring snow-packed highways, people will turn to the railway for their holiday traveling facilities.

The body will arrive midnight, Wednesday, and rest at the Corrigan and O'Gara Funeral Home, 352 Front Street, where relatives and friends may call and from St. Michael's Church for the funeral service on Friday, at 9:30 a.m. Interment family plot, St. James Cemetery. D16-21

IN MEMORIAM

WAGAR. — In sacred memory of a dearly loved husband and companion, Robert Wagar, who was suddenly taken December 17, 1951. I am lonely without you Bob
I miss you more each day.
Sometimes I feel I cannot bear
The heartache and the pain
My heart still aches with sadness,
And will do so again.
God knows how much I miss you,
And think of you each day
—Still mourned, still missed, still loved, Ruth. D17

WAGAR. — In loving remembrance of our dear dad, Robert Leslie Wagar, who passed away so suddenly December 17, 1951.
We lost a dad with a heart of gold
The best anyone could hold
And with these
Without farewell he fell asleep,
Leaving memories we hold so dear to keep.
We have lost but God has gained.
—never remembered by sons Gerry and Lynn. D17

WAGAR. — In sad and loving memory of our dear dad, Robert L. Wagar, December 17, 1951, so suddenly taken from us.
Please God forgive our silent tear,
And the fervent wish that our dad was here.
Others were taken, yes we know,
But he was special to us who him so.
—Dearly loved and sadly missed by Jack Betty and Jackie. D17

TORONTO STOCKS

Western oils recovered from early weakness as Britalta and albermont gained. Mtc-Continent and Roxana traded actively for small gains while Western Leaseholds slipped. A list of small losers outnumbered gains, but leading issues rose.

Industrials traded lightly with manufacturing companies, miscellaneous issues and utilities leading the upward groups slipped in light trading. Powell Rouyn gained strength in junion while New Dickenson traded lower. Bevcourt and Heath, both prospects, dropped pennies. Ventures led the holding companies gains.

Higher-priced base metals mixed and others followed. United Asbestos and Osisko made good gains in active trading. Rztella and Selikirkmo also added pennies but East Sullivan slipped.

PRODUCE MARKET

Prices advanced on grade A large at the egg market while other grades were steady. Quotations for graded eggs in fibre cases were: A large 43; A medium 36-37; A small 30-31; grade B 32-33; grade C 28-29. Wholesale to retail: A large 47-48; A medium 41-42; A small 35-36; grade B 37-38; grade C 32-34.

Butter solids: first grade 61½; no price established on second, third or Western butter.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Cattle trade was dull and prices steady today at the Ontario stockyards. Receipts were: cattle 130; calves 100; hogs 180; sheep and lambs 70. The holdover from Tuesday was 900 cattle.

Good weighty steers sold at 24-25.50 with common to medium light steers and heifers at 13-21 and good heifers at 22. Choice yearlings were at 26 and medium at 15-24. Common to medium stockers 16-21 and good cows 12.50-13.50.

Choice veal calves ranged from 26-29 and common to medium from 15-25.

Grade A hogs were at 26 and sows at 17 dressed.

Greenshirts Get Montreal Player

KITCHENER (CP)—Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts, the traders of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, have made their last swap of the season.

Shortly before the midnight deadline Dec. 15, defenceman Bob McCord was shipped to Montreal Canadiens juniors in return for Centre Marc Bolliveau. This fills a Canadien gap in defence personnel and gives Kitchener a badly-needed forward.

During the seemingly interminable weeks of the Throne Speech debate the House of Commons resembles nothing so much as a national "hot stove league." It is just one occasion when just about every member gets into the act, and in the main the quality of the debate is just about what one would expect in any assembly where everyone is expected to say something whether or not he has anything worth saying.

The debate is marked, of course, by predominant overtones of personal and party prejudices, mostly petty and innocuous, with such occasional highlights as the bitterness which has been seen this session in the feuding between the C.C.F. and the Social Crediters.

In this welter of words there was something refreshing last week in the Hansard report of the speech of Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative member for Peel, who chose to talk about the United Nations. Under the Canadian system of multi-party representation at the UN, Mr. Graydon had recently been the party's observer at the General Assembly in New York. In only one instance did Mr. Graydon make a reference which could be construed as criticism of the government policy. And even that was really not important, nor even stressed by him, it was the one thing in his speech which received the most prominence in the press reports which reached the public.

Yet it seems to us that in his forty minute talk Mr. Graydon placed on the Hansard reports some noteworthy observations about the UN which are not brought to the attention of the public in the tedious day-to-day accounts of its proceedings.

We knew, but we had forgotten, that Mr. Graydon was a member of the Canadian delegation which attended the original San Francisco conference. Another delegate was Canada's present Minister of External Affairs, Lester B. Pearson. The year was the second session of the Assembly. This year they were the only "originals" among Canadians who were present when the UN was founded upon such high hopes seven years ago.

In view of what has transpired since in UN history, an interesting and significant sidelight was provided by Mr. Graydon when he told the House of the interesting experience to see the changes that have taken place. Out of the 550 delegates who are there and the alternates at the General Assembly, there are less than a score who represent/ed their respective countries as they were at the San Francisco conference. This fact indicates the changes that take place both in governments and in personalities the world over.

Mr. Graydon did not elaborate upon this little known change which has occurred in the whole makeup of the human foundation upon which the UN was built. If he had made this fact alone the subject of a searching analysis, exploring the implications which must be inherent in such a drastic transformation, perhaps much light could have been thrown upon the background of the troubled career of the UN in the few years it has sought to bring the thinking of 60 nations to a common ground and common understanding.

Obviously Mr. Graydon could not have done this and been able to give the more comprehensible report which he felt obliged to as an official of the Government. There was much of significance which he did have to say and in coming from an Opposition observer we believe that it did a good deal to strengthen Canadian confidence of the members in the work of the United Nations and the hopes for universal understanding which are both the aspiration and the inspiration of its existence.

* * *

In forty minutes Mr. Graydon covered a lot of ground but we think one excerpt from his speech in Hansard is especially worthy of the attention of all Canadians. Said Mr. Graydon near the close of his address:

"Sitting in the midst of the chaos and the division between the democracies as well as between the east and the west, between the Occident and the Orient, between the haves and the have-nots, between the colonial powers and the colonies —is that independently political group of nations called the British commonwealth and empire. I think there are more people in this house now than I have ever seen in seventeen years who find great pride and great pleasure in standing up and speaking a good word for the British commonwealth. Perhaps yesteryear they did not feel so prone to do that. I am glad they feel that way. When our monarch is crowned in June, we will see this great empire commonwealth stretching around the entire world, bound with nothing but family ties and without a written constitution or anything in centralized form.

"This commonwealth is perhaps the only one of its kind in the history of the world. The vast preponderance of the citizens of this commonwealth and empire are Asiatic with only one out of six being white, and this gives one some idea, in these days when the Occident and the Orient are clashing, of either a spark, that we might be in a position to be a voluntary link between all the continents of the world. We may be the link between all the races, creeds and colors, and as my prophecy stands, we shall live to see the day when the British commonwealth and empire will yet be the greatest long-range influence for peace in this troubled world."

JUST POLES

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1952, Edgar A. Guest)

THE RIGHT

If it's right, it needs no scheming,
No deception, no disguises.
Where the lights are brightly gleaming
In the view of all it rises.

If it's right, its purpose certain,
To the world good men reveal it.
They don't need a heavy curtain
From discovery to conceal it.

If it's right, in that confiding,
Good men tell what it embraces.
Only evil stays in hiding
In the dark and dim-lit places.

If it's right, aloud to say it
Under freedom's not forbidden.
If it's right, good men display it.
Only evil must be hidden.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

25 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 17, 1927

Mr. Cleo Colling is home from the College of Pharmacy, Toronto, to spend the Christmas vacation.

Farmers are selling on the market at 19 cents to 21 cents per pound; geese bring 18c to 20c per pound; ducks 18c to 21c each; chickens 65c to $1.25; butter 32c to 34c per pound; eggs 35c to 38c per dozen.

Mr. H. D. Ransom, school attendance officer in this city, had 177 persons call at his homes here during the month of November to find out why children had not been attending classes regularly. This is a record for any month of the year.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hall, Icelie, Catherine St.

Miss Dorothy Ethier, of Deloro, is spending the week-end with Mrs. A. P. Luscombe, Bleecker St.

At the closing meeting of St George's Women's Guild the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Barry; first vice president, Mrs. Parry; treasurer, Mrs. Trump; secretary, Mrs. Pepper.

DECEMBER 17, 1922

Belleville's proposed collegiate institute and vocational school will be erected upon the site of the present high school, if resolutions to that effect moved by Trustee Geo. T. Woodley and seconded by Trustee Albert Ketcheson be passed without opposition at a meeting of the Board of Education.

The vacancy in the department of science at the Belleville High School has been filled by the appointment of C. Clarke, B.A., at a salary of $2,000 per annum. In the department of science W. Dewhirst, B.A., has been appointed at a salary of $2,000 per annum and Miss Elizabeth Chown, B.A., will be in charge of the teaching of modern languages at a salary of $2200 per annum. These new teachers will assume their duties at the new year.

40 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 17, 1912

Dr. J. K. Mott, of Cincinnatti, will be here to spend Christmas with the vendue.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Mott, Howard St.

Mr. W. B. Murdock, of Ambassador, Asia, spent a few days here the guest of Mayor Vermilyea.

Ald. J. F. Wills has resigned as a member of the Court of Revision as he will be a candidate for the office of mayor at the coming municipal election.

Mr. A. W. Doan, of Peterborough, was a visitor in town today.

Mr. Gordon Kent, of Vancouver, B.C., is visiting friends here.

Mr. G. G. Publow, of Kingston, Chief Dairy Inspector for Eastern Ontario, was in town today.

50 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 17, 1902

A large attendance was present at the Assembly here on which was presented at the opera house last evening by the members of the bugle band of the 15th. Regiment. The event was most enjoyable. During the intermission, Lieut.-Col. J. Earl Hallwell thanked the audience for the liberal patronage of the show. The efficiency of the band he said was due to Bugle-Major McManus, whom he regretted to say will leave the city soon. On behalf of the officers of the Regiment he then presented to Mr. McManus a handsome gold watch.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A few days ago, The Packsack had something to say about silver, and apparently a number of Canadians did not make much of a cult out of this beautiful metal which produces in such very great quantity. Several letters have come in, mostly from housewives, enquiring if The Packsack knew what a nuisance silver can be? It tarnishes in a few days. It has to be polished and cleaned with tiresome regularity, or it looks like the dickens. In these days when domestic help is hard to be found, the modern housewife, doing her own work, has no patience with silver.

One lady goes so far as to say that in this age of carbon monoxide and other gases blowing in windows from the motor traffic outside and seeping through the house from leaky refrigeration or from coal furnaces, silver has no longer a place.

These allegations I took to an elderly lady whose house is literally filled with beautiful silver, fine dining room, with its sterling service on the sideboard, and its lovely table with its silver candlesticks, is one of the most refreshing rooms I have ever seen; in one form and another, in silver bowls, silver platters, the sereneest of all metals is to be seen in her house wherever you look.

She has no domestic help. She keeps her own house, from top to bottom. How does she keep her silver so immaculate?

"It is childishly simple," she says. "Every time I do the dishes, which is three times a day, breakfast, lunch and dinner, I take one piece of silver, and put it in the dish pan with the rest of the dishes. Sometimes it is the tray, or the teapot. Next time it is a bowl or an ornament. I make it a routine habit never to waste the dishwater without washing off one or two pieces of silver. In a week I have done them all and I begin the round again. They never get dull or tarnished. This routine keeps the silver in perfect condition the year round."

Lost Civilization Is Recalled

(National Geographic Bulletin)

Ruined cities of crumbling stone stand silent and empty today in semi-tropical forests along South America's Parana River, testifying to one of the most unusual experiments in the history of the New World. In southern Paraguay and in northern Argentina's Misiones Territory there are thirty such sites. The ruins are all that remain of a Christian empire that flourished among the wild Guarani Indians more than three centuries ago. Great churches of carved stone stood facing broad central plazas. Around these, rank upon rank, were parallel city blocks of houses, workshops, storehouses, and public buildings. A prosperous and peaceful civilization was built by Christianity in the wilderness, only to be lost and virtually forgotten.

The Spanish Viceroyalty of Rio de la Plata was not very old when Loreto, a Jesuit missionary, was ordered to the valley of the Parana in Guarani country. Other settlers followed, and the Jesuits found eager converts among the primitive Indians of the Upper Parana and valley of Rio Iguazu. The first villages were not far from Asuncion, and were founded by the famous Father Roque Gonzalez de Santa Cruz, who was killed by Indians in 1631. Scattered by the river's great waterfalls, the hegira finally came to the region squeezed between the bending Parana and Uruguay Rivers. There they rebuilt their communities in unprecedented grandeur style. By 1700, the mission population boasted a population totalling more than 100,000 people. Each of the fifteen "reductions", held about 3,500 Indians, guided by only two missionaries.

In ancient times the Guaranis had been fierce cannibals and headhunters, ranking among the largest and most widespread of South American tribes. Father Lozano was the Guaranis, overrunning lands all the way north to Panama, whose agriculture spread the pineapple throughout the continent long before the coming of the Europeans. In the Jesuit cities, seen from an ignacio Mini, the Guaranis became a prosperous, unwarlike people. But this mission was self-sufficient. The inhabitants tended herds of cattle and grew food crops on the green-leaved yerba, source of "Jesuit tea" or maté.

They produced beautiful cotton cloth, tools, and ornaments for the glittering churches. They wove their own clothes and made their own furniture. Religious principles regulated their lives, and they practiced a communal basis. Eventually this strong "empire within an empire" became too powerful to be useful for the court of Spain. In 1767, Charles III decreed the banning of the Society of Jesus from Spanish dominions. The missionaries left Paraguay, and in other lands the cities they had built fell to ruin. Buildings sank into disrepair, orchards and fields were deserted. Then, after another 50 years, the proud Indian cities of the Parana were gone.

Albert Was Reluctant

(Hamilton Spectator)

Chicago Selective Service Board No. 14 will long remember Albert Wik, a reluctant draftee who enlisted in the U.S. Navy after being rejected in an automobile accident and whose grave he had already visited.

The board's relations with fellow-Chicagoan Alfred C. Zacconi were complicated from the beginning by the board's inattention. Back came the notice and across it was scrawled a message signed by Wik and a doctor: Suffering from migraine headaches. Not examinable. Send report on the day set by the board.

The examination was postponed in a routine manner and a report was received from the hospital later. It, too, was promptly forwarded with a request over the name of the draftee's mother: Mr. Zaccone had enlisted in the Navy.

Fair enough, countered the board, but its records, proof of enlistment, please.

The proof, but a letter with traffic notes on the margin left by the board: "Poor Alfred" had been killed in a motorcycle accident, wrote the mother.

Sympathetically, but a mite exhibitual, the board asked for the death certificate. In the next mail came a letter from the city health department certifying and recording the death of Alfred C. Zaccone, giving pneumonia as the cause. There was, for good measure, a signed burial permit, a statement of burial in All Saints Cemetery — not Albert. They checked the handwriting on all the letters received by the board in the case. They sent for Alfred's draftee's home and found, hale, nearly safe in Navy uniform.

Strength for the Day

TAKE THOUGHT CAREFULLY

Young people very often do not realize the extent to which they depend upon parental love from them. Within the past few days I have read accounts of two young couples who have deserted their parental households into grief, sorrow and sin and so offended both households from which they came that no member of either family was present when the two young people were married.

Life's problems seem so overwhelming to young people that they often allow themselves to be driven to desperation. Or perhaps they are simply victims of a chain of sequence that they utterly forget what effect their acts and decisions will have on their parents. And so they plunge into marriage without any thought as to what their own impulses are driving them with demonic force. Then the impulsiveness be plunged into some tragedy because they are apprehending the principles, they completely forget about loved ones whose whole thought was for their welfare.

Young people should remember that life is long and that while it is tough and sometimes cruel, it is also gracious and can be very kind. To youth there appears to be no time left. Anything that needs to be done must be done by the hour of mature years experience has taught us that there is plenty of time for everything that needs to be done.

Most Famous Of All Ships

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

A French expedition to Mount Azarat in search of the traditional resting place of Noah's ark, famous of all ships, Noah's Ark, has come back empty-handed. Not a trace of the vessel has been found on the mountain. "I told you so. Who ever heard of looking for a boat on the summit of a mountain? Why, it's 16,000 feet high." Yet although the summit of the mountain is not specifically mentioned in the Bible there is nothing inherently impossible in the assumption that a vessel could be stranded on a mountain top. Geology shows us a succession of land masses, hundreds of miles away from the present coastline.

The Great Flood has fascinated men for many ages. One of the most interesting discoveries in recent times was the decipherring of ancient tablets containing stories of the flood. It is clear that a good portion of the Noah story is founded on a remote period by a titanic deluge that left an indelible impression on the minds of the people. It is significant that the Biblical narrative has become invested with a moral and spiritual meaning. We need not accept the literal truth in every detail to appreciate the message of the story, which is valid today.

Using Kites As Lifesavers

(Sault Ste. Marie Star)

While Britain is energetically pursuing development of her jet fighter planes, a retired 60-year-old English motor engineer has perfected a new principle of the kite as a method of propulsion for rubber rafts.

By this practical use of the kite, Alfred Price is trying to develop a means of saving lives of wrecked sailors and ditched aircrew in waters too far inland for rescue craft.

Mr. Price recently crossed Kingmere, a lake in Windlesham Common in south London, at a speed of three knots in a one-man rubber dinghy. His only motive-power was a reel of twine, attached to a four-foot kite aloft.

By manipulating the twine, Mr. Price found that he could change the direction of his dinghy.

A bombardier during the war, he had been pondering the problem of using a kite to replace the bomb-aiming suggested the idea; fear of ridicule, however, deterred him from experimenting until recently.

Mr. Price is planning a cross-Channel trip in a kite-powered rubber craft to prove the value.

A REMEDY FOR RESTLESS LEGS

A common complaint of mature adults with poor circulation is that their legs are restless when they try to relax and get to sleep nights. They can't find a position that is comfortable for their legs for any length of time. For the relief of this a good remedy, according to reports of many readers, is nitroglycerin, otherwise called trinitrin, glonoin or the doctor's way to keep you dumb laymen more or less confused about such things in order to protect the tricks of the trade.

It is difficult, however, and is most places impossible to purchase nitroglycerin tablets without prescription or to have such prescription of your own physician. It may be that your physician or any physician you happen to know will give you a few nitroglycerin tablets, each containing 1/100th of a grain.

The rapid action of nitroglycerin, described in the chapter on pectoris dolor (chest, thorax or heart pain), more familiar as angina pectoris, at p. 23 of my booklet, "If you have heart and artery troubles, may mislead unskilled in regard to its medicine as too "powerful" and therefore too "dangerous." Be that as it may, physicians, pharmacists or other vasodilator — medicine dilates, widens or opens spasmodically contracted, constricted or narrowed arterioles (minute microscopic arteries, not capillaries).

Habit consecutively such medicine may eventually give less relief when the body becomes used or resistant to it, but if regular, frequent or occasional doses of such medicine give me any relief or comfort I'd enjoy the relief or comfort without concern about habituation.

For the complaint of "restless legs" and that does not mean cramp, pain or dull ache in the legs — it is advisable to take at least one-half of a 1/100th grain tablet of nitroglycerin → sublingually, that is up under the tongue and let it melt there. Then just lie there repeating the Peter Nestor in Latin by the Twenty-Third Psalm in say language, in six of the larger — and the does not mean cramp, pain or dull ache in the legs — it is advisable to take at least one-half of a 1/100th grain tablet of nitroglycerin → sublingually, that is up under the tongue and let it melt there. Then just lie there repeating the Peter Nestor in Latin by the Twenty-Third Psalm in say language, in six of the larger — and the does not mean cramp, pain or dull ache in the legs — it is advisable to take at least one-half of a 1/100th grain tablet of nitroglycerin → sublingually, that is up under the tongue and let it melt there. Then just lie there repeating the Peter Nestor in Latin by the Twenty-Third Psalm in say language, in six of the larger — and you will know whether the medicine is worthy or whether the tablets are inert. If the medicine is working you experience relief or perhaps a tingling in your face or throbbing in your head for a few minutes. Just lie still, and presently, in the month after you get into bed

WEDDINGS

WILSON—LASKARIS

In a double-ring ceremony, recently solemnized by Archdeacon F. A. Smith in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, of Maria Laskaris, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Laskaris, became the bride of Robert Andrew Wilson, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson. Tall standards of white gladioli, pompons and white pom-poms adorned the church for the occasion.

Professor Ernest Wheatley, organist of the church, rendered the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Ethel Lawrenson, who sang "Ave Maria" before the ceremony, and "The Lord's Prayer" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in her gown of nylon tulle and imported frost-white Chantilly lace over satin fashioned with fitted bodice buttoned down the back. The decollete neckline had a flesh-colored tulle illusion yoke, featured in front with upturned frill of nylon tulle trimmed with a chain of pearls and caught with love knot of pearls at the point. The short, puffed sleeves and elbow-length gloves which came to a taper below the wrists, were of matching Chantilly lace. The bouffant skirt of nylon tulle was accented by a front panel of Chantilly lace over satin, and satin underskirt. She wore a double veil of diaphanous tulle bordered with Chantilly lace, the upper part of fingertip length, the lower ending in a sweeping train over the floor-length skirt, which was caught in a tiara of pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white stephanotis.

Her only attendant, Mrs. George Kotsis, of Buffalo, was charmingly attired in an ice-blue taffeta gown, the bodice of which was attractively embroidered with fine sequences, the skirt of bouffant fullness over a crinoline underskirt. Her pale blue cap featured a shoulder-length veil of blue nylon tulle and her matching tulle gloves were caught at the wrists with blue velvet bows. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of pale yellow carnations and white pompoms.

Mr. James Anderson, of Toronto, was groomsman and Mr. Peter J. Laskaris, of Quebec, brother of the bride, and Mr. Robert A. Weeks, of Toronto, were ushers.

The reception was held at the Masonic Temple where the guests were received by the bride's mother, wearing a gown of toast-colored crepe and a corsage of red roses, assisted by the groom's mother, wearing a blue crepe gown with corsage of red roses.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left for New York State by car, the bride travelling in a British-tan wool suit and pale mauve orchid corsage. Upon their return, they will reside in Toronto.

HOLLAND—LUCY

A pretty double-ring wedding ceremony was recently solemnized at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, when Sharon Marie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Lucy, Belleville, became the bride of Ronald Keith Holland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holland, of Oshawa. Rev. J. J. Buckley officiated.

Mr. Robert Lucy, brother of the bride, rendered Schubert's "Ave Maria", "On This Day O Beautiful Mother," and at the signing of the register Caesar Frasc's "Panis Angelicus." Miss Dorothy Grant accompanied him at the organ.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her original gown of frosted white nylon tulle over satin. The molded beaque of Chantilly lace which was heavily encrusted with seed pearls, featuring a portrait neckline outlined with seed pearls, extended over the bouffant skirt with a full peplum ending in a long point at the back. The skirt was worn over a crinoline. Her veil of tulle illusion was caught to a matching lace bullet-cap. She carried a full cascade of blue tinted 'mums interspersed with bouvardia.

Miss Mary Dooley was maid of honor and Mrs. William Evanyshyn, sister-in-law of the bride, and Miss Ann Lucy, sister of the bride, were bridesmaids. Both were gowned alike in net over taffeta in shades of aquamarine and orchid. They wore matching tulle bonnets and carried muffs of green and mauve tinsel edged with white feathered carnations.

Mr. Andre Roy, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. The ushers were Messrs. Harold Maitland, brother of the groom, and William Evanyshyn.

The reception was held at the Golden Acre Inn, where the bride's mother received the guests, gowned in gray crepe and lace, wearing a corsage of mauve orchids. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore wine mattalee, with corsage of creme Johanna Hill rosebuds.

For her wedding trip to New York State, the bride chose a navy blue cape dress, navy accessories, and a grey full-length broadtail coat. Her corsage was deep pink carnations.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Queens Village, Long Island; Oshawa, Gananoque, Marmora, Deloro, and Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Holland will reside at 151 Athol Street, Oshawa, Ontario.

Child Is Able To Return Home For Christmas

TORONTO (CP) — Fair-haired 11-year-old Antje Mass had the happiest surprise of her life when she was told she could go home to Sault Ste. Marie for Christmas.

Antje and her mother were too excited to say much on the train journey Saturday night for the girl had been in Queen Mary Hospital for Crippled being treated for tuberculosis at nearby Weston since July, 1951.

Her mother called at the hospital during the few days she planned to spend with her daughter before returning home for Christmas. Then Dr. Arnold Vokes told Mrs. Mass that Antje's lungs had completely cleared and she was ready for discharge.

The family came to Canada from Hamburg, Germany, and had only been here five days when Antje became seriously ill. Sault doctors suspected TB although examination before she left Germany showed no trace of it. She was rushed to Weston.

Then she was only 68 pounds; now she weighs a sturdy 94.

During her stay at Weston, Antje learned to speak English although she did not know a word when she arrived. She has done well at her studies and has passed into Grade 6. She wrote to her young brother at home in printed English, while writing to her parents in German.

Among Antje's Christmas presents will be an entire new wardrobe. She has grown out of all her old clothes, which will be sent to a small friend in Germany.

Women's Guild Discusses 'When Should We Stop Work?'

The regular meeting of the Women's Guild was held at the home of Mrs. H. St. Gibson, 125 Foster Avenue, on Monday night, with the president, Mrs. W. N. Hurst, in the chair.

At the conclusion of the business session, a lovely Christmas worship period was conducted by Mrs. Fraser.

The program for the evening was under the leadership of Miss Elston and Mrs. J. Buchanan. The topic presented and discussed was "When Should We Stop Work".

Retirement Age

The age of 65 years is the retirement time set by the majority of employers in this country. This dead line was set many years ago but since 1900 medical science has been able to extend the life span by 20 years, hence the problem of a steadily increasing population of older citizens. In fact, one Canadian in ten is over 60 years of age.

Happier When Working

Surveys show that the majority of people are happier when working. They want to feel useful and needed apart from the economic reason of wishing to continue in a job. A great number of men retired at 65 are lost when introduced to a life of leisure. Apart from the individual loss, the country is suffering an economic loss in not using the ability and experience these men have gained over the years.

Aging is a matter of individual approach. One doctor claims that mental aculeness at 78 is not much different than that at 35 years of age.

Mortality Lower

A large manufacturer recently found upon medical examination that 129 out of 130 persons examined were physically fit to continue working after 65. He also found that the mortality rate was much lower among those people who upon retirement went out and got themselves another job.

It is quite possible within the next decade that it will be found that man's usefulness does not end at 65 and retirement planners will recognize this fact, not only for the good of the individual, but also for the good of business.

The hostesses for the evening were, Mrs. Fraser and Mrs. W. Fothergill.

Siamese Twin Girls Separated By Surgery

CLEVELAND (AP) — Siamese twin girls have been separated by surgery at Mt Sinai hospital, it was disclosed today. They are in fine condition in a pair of incubators.

No vital organs were involved in the band which joined them. Three doctors participated in the case. The delivery was by Dr. Nyall Reitman, the surgery by Dr. Jac S. Geller, and the consulting pedistrician was Dr. Earl Smith. They would not give the parents' name.

The twins arrived at 3 p.m. Sunday, a little ahead of schedule, and the surgery was performed three hours later, after tests had been made to determine the extent of the connection.

The first born weighed five pounds, five ounces. It was a normal delivery, and Dr. Reitman noticed the band connecting the twins. The first was delivered head first and the second baby feet first. The weight of the second was four pounds, 14 ounces. The delivery took 45 minutes.

The surgery began at 6 p.m. and took about one hour.

The band was an inch to an inch and a half wide, joining the twins at the point where the chest and abdomen meet.

Dr. Geller said it was "a fleshy band covered with skin and containing cartilage. There were no major blood vessels connecting the two infants."

The mother is doing well, and Dr. Geller said the twins "are eating and performing normally."

WOULD BAN SUBSTITUTES

HAMILTON (CP)—The Hamilton Milk Producers' Association decided at its annual meeting Thursday to ask the Ontario government for legislation making the manufacture and sale of edible oil products as dairy substitutes illegal. President Gordon Calhoun told the meeting margarine was here to stay but the resolution is aimed at preventing the introduction of other products.

HONOR DRIVERS

VANCOUVER (CP)— The names of hundreds of safe automobile drivers are to be presented to the provincial government by the British Columbia Automobile Association in a campaign to lower auto insurance. Drivers claiming a year of accident-free driving will be given special stickers for their car windows.

Bridge St. Y.P.U. Holds Christmas Party, Makes Presentation

A ballfay mood being set by the distraction of many gay decorations, the group commenced the evening by participating in various games of skill and pantomime.

Christmas carols were then sung by everyone. Eventually, a Jovial Santa Claus distributed gifts to all present.

During the worship service, Miss Loretta McDougall told a Christmas story, after which Mr. Ken Graham sang, "O Wondrous Star of the East".

On behalf of the Young People, Miss Betty Jose presented Miss McDougall with a gift of silver. Although the Y.P.U. are sorry to lose Miss McDougall as leader, all wish her success with her future plans.

'Child Guidance' Explained at Foxboro H-S Association

The December meeting of Foxboro Home and School Association was held at the school with Mrs. William Rombough, presiding.

Introduced by Mrs. Hayton, the guest speaker, Miss Hazel Thompson, a teacher at Queen Alexandra School, explained Child Guidance in the elementary schools in Belleville.

The school Christmas concert will be held on Thursday evening, December 18. The parents were asked to bring homemade candy and popcorn to the school on Wednesday evening and help to pack treats for each of the school and pre-school children to be given to them on Thursday.

Miss Parks was given $5 to purchase games to be used in her room on rainy days.

The next meeting will be held in January. Rev. H. Giffin will be in charge of the program and the subject "Religious Education".

Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

The Consumers' Section of the Department of Agriculture has some clever dietitians on their staff. Their recipe research is famous throughout Canada. I noticed that flank steak seems to be a favorite cut with some of them. I use flank steak too, but in a limited way I'm afraid. My favorite flank steak dish is Mock Duck and if it is baked carefully it is a great old Moore favorite. It looses none of its goodness when sliced cold—if you can manage to salvage any.

DIRECTIONS
MOCK DUCK

Buy one flank steak and to make it tenderer, pound it with steak pounder until you flatten it and break up the fibres.

Spread it on board. Filling—Add to 1 1-2 cups breadcrumbs, 1 tegspoon each chopped parsley and summer savory, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 tablespoon chopped onion sauteed in 1 1-2 tablespoon melted fat until soaked with the butter but not brown. Spread this over the prepared meat. Roll up and tie securely. Place in small roasting pan, pour around the meat 2 tablespoons drippings melted in 1 cup boiling water. Cover tightly and bake in over of 350 deg. Fahr. until tender—time depends on age of beef—it may take 1-2 or 3 hours. Uncover and baste during last 1-3 hour.

STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

Bake 8 medium-sized potatoes at 425 deg. Fahr. until tender—about 1 hour. Cut a slice off the top and scoop out potato. Mash and add 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-3 cup hot milk. Beat until very light. Beat stiff the white of 1 egg and fold this in. Restuff potato skins, piling filling high. Brown and reheat through in hot oven. You may omit the egg white.

SCALLOPED TOMATOES

Melt 2 tablespoons butter or margarine and add 2 cups bread crumbs to them and stir until crumbs soak up butter. Sprinkle some of these in a buttered baking dish. Using from a 20-oz. tin put in a layer of tomatoes, dot over with butter, salt and pepper and part of 1 tablespoon grated onion and part of 1-2 or 1 cup finely chopped celery; sprinkle with crumbs, repeat, using all of the can of tomatoes in second layer. Finish with thick layer of crumbs. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. until bubbling and golden.

CHELSEA BUNS

Make Plain bun Dough: One cup milk, 1-3 cup sugar, 1-2 tea spoon salt, 2 tablespoons lukewarm water, 1-2 yeast cake, 3 tablespoons soft butter, 1-3 teaspoon cinnamon, about 3 cups bread flour. Soften the yeast in the water. Heat the milk to a little warmer than lukewarm, remove from heat and add sugar, salt, softened yeast and about 1 cup flour. Stir over and let rise until light in warm place. When light add the butter, then the remaining flour sifted with the cinnamon. Knead the dough until it is elastic and smooth. Let rise until light. To make the Chelsea part roll dough out to 1-3 inch thickness. Spread with mixture of 2 tablespoons softened butter, 1-4 cup currants or sultanas, 1-3 cup brown sugar, 1 1-2 teaspoons cinnamon. Roll the dough up and press edges together. Cut with sharp knife into slices 1 inch thick. Place close together in greased baking dish, have cut edges up. Let rise until light and double in bulk, in warm place. Bake at 400 deg. Fah. for 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 375 deg. Fahr. baking for 30 to 35 minutes in all. Wonderful with spiced applesauce.

Women's Activities

GILEAD W.M.S.

The December meeting of the Gilead W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. O. Bertrand with 18 ladies present. The president opened the meeting.

During the business period, which followed, a letter of thanks was read from Mrs. Haines and reports were given from the treasurer and Baby Band superintendent, which were most gratifying and well over the allocation.

The candlelight worship service was then presented, with several members taking part. Several Christmas carols were sung; readings were given by Mrs. Balcanquel, Mrs. W. Wyerstein, Mrs. Livingston and Mrs. Guy Leavens. Mrs. Fred Yorke favored with a solo. The meeting closed with singing "Silent Night" after which refreshments were served by the hostess.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A farmer wants a wife.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a farmer, single, living out in the country, with a good home of my own.

I am quiet, do not drink or smoke, as do not mix with the rural set of crowd which does those things. There are few single girls living around here and those there are all go for the men with the big pay cheque who spend everything, do not own anything and have more free time light and doubled in bulk, in warm places. Bake at 400 deg. Fah. for 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 375 deg. Fahr. baking for 30 to 35 minutes in all. Wonderful with spiced applesauce.

clubs, organizations and other opportunities for meeting people. In this way, you would certainly get at least one or two leads to follow up. Another good way to locate organizations of which you might become a member would be to write directly to the newspaper in the city and ask for a list of such local groups.

Never forget that an unmarried man, particularly one who is hard-working and has such good habits as yourself, is always welcome as a member or a group, so you can proceed with confidence that it will not be nearly so hard to find girl friends as you think. Get busy now, use a little initiative and let me know how things go.

Have a mind of your own and use it

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a boy friend whom I love very much, but he expects so much of me. He doesn't want me to go around with a certain girl friend because he thinks she's a bad influence because she smokes. I like this girl, and I don't see how I can just stop speaking to her like he wants me to. I know he's thinking of my own welfare, so I wish you would advise me as to what I should do.—M. C.

Dear S.M.C.:

The way friend has some criticism to offer, it always seems a wise plan to give the criticism honest consideration and then decide whether or not it is justified.

In your case, you might think over the kind of a girl this particular friend is, as she has revealed herself in the things she does and the way she talks. Then you can make up your mind whether this boy has any real reason to believe her a "bad influence", and therefore not a suitable friend for you, or whether you are quite sure he is wrong. If you believe the latter to be true, then I see no reason why you should give up a friend just because your boy friend doesn't like her. People have to be smart enough to judge character for themselves, and staunch enough to be loyal to a friend in the face of criticism that seems unfair.

Since your girls are undoubtedly teen-agers, it is unfortunate that this one has already started to smoke, but that fact alone does not necessarily make her wrong kind, of friend, and, if you stick by her, perhaps you can be a good influence and help her to see that smoking is a poor idea for growing girls.

The chief thing is for you to have the spunk to use your head and make your own decisions. If you start allowing your boy friend to dictate to you about your friends or activities, it won't be long before your friendship with him is spoiled anyway.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

GRANDMOTHERS STAY BEAUTIFUL!

Though there are a lot of things wrong with this mad world of ours, there is one consolation for women. It is a period of ageless youth. Regard the grandmothers! They are up and doing! Many of them hold important and executive jobs. Those with wealth and leisure have active lives, devoting themselves to charitable projects. Millions of them seem not to carry the marks of birthdays on face or figure.

They keep younger than did their foremothers because they have more interests. They have more outdoor life. They know more about the laws of health, and respect them. They endeavor to so organize their lives that there is no unnecessary expenditure of energy. Every step, every act must count. They realize the importance of correct posture; that alone will help one to hang on to the youthful silhouette.

If a grandmother feels that she does not come up to this standard, she should put her mind on a few simple matters. For one thing, she must not lose faith in the rejuvenating effects of cosmetics. After the fortieth birthday, sometimes before that, the sebaceous glands get lazy, do not supply the oil that the skin needs to keep it free of lines. Something must be substituted, so a heavy cream should be applied freely once a day, and tapped in—to flesh. Light massage stimulates glandular mechanisms helps the blood to attend to its business of bringing nourishment to the cells. Five minutes of this ritual before crawling in between the sheets is almost an insurance against wrinkles. That is if one keeps sweet of disposition and is strong and healthy.

One must keep up with the trend. Nothing so dates a woman, so puts her in the dowdy bracket as an outmoded coiffure. If an old girl is quite and easy looking with a petite figure there is no reason why she should have a poodle cut. But no straggly locks anywhere. Neatness is the rule.

If arranged haircb will make a woman look blowsy.

Whether one is plump or thin, the most important item of the wardrobe is the girdle or foundation. It provides an incentive for erect stance and imparts style. Every time there is need of a new corset, there should be a careful fitting, because of line changes that are likely to take place as one edges along in the autumn of life.

Passenger Comfort in Mind When CNR Officials Remodel Original Stone North Station

When Canadian National Railway officials decided to remodel and redecorate the lower interior of the original north station, it was definitely with passenger comfort in mind.

Master craftsmen of nearly a century ago who built the stone structure would probably envy conditioning eyes at modern gadgets. But the fact remains that mid-twentieth century décor wizardry has done exactly what it was expected to do.

Today, the draughty, noisy, and winter-cold waiting rooms have been replaced by decorative and constructive magic into a colorful, comfortable whole that should satisfy the most fastidious railway patron.

The "men's" waiting room, that once echoed to the stamp of snow-packed feet and the hum of male gossip and the "ladies'" room with its draughty windows and lack of feminine facilities, are gone. The old ticket office with its single window and cluttered space has been raised and lowered, has disappeared.

Modern Facilities

In their places has appeared a general waiting room, that embraces a modern ticket office and contains modern facilities enough to warrant the traveller enjoying all the necessities without braving wintry elements or summer suns.

The general waiting room has been extended to include both former rooms allotted to women and men. The ticket office has been moved to the east end. This is flanked by modern-equipped rest rooms for both sexes.

Take it from the passenger viewpoint.

You can enter the waiting room either by the original entrance on the north side, or by a new one on the south side of the building.

Drinking Fountain Added

Upon entering, the soft shades of two tones of "greyed" green blend prettily with the mottled grey of the terrazzo flooring.

Awaiting you are handsome red leather-upholstered chrome chairs. These replace the old courtroom girdle - breaking benches that adorned the former waiting rooms. A drinking fountain gleaming in its new metal is available. No need to rush outside in snow storm, rain or blistering heat to consult the railway timetable. A public address system gives ample warning of approaching train time and future schedules.

Parcel lockers are located in convenient places. A telephone booth stands near a column. The loud hum of conversation, the raucous roar of locomotive whistles and other sounds synonymous with a railway station are missing. The new acoustic ceiling eliminates these unnecessary noises. Passengers can converse quietly with every word audible to themselves only.

There are no "squeaks" to the handsome marbelite floor. You can walk to and from the ticket office without disturbing anybody or anything.

Thing of Beauty

The ticket office is itself a thing or beauty. Its handsome brass grills that face two wickets flank a beautiful "entire" of Japanese wicker. A black arborite "counter" gleams a under the suffused glow of diffused lighting effects from overhead and sides.

Inside the ticket office are special facilities for ticket handling. The office itself is decorated in the same shades of green and grey terrazzo flooring.

The rest rooms lack nothing in the way of passenger comfort. Done in the over-all green decor with the exception of brownish tiled half-walls and floors, the rooms contain every modern facility available. Mirrors for ladies and one for gentlemen are available. Gleaming white wash bowls are present.

Lighting Latest Word

The over-all lighting system is the latest word in fluorescent illumination. Ceilings have been raised to eliminate any possibility of glare.

The new general waiting room has far cry from the former two-room system divided by a ticket office.

As was mentioned before if CNR officials had passenger comfort in mind when they decided on remodelling and decorating this phase of carpetry, they have succeeded well beyond the slightest shadow of doubt.

Mr. A. R. Wilson, division superintendent, said today that he expected full completion of the work within the immediate future. Men are busy applying finishing touches although the new waiting room has been opened to the public for the past few days.

Coca-Cola Staff Holds Enjoyable Christmas Party

The old surprise "hander-outer" Santa Claus not often gets paid in part, but the jolly old cat gasped with something like amazement when he crawled from the figurative heartx at the spacious, well appointed Coca-Cola Company's new plant on Sidney Street the other day.

In fact the old boy was so taken with the surroundings that he almost went out of character and started on a present-hunt himself.

"Well," he gasped. Then bright-eyed children and smiling adults reminded him he had a job to do.

It was the first annual Christmas party held by the management in the new buildings. And 95 plant members their families and the staff agree it was the most colorful event of its kind ever presented to them.

Happy faces of children reflected the glow of two brilliantly lighted Christmas trees. Then, with "dads and mothers", enjoyed motion pictures and other entertainment after branch manager Aubrey Coe had extended the company's Yuletide welcome.

Then came the big moment with Santa Claus in his favorite role. He presented gifts to the children, their parents and guests. Later the children were given bags of candies, fruit, "cokes" of course and other Yuletide delicacies.

Through Ralph Downey, the employees of the branch presented them with a handsome stag-handle three-piece carving set. Mr. Coe expressed sincere appreciation for the gift.

It was announced that all employees will receive a handsome turkey for Christmas, with the compliments of the Coca-Cola Ltd.

The committee in charge of the party arrangements were Messrs. Downey, Lloyd Wallace and Howard Rainbird.

Christmas Party Given by American Optical Company

The program, under the direction of master of ceremonies Bill Colclough and Lewis Watson, was varied and highly entertaining.

Beginning with a sing-song, the party progressed to films which were chosen for the benefit of the younger members of the group but which were thoroughly enjoyed by everyone.

Following the films, two strange characters, called Willie and George, came on the scene. Dressed in evening clothes, with brightly-colored bow ties and round, black bowler hats, they proceeded to converse and sing with the audience. Helping them in a quartet were Misses Joan Wilmott and Marcy Lou Semark. George, whose auburn hair had not felt the touch of the barber's shears for quite some time, tried his hand at a magic trick or two, but he must have forgotten the proper words to use as the results were not exactly gratifying. George, however, finally disappeared and Willie completed the act with the singing of a humorous song.

Gifts Presented

Present at this party were Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Buckley from the parent company in Southbridge, Massachusetts. Mr. Buckley, who has retired this year, is well known to the people of the Belleville Lens Division, as he has made periodic trips to the city during the past years. In recognition of his assistance, the Service and Social Club presented him with a wallet and Mrs. Buckley with a beautiful cup and saucer.

For the music lovers, there was also an instrumental number, consisting of Messrs. G. B. Scott with a French horn, W. G. Buckley with a banjo, and L. Watson with an English horn. They rendered the seemingly difficult and complicated "Jingle Bells", accompanied by Miss Dorothy Wiltze at the piano.

At the end of the program, lunch was served and then came the big event of the evening—Santa Claus distributed gifts to some 75 tired but very happy children.

Routine Matters Discussed by Bd.

Members of the Bay of Quinte District High School Boards wound up their business for the year Monday evening with little more than routine matters being discussed.

Accumulative sick leave credits for retiring employees were discussed and a policy set for the board. The cost-of-living bonus as applied during 1953 will be carried on for next year for all employees, it was decided.

Shooting facilities in the school gallery will be increased by one-third with authorization for construction of a four-place ramp to replace the present ramps which accommodates only three target shooters.

The Ontario Provincial Police will be requested to make their regular check of all high school buses and report to the school board. A notice will go out to all bus operators that hereafter buses arriving at school after 8:35 a.m., will be regarded as being late. It was pointed out that if buses arrive later than this it is impossible for pupils to be duly registered before nine o'clock.

Continue Course

Although the enrolment in the plumbing course at night school has fallen below the required ten students, the class will be continued, on a recommendation from the advisory-vocational committee. The local plumbers' association had donated certain plumbing equipment to the school, while one local plumber has made a cash contribution to the class.

A vote of thanks will be forwarded to Elliott Motors of Belleville for providing a training car for the drivers' training course at the Collegiate. The school had been without a training car for some time and interest of the students was falling off.

The Canadian Institute for the Blind was granted permission to institute a fund raising campaign in connection with the schools.

TRAFFIC DEATH REMAND

GUELPH (CP)—Charles A. Shultis, 32, of nearby Acton was remanded Monday to Dec. 22 on charges of dangerous driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident. Shultis was charged in the traffic death of Jan Shoot, 11, who was struck and killed Dec. 6 by an automobile which police said did not stop.

Johannes Holmboe New President Of Camera Club

Members present also approved changes in the club's constitution and by-laws. These changes are intended to pave the way for establishment of darkroom facilities, available to all members of the club.

Hedley James was appointed to the office of chairman of the black and white committee. Doug Ketcheson accepted the appointment to the chair for the color committee and Phil Harris will be publicity chairman.

Following club business, color slides made by the members were shown. First, second and third honors were shared by Johannes Holmboe and H. Cameron Tanner. Honorable mentions went to Bert King, Norm Francis, Doug Ketcheson and Stan Elsie.

Salvation Army Will Present Request Program

The Salvation Army Christmas Cheer request program will take place tomorrow evening over CJBQ starting at nine o'clock in the evening and with the Salvation Army singing carols under the direction of Leslie Price, taking the first half hour. At ten o'clock the band and songsters of the Citadel, under the leadership of Jack Green and Bert Wood will stand by for requests from the listeners who are invited to telephone their requests for Christmas carols (4497). They will be invited to drop in at the Citadel during the time of the broadcast with their donations to the Salvation Army Christmas Cheer or send it in the mail the next day.

Special individual talent will also take part among them being vocal solos by Mrs. F. Brightwell, wife of the local commanding officer, who will pilot this most interesting program of requests from the Salvation Army Citadel on Pinnacle Street. All are invited to support the food parcels and boxes of toys being prepared at the Citadel anytime during the broadcast or any day following.

Shannonville W. A. Elects 1953 Officers

The monthly meeting of the W.A. of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of the president, Mrs. E. H. Vivian, on Thursday, with 24 women in attendance. The president most graciously welcomed all, and opened the meeting in the usual manner. Mrs. Harry Sine presided at the piano.

An appropriate Christmas reading, "No Room in the Inn," was given by the president. Mrs. Claude Clarke, group leader gave a Christmas reading. Scripture was read from Luke 2, by Mrs. W. D. Robertson. This was followed by the reading of a poem, "The Birthday of the King," by Miss Winnifred Eckhardt.

Mrs. Harry Sine favored with a beautiful piano solo which was enjoyed by all present, and also read, "The Saviour of the World." A recording, "Silent Night," was played.

Thanks Tendered

Mrs. Claude Clarke thanked the members of her group for their help.

Correspondence consisted of a thank-you note from Mrs. Lillian Curl for cards she received when in the hospital; also one from Mrs. Earle Thompson, when she was ill. Thanks for birthday cards were given by Mrs. J. F McFarlane. Mrs. Raymond Clarke expressed thanks for the cards sent her husband when he was ill, and Mrs Stanley MacDonald thanked the women for that sent to her husband, when ill.

Annual gifts of money were voted for the Maid M fund; and the Sunday School and Victor Home for girls. The white gift service will be held on Sunday evening, December 21st. Mrs. Sam Elliott kindly offered her home for packing the Christmas baskets for the elderly ones and shut-ins of the congregation, as well as some needy ones in the community.

Mrs. W. D. Robertson gave a reading, "Being President."

Mrs. Vivian thanked all for their help during the year and Mrs. Scott moved a vote of thanks to the president for her faithful work, also to the officers and group leaders, and a special thank-you to Mrs. Allen MacDonald for the extra sewing she has so willingly done. A hearty hand-clap showed the appreciation of those present.

The Reverend L. W. Scott commended the members for their work and the success of their efforts this year for which the president thanked Mr. Scott for his kind words of encouragement.

Officers for 1953

The slate of officers, as presented by the nominating committee was accepted as read by Mrs. Everett Stratton, and are as follows: president Mrs. E. H. Vivian; 1st vice-president, Mrs Harry Sine; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. C. Garmon; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. Ken Juby; secretary, Mrs. Orval Stratton; treasurer, Mrs. Stanley MacDonald; flower and card secretary, Mrs. Sam Elliott; pianist, Mrs. Harry Sine; assistant pianist, Mrs. L. W Scott; group leaders: Mrs. James Everett Stratton; Arthur Houston, Raymond Clarke, Sam Elliott and Claude N. Clarke.

A letter and donation of $2 from Mrs. Ben Gilroy had been received since the meeting and is gratefully acknowledged. An exchange of Christmas gifts was made from a large decorated basket passed by Mrs. R. Clarke and Mrs. Charles Woods.

Following the close of the meeting, the hostess and her assistants served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

On account of the New Year holiday the next meeting will be held on January 15th at the home of the treasurer, Mrs. Stanley MacDonald.

FRANKFORD

FRANKFORD — Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes visited Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sagar and Johnny, and Mr. Raymond Lohnes in Belleville, Friday night.

The village of Batawa is again be-decked with a glorious display of Christmas lights. Passers-by on highway 33 can see clearly the outline of the Batawa churches, as well as many large trees in the village illuminated by strings of colored lights.

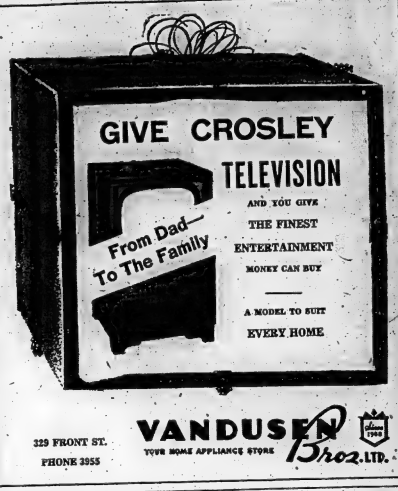
The Sidney Junior Farmers will again be sponsoring an annual Christmas Eve dance in the Community Memorial Hall in Frankford. Music will be by George Foster and his orchestra.

The Frankford United Church Sunday School concert will be presented in the Community Hall beginning at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Dec. 19. The Sunday School is requesting that those attending please refrain from putting private gifts on the tree, in order to shorten the evening for the younger kiddies. The Sunday School regrets that this request has had to be made, and sincerely hopes that no one will be offended by it.

Nominations for reeve, four councillors, six school board trustees, and one public utilities commission member will be held in the Frankford Community Hall on Friday evening, December 19, in the council chamber Election, if necessary, will be held on Monday, December 29

Thousands View Santa Parade

BANCROFT — Thousands of persons jammed the streets on Saturday afternoon for the annual Santa Claus parade sponsored by the Bancroft Lions Club. Happy youngsters cheered Santa as he rode by in the colorful half-mile long parade headed by the Madoc brass band, members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, the North Hastings High School Cadet Corps and Boy Scouts. Twenty-four gaily decorated floats took part in the parade.



Six clowns and eight weirdly costumed characters added to the fun for the youngsters. Several of the floats depicted nursery rhyme and comic-strip scenes and one was an ingenious creation called "The Thing."

Following the parade more than 1,700 bags of candies and nuts were distributed to the massed children eager to greet Santa Claus at the community hall. He was assisted in this busy task by Lions club members who then whisked him away to visit several kiddies confined to their homes by sickness.

Free comedy shows at the community hall and the local theatre occupied the children for the remainder of the afternoon. Both places were filled to overflowing for each of the two shows and several cash prizes donated by local merchants were distributed by theatre owner, "Gord" Broughton.

A light blanket of snow and Christmas decorations in stores and along the main street added to the spirit of the occasion.

The parade is an annual project of the Lions Club who were assisted this year by several members of the village. One unfortunate incident marred this year's preparations when, "Scotty" Grant, a tireless worker of the Club, was injured in a fall on Friday night while decorating a float and sustained five broken ribs.

A Child's Life of Jesus

"They wanted to be near Him. Soon a people thought they were too young to know what he was talking about."

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the two books written by the late Felton Oursler, noted author of such volumes as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Neil O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER VI

One day Jesus stood on the top of a hill and talked to the people. It was quite a tall hill, almost a mountain. That is why it was called a mount. He told the people that God is everybody's Father in Heaven.

And everybody is a child of God. So that makes everybody else your brother or your sister. We must love God and all His children. If we do not love God and everybody, then He cannot be our Father in Heaven.

"First," He said, "you must love the Lord your God, with all your heart.

"And you must love your neighbor as yourself."

Jesus was talking to every girl and boy living today when he said that.

Have you ever tried to love someone else the way you love yourself? We all love ourselves. We treat ourselves kindly. I am very good to me. You are nice to yourself. You can forgive yourself anything. Oh, yes, we all love ourselves. And we excuse ourselves when we do wrong. But do we also excuse others? No we say: "Oh, he didn't mean to smash my things. Or run into me so hard"—or do we say: "Oh, I'll never speak to him again, I"

Jesus, standing on the hilltop, said we must forgive everybody. We must keep on doing it.

That is the way for us to be happy in mind and heart.

One day Jesus found another friend. He stopped at a place where a man was taking money from the people, for taxes. The people did not like that man. But Jesus said to him, "Follow Me."

And the man set his piles of money and followed Jesus. Jesus called him Mathew — and soon Matthew wrote a part of the Bible that tells us the story of Jesus.

One day they were in a big crowd when Jesus suddenly said: "Who touched Me?" A sick old woman answered: "I did. I touched Your robe because I was sure if I did I would get well. And I am well."

Jesus praised God for her faith. Over and over He told the people to have faith.

He always made friends with boys and girls, no matter how young they were. At His meetings, they would always try to get way up front. They wanted to be near Him. Some people thought they were too young to know what Jesus was talking about. They thought the boys and girls ought to go away and play. But Jesus called the children to Him. He set one boy on His lap and He said:

"Let the children come to Me and do not forbid them for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Which meant that happy humility of unspoiled children is like a road to Heaven.

And He said:

"Unless you can be like little children there is no way for you to enter the Kingdom of Heaven."

And the grownups knew just what He meant. They knew that boys and girls are ready to learn. They obey. They are not too proud to ask for help. Grownups must be like that, too.

Tomorrow: Jesus gives us a prayer to say.

Statement May Help to Free Two in Prison

TORONTO (CP) — A sworn statement given by convicted murderer Leonard Jackson eight hours before his execution Monday night may help free two men now serving penitentiary terms for robbery.

Arthur Maloney, Jackson's lawyer, said Tuesday the statement said Louis Stavroff and Anthony Brunet had nothing to do with the holdup of a Toronto bank for which they were convicted.

It quoted Jackson as saying he himself was a member of the four-man team which used quarterback signals to carry out the robbery. Jackson said Stavroff and Brunet were found guilty after witnesses erred in identifying them as robbers.

Brunet's case is already under review by the justice department. The statement will be sent to the department for consideration.

Demented Man Caught by Police In Palace Grounds

LONDON (AP) — An alert police dog nabbed a demented man early today as he invaded Buckingham Palace grounds.

Guards said the dog, Bruce, grabbed the man, 27, just as he dropped over a brick wall bordering the north side of the palace grounds. Bruce's handler responded to the dog's barking and took the man into custody.

A doctor who examined the intruder at a police station said the man was of unsound mind. He was taken to hospital for further observation.

It was the second hectic invasion of the Queen's garden in two months. In October a young Irishman—later found insane—climbed the wall and dropped into the arms of a waiting policeman.

STRIKE AGAINST ARMY

TOKYO (Reuters)—More than 2,000 Japanese workers employed by the United States armed forces in the Yokohama area today launched a 24-hour strike for improved working conditions.

Traffic Delay Beyond Control Of Department

TORONTO (CP) — Expanding boundaries of several Ontario cities this year have been responsible for new winter maintenance problems, highway department officials said Tuesday. Small sections of highways turned over to cities as a sequel to annexations are causing some concern.

An example is a portion of Highway 2 between Kingston and Cataraqui. About five miles of this highway were turned over to the city when Kingston expanded westward this year. A serious road blockade developed on that section due to the snowstorm of December 14 and 15 and traffic was held up for about six hours.

The traffic delay was beyond the control of the department of highways, since the section causing the trouble now is within the city of Kingston, the department said.

To prevent repetition of such a blockade, the department says it will try to give emergency service on recently annexed sections of highways to the cities concerned will authorize the expenditure required for use of department equipment and winter maintenance forces.

ORNAMENTAL LIGHTS

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Police here don't like those ornamental traffic-light devices some motorists have in the back of their cars. The light shows red when the auto is halted; amber when it is pulling away and green when it is well in motion. One traffic sergeant said a green light on the rear is illegal.

EARTH TREMOR FELT

HENSALL (CP)—Residents of Hensall felt a slight earth tremor early Tuesday. Mrs. E. R. Davis was sewing when the chair she was sitting on started to dance. The windows and doors shook and the ornaments almost fell off the cabinet.

Christmas Concert

RIVERSIDE SCHOOL

The school was attractive with its false ceiling of red and green streamers, blackboard drawings, window and piano decorations and numerous cards and Santas. Many sets of colored electric lights and candles lighted up the school tree, walls and blackboard. An attractive fireplace threw its red glow across the stage.

The pupils under the direction of their teacher, Arthur M. Rodgers, with Miss Rhea Rose as pianist, and Rev. A. E. Baker acting as chairman, presented a varied program. Several choruses, musical numbers and a play were given by the pupils. The gay evening ended with arrival of Santa Claus and presentation of gifts to the children.

Recitation, "How Do You Do," by Harry Vreugdenhil; recitation, "Christmas Greetings," by Alice Crowe; recitation, "A Christmas Song" by Lillian Crowe; recitation, "Little Jack Horner," by Arnie Armstrong; recitation, "The First Christmas," by Edith Crowe; duet, "Winter Wonderland," by Ken Rose and Rev. Wannamaker; recitation by Shirley Howes and Ruth Mercer; number (grade 1) recitation "Santa's Pilot", Frank Vreugdenhil; piano solo by Kenneth Crowe; recitation, "Telephoning Santa," by Barbara Hearsey; recitation, "Arnie Armstrong; recitation, "Celebrate Christmas Right," by Mary Ann Way," by Beverley Wannamaker; chorus by the school, "Star of the East," with part by Carolyn Rose; recitation, "Santa and the Mouse," by Patsy Armstrong; piano solo by Beverley Wannamaker; recitation, "The Russian Santa Claus," by Adrian Vreugdenhil; recitation, "The Christmas Piece," by Maureen Vreugdenhil; draw for the door prize, won by Mrs. Ann Armstrong; recitation, "When Daddy Lights His Pipe," by Kenneth Rose; recitation, "Santa Claus Arrival," by Lorie Vreugdenhil; recitation, "Announcing Santa," by Ruth Mccumber.

SALVATION ARMY Y.P.

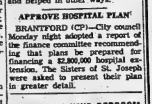
With Senior Captain Fred Brightwell in the chair, the program opened with "Hark the Herald Angels," followed by prayer conducted by George Ellerby, lieutenant-major of the Young People's group. Barbara Worley led the Bible Study.

"Little Star" was the title of a recitation by Lynn Reid. Hughie Bondy and Pamela Brown combined to sing a Christmas medley. The Worley sisters sang "C is For the Christ-Child." This was followed by recitations by Pamela Brown, Bob Worley and Norma Lucas.

A play, "A Visit From Tom," was presented by the teachers of Station Street Sunday School. After Captain Brightwell gave a piano selection, the Bell Melody Jr. Daughterly closed the program with a prayer.

The evening was concluded with a visit from Santa Claus.

FRANKFORD SCHOOL



Frankford—Frankford Public School held their annual Christmas concert in the Frankford Community Hall Friday evening. The concert was well attended. Principal A. C. Bates was master of ceremonies for the evening, with Miss Phyllis Slow and Mrs. Olive Williams directing the music. The program was as follows: "O Canada"; "We Welcome You," Maureen Andrews; "Santa's Workshop," Frankford and Batawa Kindergartens, Misses Slow and Casemore; piano number, "Good King Wenceslaus" and "Now We Sing Merrily," by Mary and Helen Pievak; Rhythm Band, Grade 1, Mrs. Arbuckle; piano solo, Keith Lohnes; "Yellow Butterfly"; "Choral Verse Speaking" Grade 4, Mrs. Grant; piano solo, Peter Horcics, Grade 6; "Minue Pie", Batawa, Casement; piano solo, Donna Tower; "Cinderella", Grade 2, Miss Hopkins; piano solo, James Curry, "The Happy Princess"; "Christmas With Hollies", grade 3, Mrs. Cochrane; "Rudolph's Nose Trouble," Grade 1, Mrs. Arbuckle; piano solo, Judy Plumpmore, "The Evening Song"; drill, Batawa, Miss Casement; dialogue, "Lost Spirit of Christmas," Grade 4, Mrs. Grant; choir, Grades 6, 7, 8, Miss Casement; piano solo, Barbara Curry, "March"; play, "Hidden-in-Christmas Present," Grades 5, 6, Mr. Cosgrove; duet, Donna and Betty Lou Tower, "Silent Night"; Grade 1, with choir; play, "The Party Line," Mrs. Osterhout; "Splendid Wheel Act", Grade 2, Mrs. Cochrane; "Star of the East," Mrs. Bates; Kathleen Bates; piano; play, "Who Gets the Car Tonight" Grade—8, A. C. Bates; choir, Grades 3, 4, Mrs. Cosgrove; nativity play, Grade 2, Mrs. Hopkins.

In conclusion of the program, Mr. Bates thanked the teachers and pupils for their many hours of work in getting the program ready. Also the mothers of the children who had made costumes and helped in other ways.

CRITICISM

Mr. Garson said 16 prosecutions have been launched as a result of the Petawawa thefts which provoked the Currie inquiry and that there have been 11 convictions. He said the thefts are attributable to "human frailty" rather than to the Army accounting system and said judgment on the system should be suspended pending the committee study, expected early next year.

Low Joins Call

There have been reports in parliamentary corridors that Mr. Claxton will be asked to return early from the Paris Atlantic pact meeting to reply to the opposition charges.

However, Prime Minister St Laurent, asked by a reporter outside the House about the rumors said the early recalling of Mr. Claxton hasn't been considered.

The defence department said the minister is due back Saturday. It has been hoped to spend the pre-Christmas sittings of the House by Thursday.

In the minister's absence, one of Parliament's toughest battles in recent years has boiled up and his name is in the thick of it.

Several Progressive Conservative members, led by Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary East), a wartime artillery officer, Tuesday demanded that Mr. Claxton resign because, they said, full responsibility for the breakdown rests on his shoulders. Col. Harkness accused the minister of dereliction of duty.

Remark Withdrawn

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, contended that Mr. Claxton has forfeited the right to have his word accepted by the House because alleged differences between things the minister has said and things in the Currie report. He withdrew this remark on the instructions of Speaker Ross Macdonald but argued that "the facts speak for themselves."

Percy Wright—who, like Col. Harkness, Mr. Drew and Mr. Claxton, is an old artillery man—said the minister may even have fished in the waters of a $3,000-$4,000 dam built at public expense at Camp Petawawa, Ont., and used by officers for fishing.

One private Liberal member discussed the report. F. G. Robertson (L—Northumberland), a squadron leader in the medical branch of the RCAF in the last war, said persons in the defence department guilty of "disgraceful conduct" should be "ruthlessly punished."

He was sure the government would see that they were. It should not be forgotten that it was the government that launched the Currie investigation and that most of those guilty already were prosecuted.

A Tense Day

The day was a tense one.

In the midst of the battling, a bottle made strange by the fact that the government was letting the opposition do almost all the talking, the Commons found itself voting on a Social Credit amendment which amounted to a motion of want-of-confidence in the government.

The Conservatives sided with the Liberals to throw the amendment to the policy-setting throne speech by a vote of 115 to 20. Mr. Drew had explained earlier that his party could not vote for the amendment because it was founded on "distrustous" Social Credit theories.

Once the amendment was out of the way, the throne speech debate went on. A new CCF amendment quickly emerged, one calling for payment to farmers for wheat stored on farms of up to 75 per cent of the initial price they would receive for their wheat in each crop year.

Mr. Drew joined other members of his party in accusing the government of planning to try to throw the blame for unsatisfactory conditions on the army general staff. The government was looking for a scapegoat.

Blame in One Place Claim

The blame rested in one place, on Mr. Claxton and the cabinet as a whole. The "pompous facade" with which the government had so long covered the defence effort had been torn away.

The Currie report indicated plainly that the situation demands a full-fledged and independent inquiry and he suggested that it should be made by the same George S. Currie accounting firm of Montreal which investigated the army works services. The inquiry should cover the whole question of organization and accounting in the defence department.

Mr. Drew noted that the Currie report was dated Nov. 26 and not tabled in the Commons until Monday, Dec. 15, a week after the government says the defence department received it.

He would like to know, he said, what happened in the report between Nov. 26 and Dec. 15 and he requested a government reply to CCF statements that it was changed. He said Mr. Claxton, in replying to questions in the weeks before the report was tabled, stated that no interim report had been received.

Word Doubted

Yet the Currie report said "interim suggestions made by me during the investigations have already been seized on and important reforms are already being carried out." This, said Mr. Drew, raises the question whether any member can again accept Mr. Claxton's word.

Col. Harkness said traditional British parliamentary practice indicates Mr. Claxton should resign at once because he had been found guilty of "dereliction of duty."

Mr. Wright accused the government of being "more interested in protecting the people they are investigating than in protecting the people's money." He said this was borne out by tabling of a memo by Lt.-Gen. G. G. Simonds, chief of the general staff, in which exception was taken to some phases of the Currie report.

The government had put irregularities down as petty pilfering. They were far more serious. And there was no excuse at all for the fact that army auditors' warnings of unsatisfactory conditions were ignored time and again.

Currie in Middle

Mr. Fleming suggested that the government might try to make a scapegoat out of Mr. Currie, but that would be "biting off a great deal more than they can chew."

Earlier statements by Mr. St. Laurent had indicated his belief that the government should not be held responsible for the Petawawa thefts.

"Well," said Mr. Fleming, "if that is all the prime minister has learned about the cessions of responsible government, then it is high time he made way for somebody who does understand those elementary principles."

At the night session, Hazen Argue (CCF-Assiniboia) said he was amazed at the contents of the report and that if the defence department had been doing its job the irregularities could not have occurred. For that and other reasons, he urged the calling of an election as soon as possible.

Expresses Concern

Mr. Low expressed concern on three aspects of the report: its substantiation of past warnings that there should be safeguards against dishonesty and graft it in the defence program indications that officials in responsible positions have winked at wrongdoings; and the "shocking revelation" that there were two differing copies of the report.

The government should now "crack down hard" on those responsible for the irregularities "and it must not overlook those in the top positions, for they are guilty, no doubt about that."

Mr. Garson spoke only briefly on the Currie affair. He said the evidence that came out in the Petawawa trials established clearly that , whatever the merits or demerits of the Army's accounting system, the conditions at Petawawa indicate that what happened was not attributable to the system but to human frailty by those who occupied senior positions in the Army works company.

(Two engineer officers were among those prosecuted, one a major, the other a captain.)

Advancing Own Ends

These men were determined to advance their own ends through circumvention of regulations and falsification of records. In any large organization such as the Army, it was necessary to delegate authority and rely on human honesty. No system could prevent dishonesty.

It behooved all members in a case such as this to withhold judgment until the defence committee had a chance to study whether the system was bad.

Christmas Leave Comes to Halt By Accident

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man. (CP) — A 30-day Christmas leave came to an abrupt halt Tuesday when a Camp Shilo, Man., soldier was seriously injured in a highway accident.

Sgt. Charles Goldring, 36, his wife, Jean, and their three small children were en route to his parents' home at St. Catharines, Ont., for Christmas when their car went out of control and rolled over in a ditch two miles west of Austin, Man., midway between here and Brandon.

Sgt. Goldring was taken to Portage hospital with a possible fractured shoulder and pelvic injuries.

His condition is fair.

Mrs. Goldring, Hugh, 1, Phillip, 4, and Paul, 5, escaped serious injury.

Telegram Says Gen. Guy Simonds May Leave Post

TORONTO (CP)—The Telegram said Tuesday in a dispatch from Ottawa that Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds is threatening to resign as chief of the Canadian Army general staff over the Currie report on defence spending.

"Gen. Simonds was closeted for several hours this morning with ranking defence department officials," the story said. "He is reported to have told fellow officers that he will resign unless the government acts quickly to absolve him from all blame in connection with yesterday's disclosures of inefficiency and waste in the handling of defence spending."

Want New Board

WINDSOR, Ont., (CP) — City council Tuesday night passed a resolution requesting the provincial government to take "necessary steps" to establish a new board of directors for East Windsor Hospital.

Such action was one of several recommendations made in the report issued by commissioner Gordon L. Fraser following a recent investigation into operation and management of the hospital.

Alderman Archie Munro, a council representative on the board, made the motion after criticizing the board for its "laxity."

PUSH UP PROFITS
PULL DOWN COSTS

GMC-72SA

Doesn't matter where you go, in every field you'll find cost-conscious truck operators turning to GMC's for the kind of performance that spells profit. The basic reason is simple. It's just that, whatever kind of work you set it to, a GMC has the power and stamina to handle the job at consistently lower cost—and keep on doing it year after year.

It's this ability to pull down costs and push up profits that haulers want—and get in a GMC Truck. GMC builds the widest range of truck engines in the industry—valve-in-head gasoline engines from 92 to 200 H.P., exclusive 2-cycle Diesels from 110 to 225 horsepower.

That means GMC gives the hauler exactly the kind of husky horsepower he needs in a truck that's "engined" to do the job right.

There are countless other solid reasons why—truck, tractor or six-wheeler—your GMC dealer has the one you need. See him today!

Britain Faces the New Year Girded as Never Before In Her Peacetime History

By EDWIN R. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—With more than 1,200,000 men and women under arms backed up by a civilian force of some 1,500,000 on armament production, Britain faces the new year girded as never before in her peacetime history.

In an effort to forestall the possibility of war, Britons have dug deeply into defence resources and steeled themselves to continued austerity. But they face 1953 with a few conviction that they and their allies finally are strong enough to deal with any attack that might be launched against them.

Prime Minister Churchill recently gave added fillip to the belief that the danger of a head-on clash with Soviet Russia and her Communist satellites was receding, by scaling down Britain's huge budget estimarked for defence.

Original Program

Original plans, drawn up in 1951 by the former Socialist government, called for a three-year spending program of some $13,600,000,000. This was a big step up from the $11 stretched to cover a period of four years because of the country's financial plight.

Effective next year the government has decided to peg defence production at an annual expenditure of about $1,680,000,000. This, the prime minister said, was done not only to safeguard the nation's solvency but to keep production of weapons and equipment being superseded by new and better types.

The latest estimates, Mr. Churchill explained, in no way implied any weakening of the country's resolve to defend itself or fulfil its obligations to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In fact, he made it known there was no immediate hope of cutting down the strength of Britain's forces. If she were to do so, instead of setting an example to the Western continental powers, he said it might bring about an almost complete collapse of NATO.

Huge Arms Outlay

During the fiscal year ending next April 30, Britain is committed to an arms outlay of nearly $3,760,520,000 distributed among the three services as follows: army, $1,460,260,000; navy, $1,000,440,000; air force, $1,309,280,00.

This represents approximately 12.8 per cent of the nation's gross annual income, and a higher percentage of defence outlay than any other European member of the Western treaty set-up.

Any modifications of plans agreed upon at the recent NATO meetings in Paris will be announced in a government White Paper next February. But under the current program Britain eventually will be able to muster a peacetime strength of 22 divisions for policing service abroad and duty at home, a considerable proportion armored.

Western Europe is also assured of a mighty bulwark of defence in the British Navy.

Advanced Aircraft

In the air Britain has given super-priority to production of the more advanced types of aircraft many still on the secret list. And operating with the expanding RAF are fully-trained United States and Canadian squadrons.

Special tribute to the efficiency of Canada's No. 1 fighter wing, based at North Luffenham, in Rutlandshire, was paid by Mr. Churchill during a visit early in December by Defence Minister Brooke Claxton.

On the home front a strong fighting force is being mobilized as a precautionary double invasion by air. Behind this force are the home guard as well as a highly-trained civil defence service.

Because of world commitments Britain has decided to retain the period of two years' national service.

SUPPORT SEAWAY

DETROIT (CP)—Detroit common council and the ways and means committee of Wayne county board of supervisors Tuesday pledged $25,000 in support of a campaign to get congressional approval next year of United States participation in the proposed St. Lawrence seaway project. The county pledged $25,000 of this first contribution. The city, making its third donation, pledged $10,000.

RCAF to Play Santa Claus To Arctic Residents

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCAF this week takes over its annual job of playing Santa Claus to Canada's isolated arctic weathermen in Santa's back yard.

Some 3,000 pounds of Christmas parcels and mail have been assembled at Fort Churchill, Man., and Goose Bay, Labrador, waiting for an all - clear signal from the weather men before the bundles are flown to the remote detachments.

News and gifts from home will be dropped to men at such places as Resolution Island off the southeast end of Baffin Island; Nottingham Island at the entrance to Hudson Bay, and the Mould Bay station in Prince Patrick Island in the West Arctic 300 miles north of the mainland.

Farthest north is Alert, on the north end of Ellesmere Island, the most distant of Canadian possessions. It is more than 2,200 miles north of Montreal and less than 600 miles from the north pole.

Started in October

Preparations started in October when the two-ship Montcalm, which operates the weather stations, told families of men there to send parcels and mail to the RCAF by mid-November.

These were packed in special heavy canvas containers used for air drops. Although some supplies are scheduled, most are parked out the aircraft door to the snow some 50 feet below.

At the weather stations, men of the detachment and Eskimos who live nearby open up oil drums to mark the drop zone. Fires are lit in the drums to guide the planes, for arctic days in December provide roughly only two hours of twilight.

Israel's New President is Sworn In

Dr. Isaac Ben-Zvi, 68-year-old leader of the Israeli Labor Party, is seen in the parliament building, Jerusalem, as he took the oath of office to become the second president of Israel. Political and religious leaders of Israel as well as foreign diplomats were on hand for the inauguration. Ben-Zvi was elected by parliament to a four-year term to succeed Chaim Weizmann, who died last month. — Central Press Canadian.

Four Dogfights Bring Down One Communist MIG

SEOUL (AP) — Allied Sabre jet pilots shot down one Communist MiG-15 jet and damaged four in four dogfights over North Korea today, the Fifth Air Force said.

Pilots said the destroyed MIG crashed just north of the Yalu river, the Korean-Manchurian boundary.

Short, sharp patrol clashes spotted the frozen battle front, but the Eighth Army reported that only a few troops were involved.

The sharpest Red probes fell again in the Solgar ridge area of the central front, where six assaults were turned back. On the western front, an Allied raiding unit opened up with flamethrowers to overrun a Chinese Communist position northwest of Korangpo.

The Eighth Army reported that from Dec. 8 through Dec. 14, United Nations ground forces inflicted 3,462 casualties on the Reds —2,215 killed, 1,240 wounded and seven captured.

Defence Minister Does Not Intend To Hurry Home

PARIS (Reuters) — An official of the Canadian delegation to the North Atlantic council meeting today denied reports that Defence Minister Brooke Claxton intended returning home early to answer charges arising out of the Currie report of a "general breakdown of control" in the army works service.

He said Claxton would stay in Paris until the end of the meeting, expected Thursday, as planned, and then fly back to Canada.

The minister refused to comment on the Currie report alleging irregularities in the stores branch of the army. He has seen the document.

He had not heard of demands for his resignation in connection with the charges.

U.K. ACCEPTS DIPLOMAT

BELGRADE (AP) — Official sources reported today that the British government has accepted the appointment of Vladimar Wellebit as Yugoslavia's new ambassador to Britain. Wellebit, a Second World War partisan fighter, has been serving as minister to Italy.

Accused Found Guilty of Crime, Judged Insane

MANCHESTER, Eng. (CP)—Guilty but insane was the verdict Tuesday in the case of a smub-nosed young footman who wounded the Countess of Derby, 32, and killed two butlers with a sub-machine-gun in the Derbys' country mansion last Oct. 9.

The footman, Harold Winstanley, 19, was sentenced to an indefinite term in the Broadmoor prison for the criminally insane at the close of a one-day trial. The jury gave the verdict without retiring.

Winstanley pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity. Defence lawyer Rose Heilbron made much of testimony by other servants who witnessed the shootings, that the footman had a "mad look" in his eyes. The butlers he killed were Walter Stallard and Douglas Stuart.

Lady Derby, blonde and beautiful, testified she was dining alone in the dimly-lit smoking room watching television when she heard the door click.

Turning around, she said, she saw Winstanley with a submachine-gun at his hand. He told her to get up and turn around, she said, and then he shot her in the neck.

23 BELL CARILLON

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—The 23-bell carillon in the tower at the Canadian end of the Rainbow bridge will be used to play Christmas carols, Edison Kammeyer, general manager of the bridge, announced Monday. Beginning Dec. 21, Professor Robert Chrisschmidt will give recitals daily.

Kenneth Ford Will be Hanged On February 27

SWEETSBURG, Que. (CP)—Kenneth Ford, 36-year-old paymaster for a textile company near this eastern townships community, was convicted yesterday of the bath-tub slaying of his pregnant wife Feb. 8 last and was sentenced to be hanged on Feb. 27.

Ford, who showed little emotion during the 14-day trial, grew pale when the jury's verdict was announced.

Asked by Mr. Justice L. P. Cliche if he had anything to say before sentence was passed, Ford did not reply.

The nude body of Ford's 28-year-old wife, injuries about the head, was found in a partly-filled bath tub in the couple's home.

Highlight of the trial was admission as evidence of a statement by Ford and produced by Police. The statement described how Ford had struck his wife during a family quarrel ...

Mrs. Ford had accused him of taking out another girl and he had replied that it was "not as bad as having to bring up someone else's baby," the statement said. She had struck him and "I grabbed an iron bar...and hit her twice on the back of the head with it."

"I did not mean to hit her so hard, but she fell into the tub full length..." Ford said in the statement. He then "got scared and turned on the water and ran upstairs, horrified at what I had done."

Truman Orders Plan be Drawn To Provide Guarantee Disloyal Americans Don't Get UN Posts

NEW YORK (AP) — President Truman has ordered three branches of the government to collaborate on a plan to guarantee "a maximum of security in U. S. personnel employed at the United Nations."

The directive — revealed here by Attorney-General James P. McGranery — has the approval of Senator Alexander Wiley (Rep. Wis.), who is in line to become chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee in the new Congress.

McGranery announced the presidential order at a press conference Tuesday. The state and justice departments and the civil service commission were directed to work out the security plan. McGranery did not mention what the plan might consist of.

29 Dismissed

Twenty - nine Americans have been dismissed from the UN as a result of various Communist investigations. The firings were largely for refusing to answer questions about Communist affiliations.

Spokesmen for the state and justice departments said the president's order had only laid "the ground rules" for the program and that no details had been worked out yet.

The order, McGranery said, was issued as a result of the recent recommendations of a panel of three international jurists to UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie.

RESCUED FROM TRAP

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Manuel Martinez, 38, was rescued Tuesday after being trapped for four days beneath a load of steel in a railroad freight car. The station master heard Martinez' cries for help and called firemen. Martinez said he climbed aboard the car Saturday. When the train started to move, the jolt shifted the load, and a heavy steel sheet pinned his hips against the side of the car.

Sees World Peace Council Closely Associated With Russia and Its Satellites

By GERARD FILION

Picasso's dove won't bring peace to a world that is torpedoed by the dread of an atomic war. I came back from Peking convinced of this. I admit that there are a number of sincere and honest men in the peace movement. Most of them are idealists who want peace because they love it and hate war. But peace is not necessarily the result of a simple expression of this sentiment. Peace needs a sharp eye for reality. It needs certain concrete conditions.

The peace movement got off on the wrong foot. It could only push people closer to war even though officially its efforts appeared to lean towards the brotherhood of man.

Classic Contrast Each Other

When two opponents confront each other, you don't escape the danger by taking sides with either one. That's the surest way of getting in the row. The World Peace Council, despite all its efforts to look as if it were maintaining a friendly neutrality, had party ties with the Soviet bloc. This was immediately apparent to any observer who had an ounce of brains.

At Peking all criticism was directed against American imperialism, not against Russian imperialism. If I had been a delegate, I would have felt obliged to draw a parallel between the two. To condemn the occupation of Japan by the American army, but also that of Port Arthur and Darien by Russia. Again, I would have denounced the re-armament of Japan and West Germany, but also that of East Germany. I would have attacked the napalm bombings in Korea, but also the murder of Polish officers in the forest of Katyn.

Moscow hasn't got an easy conscience when it comes to imperialism. We remember her aggression against Finland and the annexation of Estonia and Pessamo; Lithuania, Letonia and Latvia; eastern Poland, the Sub-Carpathian Ukraine and Moldavia. Americans are attacked for their intolerance of their own colored people, but we must remember the splitting of the citizens of the German republic of the Volga and the extermination of several national minorities.

No one at Peking thought for a moment of drawing this parallel and no one seemed interested in looking at both sides of the question.

As an example of the partiality of the Peking meetings, one of resolutions passed by the Peace Congress, I might point out that the last speech made by Mr. Vishinsky at the United Nations repeated exactly the same arguments I had heard at the Peking congress. Besides, if you would have thought he had been present at the sessions; that he had inspired them or had been inspired by them. Only fools — and there are plenty of them in such places — couldn't see it. This obvious bias is quite enough to turn serious, honest people away from the peace movement. Such people are against all propaganda. Peace is much too important an issue to let it fall into the hands of political schemers.

But if Picasso's dove does not bring a message of peace to the world, how can we possibly avoid war?

The Bowl of Rice

If we want to avoid war, we must first of all see that men have enough to eat. There are millions of men, women and children in the Far East whose only interest is in keeping body and soul together. Their whole life depends on a daily bowl of rice. If they can't get it, they die.

There was a time when men died without complaining. You might say they were used to it. Death was a part of their moral and philosophical education. Besides, they didn't know that on other continents men did not die when there was a shortage of bread and rice.

This is not the case in the 20th century. Even the poorest peasant in India and the most miserable coolie in China knows that there are countries where men are well dressed, well housed, well fed, where men drive cars, listen to the radio, go to the movies and travel by airplane. The most obvious thing is that this knowledge that well-being has been gained partly by the exploitation of their country and their labor.

Just as steps had to be taken inside western countries to prevent the rich from exploiting the poor, so, on an international scale, steps must be taken to prevent upstart and well-developed countries from spoiling those nations which have remained primitive in their economy. The rising living standards of workers in western countries is often accompanied by a lowering of the living standard of employers. In the same way perhaps certain imperialist countries should accept a lower standard of living so that other peoples could live more decently.

Seek Liberation

Force of arms will hold back the hatred of the exploited peoples for a time. But already from monsoon Asia, from the Near East, from North Africa and Black Africa, from Latin America, from everywhere that men live in the most abject misery, from everywhere that colored peoples are exploited by whites, there is a bubbling forth of ideas and feelings which will lead to liberation — or the growth also of Marxism.

If I were allowed to offer a discreet word of advice to the missionaries who go forth to preach the gospel in infidel lands, I would say to them: Today, it is no longer good enough to open dispensaries, hospitals, orphanages and schools, colleges and universities to attract pagans to the church. While you are caring for their bodies and cultivating their minds, social forces are working against you. The preaching of the gospel must be accompanied by the proclamation of social justice. Otherwise, the Communists will come up behind you to take away the people whom you have initiated into Christian civilization. The Red Flag will replace the Cross. Communism will gain support for its plans from the landless people and the colored people. Christianity must show that it is a force for social justice quite as much as it is a philosophy of resignation.

Wall of prejudice or Iron Curtain? Neither one nor the other. It is not by closing its frontiers that the Soviet bloc has retreated from the West. It is because its philosophy is incompatible with Christianity. It has founded a new church whose heart and head are in the Kremlin. But we know that this church does not possess, like the other one does, the promise of salvation.

Counsel for Dept. Argues Against The Witnesses

OTTAWA (CP)—Counsel for the Quebec attorney-general's department said Tuesday in the Supreme Court of Canada that certain practices of Witnesses of Jehovah are inconsistent with peace and safety of the province.

Emery Beaulieu of Montreal said some of the practices of the Witnesses constitute an excess of liberty. These practices made them agents of the Communists and distributors of pamphlets or literature without a permit from the chief of police.

Counsel for the Witnesses has argued that the by-law is invalid because it interferes with freedom of religion. Counsel has said that Witnesses believe it their duty to spread the gospel. One of the means they use is to hand out Bible tracts on the streets.

The Witnesses have asked the court to declare that they constitute a religious denomination, entitled to the same freedoms as other denominations.

Mr. Beaulieu is to continue his arguments today.

OPERATE ON REUTHER

DETROIT (AP)—Walter P. Reuther, 46, president of the CIO, was operated on Tuesday for the removal of his gall bladder. The United Auto Workers (CIO) issued a statement quoting the operating surgeon, Dr C. Saltzstein, said Ed was "getting on fine" after the operation had gone "smoothly." No complications are expected, it was said.

Prepared for Tough Tasks That Lie Ahead

Looking tanned, fit and ready for the job ahead of him, President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower with secretary of state designate John Foster Dulles at his side, waves heartily from behind a bank of microphones following his arrival at New York's LaGuardia airport from a 22,000-mile mission to Korea. In a brief address at the airfield, Ike said "that the knowledge he and his associates had gained in Korea will prepare us for whatever tough tasks lie ahead." He also warned Russia, "it would be fateful folly," to start other wars like the one he had just viewed first-hand. — Central Press Canadian.

Drivers Urged To be Careful During Holiday

TORONTO (CP)—Highways Minister Doucett Tuesday urged Ontario drivers and pedestrians to cooperate in preventing needless accidents during the Christmas season.

"Christmas ushers in a season of festivity and good fellowship," he said, "and it also brings a time of increased traffic dangers.

"Two years ago our worst single day for fatal traffic accidents was Dec. 23, the last shopping day before Christmas. On that Saturday, 19 persons were killed.

TWO DIE IN CRASH

STONEHAM, Que. (CP)—Two men were killed Tuesday when their delivery truck crashed head-on into a bus in this small town, 20 miles north of Quebec City. The dead were identified as Harold McKee of Valcartier, Que., and A. Bergeron of Quebec, owner of the truck. No one was injured in the bus, police said.

GIRLS DIE IN FIRE

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — A gasoline stove exploded in a two-storey house Tuesday and three girls were burned to death. The victims were Lillymae, Fern, 17, and her sisters Rachael, 14 and Judy 12.

Merry, Merry Xmas!!

Such a time for real mellow re-union.

Such fun for everyone.

Such enjoyment during the most wonderful, heart-warming time of the year in that centuries-old refrain "A Merry, Merry Xmas to all".

Demand for Steel Continues High

NEW YORK (AP) — The Iron Age, metalworking trade weekly, says today a "continued clamor for steel from nearly all types of durable goods fabricators" has surprised steel sales officials.

"Many steel people had expected first signs of easing demand to start showing about the first of the year," the publication says.

Instead, the steel market looks tighter now than it has for several weeks.

Autos, appliances, oil and gas, freight cars, construction, and military hard goods are listed as a few bulwarks of demand.

Describing auto makers as seeking to build 6,500,000 cars and 2,500,000 trucks in 1953, the Iron Age says "the very existence of such an ambitious production target will exert plenty of pressure on the market for a long while."

SEEK HAVEN IN U.S.

PANAMA Panama (AP) — Seven leaders of Venezuela's opposition Democratic Republican party arrived in Panama Tuesday night as political refugees from the regime of their country's new president, Lt.-Col. Marcos Perez Jimenez. Military backers installed Perez Jiminez as president Dec. 2 after early returns from elections two days before showed the opposition leading.

Wife of Jeweller Identifies Man Who Shot Husband

BUFFALO, N.Y., (AP) — Mrs. Doris Hurd, widow of a jeweller slain Dec. 3 during a holdup of his shop here, has identified Maurice (Digger) O'Dell as the man who shot her husband, it was reported today.

The Buffalo Courier-Express said Mrs. Hurd went to Hamilton, Ont., Tuesday night and picked out O'Dell and Walter E. Griffin, 26, from a police line-up.

Mrs. Hurd was in the jewelry shop when it was held up. She previously had identified the pair from rogues gallery photos.

The newspaper said she identified 37-year-old O'Dell as the man who shot her husband, and Griffen as one of the two other men sought in connection with the holdup of Donald F. Hurd's store.

O'Dell and Griffen are being held in Hamilton on charges of murder and armed robbery based on information in detention warrants. A third warrant is out for the arrest of Ralph J. Grubisch, about 30, of Kitchener, Ont., in connection with the robbery of about $50,000 worth of gems from the Hurd jewelry shop here.

Making Best of Housing Situation!

This stork, too weak to fly south when the winter arrived in Germany, is making the best of housing problem by hibernating with a family of pigs in the village of Hillemuehle. The big bird, caught by some boys, who seemed to understand its predicament, eats 1½ pounds of fish a day. — Central Press Canadian.

Two Are Killed 150 Feet Down Ore-Pass, Killed

SUDBURY (CP) — Two veteran miners were killed late Tuesday when a working platform broke and hurled them 150 feet down an ore-pass at the 1,500-foot level of Falconbridge's main shaft.

George E. Black, 58, and William T. Watkins, 37, were repairing timber from a stage set up in the ore-pass. As the job neared completion a plank broke and the men fell.

Watkins' safety rope apparently broke. Fellow workmen said Black's was unfastened.

Black was a veteran of 21 years with the company, Watkins an experienced miner who joined the company two months ago.

JAP MINERS GO BACK

TOKYO (Reuters)—Japanese coal miners returned to work today after the government invoked an emergency law to end their 10-day-long strike. The miners central struggle committee accepted a government mediation offer giving the men a seven-per-cent wage increase, an incentive allowance and a temporary allowance of 3,000 yen $14.

Women's Press Club Names Rita, Lanza Least Co-operative

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Hollywood Women's Press Club Tuesday named Rita Hayworth and Mario Lanza as the least co-operative stars in 1952.

Runners-up for this designation were Marlon Brando and Esther Williams.

For the first time in the 15-year history of the awards, a husband and wife were voted the most co-operative. They are Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh.

One Vote Reversed

TEESWATER (CP)— The results of a plebiscite approving men's beverage rooms were upheld here Tuesday but the decision to allow women's beverage rooms was reversed.

A petition submitted a month ago asked for investigation of a vote held Sept 4 which approved both by the required 60 per cent majority. The investigation by Judge A. S. P. Burney of Owen Sound resulted in 15 votes being disallowed.

Teeswater is 35 miles south of Owen Sound.

Mosquitos to Face Death-Dealing Dose

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mosquitos which have built up a resistance to death-dealing DDT face a new insect killer — EPN, the American Association of Economic Entomologists was told today.

A one-ounce dose an acre of the insecticide, applied by plane or ground sprayer, gave almost complete kills of DDT-resistant larvae, the agriculture department reported.

If improperly used, the department warned, EPN is highly toxic to man and other warm-blooded animals. It is not likely the insecticide will be made available for use other than under rigid supervision, the department said.

Final Fling Before Going Home Gave Canadians Bad Name But Reputation Is Improving

The Canadian Press assigned Bill Boss, its chief writer with the Canadian forces in Korea, to investigate Japanese press reports of a "reign of terror" by Commonwealth and Canadian troops in Kure, Japan. He found the reports exaggerated, though Canadians have been involved in many crimes. In this story, one of a series, he describes Canadian Army action to control the crime situation.

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Kure, Japan (CP)—The final fling before going home has got Canadians a bad name here but their reputation is improving.

The 600 Canadians with jobs in Kure are well behaved, army authorities say, they know that blotting their copy-books means a ticket to Korea.

Celebrating transients have been causing the trouble. Commonwealth and Canadian officials gave me three main reasons:

1. Too much money.
2. Drink—they can't handle much —and fast women.
3. Too much play time.

Free Spenders

"Extravagant spending by chaps on their way to Canada was at the bottom of most of the trouble," said Col. Willis Moogk of Ottawa, colonel in charge of administration for the 25th Canadian brigade.

"Some fellows, including officers, blew the works. They hadn't a penny left by the time they caught the boat.

"Most offences here have been due to drunkenness—money, liquor and women. The crimes haven't been serious."

Commonwealth authorities said convalescents from Korea, awaiting posting back to units, also used to be among those in trouble.

Kure, 555 miles by train southwest of Tokyo, is a city of 185,000. It had 2,061 serious crimes between April 28 when Japanese sovereignty was restored and Nov. 15. Commonwealth soldiers committed only 239 of those crimes...of which the Canadians were responsible for 97.

Army Steps In

But Canadian authorities, alarmed by the behavior of Canadians, clamped down on lawlessness. In August, 44 per cent of the 1,098 offences listed on the Commonwealth forces' police blotter were Canadian offences. In October, Canadians were charged with 221 offences in a total of 662.

Kure, once a major Japanese arsenal and naval port, caters to all the vices. Officers say Kure's own character and the Canadian Army's approach to conditions there were responsible for the crime situation among the troops.

It now is admitted that reinforcements for Korea waited too long in Kure. One unit officer said Kure also got "clogged" with officers and men posted back from Korea "because they showed lack of ability, character, or personality. Their incompetence was reflected in Kure troop discipline.

In addition, Canada at the start took no part in the broad military administration in Kure, which has the headquarters and base installations of British Commonwealth Forces in Korea.

Tardy Response

When the Canadians first were stationed at Kure in 1950, said Maj. Lex Johnson, Australian deputy assistant provost marshal, requests from BCFK for Canadian military police were ignored. Six months later 30 infantrymen from the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry came in as regimental police, but the policing of Kure was done by red-capped British provost until this year.

Now Canadian provost personnel share in patrols of the base military police company and look after their derelict fellow-countrymen.

In earlier days, Japan was an occupied country.

"Things were much more open then and many things happened which were never reported," said Maj. Johnson.

"The apparent increase in military crime is due to the fact that since April 28 Le Japanese have been laying complaints. That was never done before."

Under Occupation

"The number of offences during the occupation may have been double the number since the peace treaty came into effect last April."

Noboru Iizuka, head of the newspaper Asahi Shimbun's office, said "bad conduct" by personnel, bar and brothel operators undoubtedly contributed to the Commonwealth troops' crime record.

Brig. M. P. Rogers, commander of the 25th Canadian brigade and senior Canadian officer in the theatre, has dealt stringently with the Kure situation.

He ordered Kure cleaned of all reinforcements. The policy now is that reinforcements go straight to Korea after documentation here and brush-up courses at Camp Sasebo Haramura. In all, about 600 men were moved out of Kure.

(One result is that for the first time in months all units except the 1st battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment are over-strength.)

Brig. Rogers also ordered restric-

Boy Awarded Highest Honor For Bravery

LONDON (AP) — John Bamford, a 15-year-old Newthorpe coal mine worker who helped save his mother and three other children from their blazing home, Tuesday was awarded the George Cross, Britain's highest honor for bravery outside military combat. He is the youngest person ever to receive the award.

tions on the amount of money the troops can spend. Troops homeward bound were put on an allowance of $5 a day. Troops on leave were limited to $200 for their five days. Troops stationed in Kure may draw only one-half their basic pay plus any living or trades allowances to which they are entitled.

Finally, the brigadier raised the integrated provost strength to one officer and 25 men. More will be added.

Oct. 18. The boy crawled through flames to a bedroom and seized two younger brothers from their beds. He dropped one through a window to safety but the other became hysterical and ran back into the flames. John chased the screaming child, caught him and threw him out the window.

"I think He a bit daft," he said. "I didn't really do (anything)."

Signs New Agreement

HALIFAX (CP) — Premier Macdonald announced Tuesday that Nova Scotia has signed a new financial agreement with the federal government but at the same time called for a new federal-provincial conference to study revenue fields.

Announcing the new agreement under which the province will receive a guaranteed minimum payment of $15,348,230, Mr. Macdonald said:

"I do not think such agreements offer a permanent solution to our fiscal problems. Nova Scotia has consistently taken the view that the tax agreements, while relative for this province, are not the best system under which the federal, provincial and municipal governments could operate."

Mayor Says CNE Refuses to Give Amount of Profit

TORONTO (CP)—Mayor Lamport told city council Tuesday the Canadian National Exhibition refused to disclose to him the operating profit resulting from his 1952 reform campaign.

He was supporting a new contract between the city and the fair management which was adopted by council. It provides that the CNE receive its $32,000,000 assets in order to operate year round, pay both maintenance and operating costs and undertake all debt charges. The latter amount to be about $2,945,000.

Mayor Lamport said the improvements resulting from his reforms campaign this year might amount to $300,000.

BIRMINGHAM SNOWED IN

BIRMINGHAM, Eng. (Reuters)—Snowdrifts nine feet deep sealed up roads in this industrial city, Tuesday following Britain's worst pre-Christmas snowfall in 27 years. Nearly 1,000 men with 200 trucks and 32 giant snow-plows worked to clear the snow and ice.

BANCROFT

Members Honor F. Szammers At Smoker

Bancroft — F. Szammers, divisional engineer of the Bancroft division of the Department of Highways for the past nine years was honored at a smoker held Saturday night at Ohlo Lodge and attended by nearly 100 department members and associates.

Mr. Szammers has recently been transferred to Queen's Park. He was also in charge of the Bancroft division in 1937 before leaving to spend several years in Northern Ontario. He was presented with a matched luggage set and a silver tea service for Mrs. Szammers, who was unable to attend. A bouquet of roses was wired to her earlier in the day.

The presentations were made by fellow workers who expressed regret at his leaving and wished him every success at his new post.

Mr. H. Duff, stationed here for the past three years, has succeeded Mr. Szammers in charge of the division.

Lionettes Enjoy Turkey Dinner

Bancroft — Candlelight and gaily decorated tables and Christmas trees were the setting for a delicious turkey dinner enjoyed by the Lionettes at their annual Christmas party held in conjunction with the regular December meeting last Monday evening.

During the business discussion it was decided that the sum of $35 would be donated to the Lions' Club to assist in providing Christmas parcels to needy persons. It was also decided that a float representing the club would participate in the Santa Claus parade.

A lively debate on the subject, "The Abolition of Cosmetics" was much enjoyed by all.

Christmas carols were sung by the members with Mrs. Annie Thomoson at the piano. Mrs. Ray Tompkins acted as Santa Clause in the exchange of gifts from the tree.

Harry Meldrum Moore

"Ladies and gentlemen," he shouted, "the result of the voting in the hotly contested election gives Brown 398 votes, McTaggert 234. Curly Brown is your new mayor by a majority of one hundred-ty-five."

Loud cheers followed the announcement and someone remarked unkindly: "Now we'll go places we'll get something done!"

For a moment Curly stood in deep bewilderment. What had happened? Why had the electors let Bill McTaggert down? And then his fatal Bill McTaggert hands groping for his.

"Let me be the first to congratulate you, Curly," Bill said. "The people had shown by their vote that they want you, that they need you. I've sensed that fact for some time, and even though I knew you would beat me, I decided to make you fight for it, so that you would realize that this is something of value, and not a trinket that has been handed to you. And there's no man in the world to whom I would sooner bow in defeat than to you, Curly. May you go on from one success to another as you deserve it, my boy."

Curly afterwards could remember stammering how clean and fair the contest had been, and on the following day was thanking Bill McTaggert for paving his way to victory. Fed men would not have done that.

And out at Hard Acres an hour later, Hazel had her arms around him, was congratulating him on his victory. But Peter was too confused to understand.

"What will the reeve business anyway?" he asked.

"Well, Peter," Curly presumed to tell him, "it means that the man works real hard to become reeve — the head school, works harder to hold the job, and the better the reeve he is, the more the people will shy stones at him."

"I don't see much fun in being pelted with stones," Peter said.

"Curly's only joking," Hazel said sternly, "you know that's not true. First thing you know Peter will be believing such nonsense. And now, Reeve Brown, if you'll take your head out of the clouds for a few minutes, I'll tell you something. Ilge Barrier says that the trustees have appointed Percy Wren, a young man from Toronto, to teach school, beginning next Monday. Now, since Mrs. Barrier can't board him — "

"We do, I suppose?"

"Yes, that S, Curly. Now, what do you say?"

"Hazel," he said, "it's all in your own hands. If you think you can take him, and remember you have Heather Ann to look after now — "

"A man boarder is little trouble," Hazel said, "and we can fix up the big room, put in a little stove and make it real comfortable."

"How old is he?" Is he handsome?"

"He's twenty-six. What do you mean — handsome?"

"Well, after all, Hazel," Curly chuckled, "I'm human, am I not? And when a man has the best looking woman in the country for a wife, he can't afford to have a handsome young man hanging around the house. Now can he?"

Chapter XI

Due to the heavy roads, the stage bringing the new teacher to The Depot, was an hour late that night. Curly Brown, who had been waiting for him, drove alongside and helped a small bundled-up figure of a man and his trunk into his cutter.

Percy Wren's voice was pleasant, and he was a good conversationalist, too. But Curly was not to know what he looked like until he stepped into the light of the kitchen at Hard Acres some minutes later. Meanwhile he was admiring Curly's horses as they briskly trotted homeward. But, then he seemed to admire everything he saw, but not too offensively.

A day's thaw, followed by a sharp drop in temperature, had formed a heavy crust over the deep snow. And since this crust was strong enough to carry them, and there was moonlight, this was a night when hungry wolves would be on the prowl. Indeed, Curly could see already, in fact, several dark figures on the road near the bridge ahead. Dandy, the stallion, also saw them and switching his tail to signify whimsical a challenge to them to stand and fight. Barney, however, hung back in the traces. He wanted none of them. As the cutter rapidly approached them, the wolves slunk off the road into the bush. And as they did, Percy Wren's voice was heard above the rattle of harness, the pounding of hooves on the hard packed road.

"Who owns the dogs, Mr. Brown?"

"Not dogs," Curly shouted. Percy Wren was from the city, he could be excused for mistaking wolves for dogs. "Wolves — timber wolves." Curly shouted again.

"You have them here so close to town?" Percy questioned.

"Too many of them," Curly's grin widened, "They're getting to be a nuisance. Come right up to the back door, sit down and howl all night. In the morning, I have had seen so far. Percy walked erect like a man who was confident and sure of himself, while he spoke like a man who had the courage of his convictions and would back them up if he had to. As Curly studied him, he was struck by the remarkable resemblance the teacher bore to Peter, a resemblance that might be expected in an older brother. Later at the table, Peter was sizing up the new teacher and it was obvious by the way he was looking after him, that they would become fast friends in no time.

As they enjoyed their meal, Percy Wren explained that he had lived with an aunt in Toronto since the death of his parents. And in that case Mr. and Mrs. Brown might wonder why he wasn't in South Africa with the troops, the fault was not his own. He had been one of the first to answer the call, but he'd been told that since men teachers were scarce, he would be serving his country better at home at his profession.

"No one will ever hold that against you up here," Curly said. "As a matter of fact, I don't think there are more than half a dozen men from this district in the army for overseas duty. Not that they didn't want to go, but there were no places for them."

"There may be another war someday," Percy said thoughtfully, "I may yet get my chance to make amends." But little did Percy Wren know what was ahead and that twelve years later he would go to war, and never return.

After dinner, Percy asked Hazel for an apron. He would help with the dishes. But Hazel talked him out of it.

"You must be tired, Mr. Wren," she said, "But thank you, just the same, I think you better join Curly in the parlor."

"I wish you wouldn't call me Mr. Wren," Percy said, "it sounds too formal, and — " he turned to Curly, "the same holds for you, Mr. Brown."

"Curly Brown to you," Curly laughed.

Percy came over to shake hands. Curly's hand.

"This is indeed a surprise and a pleasure, Reeve Brown," he said, "Perhaps it's not the time to offer you my hearty congratulations."

A few minutes later, as they were sitting in front of a bright fire Percy caught Curly looking at his face.

"I've been expecting to hear you ask if I'd been in a wreck, Mr. Brown — Curly," he laughed. "My face is a mess, isn't it?"

"Yes," Curly agreed, "it has been well carved. How did it happen?"

"Playing lacrosse," Percy grinned, "I was playing for Toronto Indians, inside home. I got one across my nose in a game at the Island, and that one between my eyes at the Junction. But I had to go out to Newmarket for this — " he pointed to his forehead, "Big Bob McKendry tried to part my hair with his stick."

"And!" Curly asked for more.

"Well, suppose you take it from there," he challenged.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

Friends, Neighbors Honor Golden Anniversary

MOUNTAIN VIEW.—About 50 friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. James Kennedy met in the church basement to honor them on their 50th wedding anniversary recently.

After all those present had joined in a sing-song, the bride and groom of 50 years were asked to come to the front. Stanley Barber then read an address and the couple was presented with two occasional chairs from the community and two boxes of candy from the Mountain View Women's Institute. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cretney made suitable replies.

They will leave in a few days for British Columbia where they will spend the winter with two of their sons and their families.

Refreshments which included a special anniversary cake prepared by Mrs. S. Barber, were served.

CANADIANS TALK MOST

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadians are the world's gabbiest people on the telephone, a survey shows today. American Telegraph and Telephone Company, after consulting 250 countries, has come up with a phone chat ranking that Canadians averaged 378 telephone conversations per person in 1951, the world's record.

PLAN MONUMENT TO KING

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—The Niagara parks commission has decided to erect a monument to the late King George VI, who visited here with the Queen in June, 1939. The location and design will be decided by the commissioners after a special committee reports early next year.

JOHNSTOWN

Two Bay of Quinte W.I. Members Get Life Certificates

The Bay of Quinte Institute recently held its meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Palmer, of Bayside, president. Mrs. Ross Stickle opening the meeting.

A report was given on the Women's Institute convention held at Belleville by Mrs. R. Stickle and Mrs. John Reid.

At the business session it was decided to send some magazine subscriptions to the Hastings County Home for the use of the old people living there. A donation is to be given to the cemetery board and also a box to be sent to all shut-ins in the community at Christmas.

The meeting was then turned over to the convener of the evening, Mrs. George Clapp, who spoke on "Christmas." A choral reading was also enjoyed by the Institute, "Adeste Fideles" was sung and a candle lighted, as the members of England always put a lighted candle in the window every Christmas Eve. Mrs. Clapp then read a story concerning this custom.

Program

Mrs. B Benisteel read the Christmas story from the Bible; Joyce Curtis and Marg Sendercock entertained with a guitar selection; a reading "Mark The Herald Angels Sing" was given by Mrs. Palmer after which all joined in singing "Jingle Bells" with the accompaniment of real bells by Mrs. Palmer. This was followed by a Christmas story read by Mrs. Cecil Jeffery. All joined in singing "It Came Upon On A Midnight Clear" A reading, "Peace on Earth," was given by Mrs. Ava Meyers, followed by all making a ring and joining hands in singing, "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot."

Life Certificates

Life certificates were awarded to Mrs. Carey Ketcheson, who was present, and to Mrs C. Holmes, who was unavoidably absent, by Mrs. John Reid, who said: "Mrs. Ketcheson and Mrs. Holmes have both been exemplary members; Mrs. Ketcheson being president of Bay of Quinte Institute for two years and district president for West Hastings for three years. Mrs. Holmes was president of Wallbridge before moving into this community. She was also district president of West Hastings for three years and area chairman for the same length of time, later being appointed to the provincial board." Mrs. Reid gave the address, and Mrs Cecil Jeffery made the presentation to Mrs. Ketcheson. Mrs. Holmes will receive her certificate later.

Mrs. Ketcheson expressed appreciative thanks to the assembly for their kindness, saying that she would treasure the certificate most highly. She was most surprised.

Following the business session, Mrs. Frank Sandercock, acting for Santa Claus, distributed the gifts, later refreshments were served.

MADOC

Rebekah Lodge Holds Christmas Party

Madoc — After the regular meeting on Friday evening the members of Oakdale Rebekah Lodge held their Christmas party with their husbands and families as guests.

The program was held in the banquet hall which had a real holiday appearance with its gaily decorated Christmas tree balloons, and table with Christmas table cloth and candles. The program included: carol, "Silent Night," Mesdames P. Blakely, E. Hatch, M. Dooher and M. Lough; tap dance, "Sidewalks of New York" and "Glow Worm," Betty Lough; recitations by Jimmie Hatch; Carol Wilson, Diana Dooher, Jean Martin, June Hatch, Wallace Pitt; duet, "White Christmas", Janie Dooher and Betty Lough; piano solo, Eileen Pitt; solo, "Away in a Manger" June Hatch; reading, by Mrs. E. Heyworth; carol singing by various groups of the members; trick of magic, Mrs. Dooher and Mrs. Lough.

The program was concluded with three readings: "The Night Before Christmas," by Betty Leigh; "The Day After Christmas," by Mrs. H. McGowan; "The Night After Christmas," by Mrs. E. Hatch.

Bags of candy and nuts were distributed to the children and refreshments were served.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Hazel Johnson N.G. and her officers who had arranged such a pleasant evening, was expressed by Mrs. H. McGowan.

Seven Points Separate Top Five Clubs In NHL; Wings Lead By Three

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

PETES HERE FRIDAY!

The senior Glens take a ten-day rest after Friday night's tussle with the Peterborough Petes here in order to enjoy and get over the turkey and the trimmin's and other holiday fare. However Christmas does not arrive until next week and in the meantime that tussle with the Petes looms up on fish-day. The Liftlockers lost a heart-breaker to the Kingston Goodyears on Monday night by a 7-6 score and you can bet the family grubber they'll be all out Friday in an effort to pick up some much-needed points.

It should be one of those old-fashioned Peterborough-Belleville brawls with a lot of holiday fireworks tossed in. The teams have met three times this season with the Petes holding a two-one edge in games. However the Glens have struck a lightning stride, defeating Kingston twice, Oshawa and Stouffville and dropping one to the Petes in their last five starts. The Liftlockers were always tough nuts to crack in this village and there's no reason in sight why Friday's tilt should not be a crowd-pleaser.

LINKS TONIGHT!

Coach Don Barrett, of the Junior Hawks, who twists seven hankies and five boxes of tissue to pieces unless his prides are eleven goals up, has more worries, or at least some worries. It seems DeRoose, husky defenceman who suffered a ruptured blood-vessel in a leg, will be out until the new year, and now Ron Halstead, starry left winger, is out with a "Charley Horse" suffered in the Oshawa-Hawks game in Bowmanville Monday night. Barrett, however, has a remarkable faculty of quick recovery. Don loses at least five pounds, every period and yet it back when they're flooding the ice between heats. And that, when the team is winning. Brother, let the team lose two in a row and Mrs. Barrett's hubby will be a wreck—for an evening. Seriously, Barrett, was not overly impressed with the Oshawa power the other night, but he did fairness it must be said they were three or four regulars short. Then, too, they expect reinforcements from the Generals, 'tis said, so Mr. Barrett and company are in no wise selling the youthful gravity from Oshawa short.

The Hawks play three games this week. The Peterborough Triple Links loop second-placers, are here tonight and on Friday evening the Hawks pay a return call. To date the Petes have won five and lost four for ten points, six behind the leading Hawks. And they're improving with every game, so tonight's bout should be worth seeing.

Incidentally the Kingston Vics and Cobourg Jays played in Kingston on Monday night with the Vics emerging on the long end of an 11-3 score. The game was brought forward from December 29th, because of an ice-shaking attraction that is playing at the Community Centre. The win gives the Vics four wins and a tie for nine points, one behind the Peterborough Lions.

FIGHT NIGHT!

The box-fight mob is a fickle crowd. Or is it? They'll bring out Bozemble-bums and toss 'em in championship bouts. They'll take a bloke who's been a contender for ten years, let him cool his heels in the outer office, then suddenly decide he's ripe for some foe, take that literally or figuratively, who is wearing a titular bauble.

Take fightdom's newest Johnny-come lately... He's Archie Moore, who tosses dusky fists at one Joey Maxim in St. Loo tonight in an effort to strip him of his light-heavy crown and thereby gain some well-deserved financial consideration.

And the strange part of the business is the boys "in the know" have established Moore an 8-5 favorite to administer sufficient "fives" to Uncle Joey to enable him to hear the bistle chorus.

Moore, 36, has been around boxing rings, pro, that is, for the past 18 years, and has built up an enviable record, 127 bouts all told.

King Joey, who is as much entitled to the title as the majority of rope royalty, albeit he thumped a heat-withered Sugar Ray Robinson off his dancing feet last summer, won the title about three years ago when he knocked the bloomin' toddlers from under Britain's Freddie Mills. He will be defending his crown for the third time tonight.

Moore has 102 victories to his credit, 71 via the bye-bye method. He has been knocked out four times, but came back to avenge them all but one, and that provided by ex-heavy Ezzard Charles in 1948.

Both men are defensive fighters as their near scarless bodies and facial tissues prove. The only mark on Moore, over one eye, resulted from a childhood scuffle, when a cousin—a girl—socked him but good.

The experts say, or at least some of them, that Moore is about as interesting to watch in a ring as an overfed bachelor goldfish in a bowl. Yet he set an attendance record in Toledo once and he could do the same in St. Louis tonight. About 17,000 are expected to watch the palaverings.

Both Moore and Maxim, who have been promised a crack at the heavyweight title (how crude can some people get!) whichever emerges the winnah tonight, are in excellent shape and finished training five or six days ago.

Wily Jack Kearns, Maxim mentor, has spread the word around that Moore will have to deliver a knocked punch to get past Joey—and Joey believes he can yak out the decision if it goes the 15-round limit. Moore has said he will knock out Maxim, and that remark brought the longest speech the doleful Clevelander ever made in his life. It consisted of five words.

Some say the old bloke with the whiskers and scythe has caught up with Archie. Don't you believe it. There's venerable Jersey Joe Walcott and Ole Satch Paige to offset that theory. It should be a good fight and watch the defensive work of both champion and challenger.

Habs, Hawks Tied for Second With Bruins Point in Rear; Leafs Gazing Up from Fourth

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The luckless New York Rangers may look hopelessly buried in the National Hockey League cellar, but the team itself isn't yet ready to hang out the black crepe.

Coach Bill Cook and General Manager Frank Boucher can't be criticized for lack of trying to get the club the help it needs.

They've been moving players back and forth from their farm clubs—Saskatoon Quakers of the Western Hockey League and Guelph Biltmores of the Ontario Junior A circuit—and if there's a reward for effort they may hit on the right combination yet.

The latest chattel called to lend aid is Ian Mackintosh, forward with Saskatoon this fall of extra scoring power. The outcome could be interesting, at least.

The Rangers, 13 points back of the fifth-place Toronto Maple Leafs tonight will be trying for their first win against Boston Bruins in the only game scheduled. They take on Lynn Patrick's club in New York and it will be tough to stop the Bruins, who are gunning for second place.

The Bruins can shoot from fourth place into the rugster-up spot with a win. They are a point behind Chicago and Montreal, tied for second place behind Detroit with 31 points each. The Red Wings are on top by three points, but so tightly bunched are the top five clubs only seven points separate them.

All six teams will see action Thursday night with Toronto at Detroit, New York at Montreal and Boston at Chicago.

Barefoot Boy Kicking Star

HUNTSVILLE, Texas. (AP) — Huntsville's Hornets depend upon the good right toe —and they do mean toe — of O'Neal McCaffety as they rumble on toward a Texas schoolboy football championship.

McCaffety is the boy who boots points after touchdowns and field goals barefooted. With shoes on he can't kick a lick, but just which him put that bare big toe into the pigskin when the chips are down.

McCaffety can't do anything else for the Huntsville high school team because 'ol' Sunny suffered during the summer when his hand came in contact with a live wire. Skin had to be grafted from the boy's stomach and he was ordered not to play football this year.

It was quite a blow. But McCaffety thought of one way he could help the team—he could kick that ball.

And so he talked the coach into letting him try the extra points. He has collected 19 points after touchdown in 25 tries along with two field goals.

Name Rams' Stars Pass, Run Kings

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —Deacon Dan Towler and Norman Van Brocklin, two reasons why the surging Los Angeles Rams tied for the National Football League's National Conference crown, are the NFL's running and passing kings.

Towler, the bulky Negro battering ram, gained 894 yards on 156 attempts for an average of 5.7 yards to finish ahead of Eddie Price of New York Giants. Price totalled 746 yards in 183 attempts and a 4.1 average.

Van Brocklin edged out Green Bay's Tobin Rote for 1952 air laurels. The Los Angeles ace had an aveerage of 8.08 to Rote's 8.08.

Van Brocklin completed 113 passes of 295 for 1,736 yards and 14 touchdowns. Rote threw 157, clicked with 82 for 1,262 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Guerin Named Leading Jockey By Turf Writers

NEW YORK (AP)—Walter M. Jeffords, prominent in racing and breeding since 1918, will receive the New York Turf Writers' annual award for outstanding services to the sport during the last year.

In the annual writers' poll, Eric Guerin, who was astride unbeaten Native Dancer in all his races, was named the leading jockey over Eddie Arcaro and the sensational young apprentice, Tony DeSpirito.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt was voted the leading breeder, and Bill Winfrey, the Vanderbilt trainer, led by a wide margin in his specialty, for their part in the brilliant career of Native Dancer.

Share Honors At Dufferin

TORONTO (CP) — Lynchburg Lady and Lady Normby Tuesday defeated a field of BB class pacers to share the honors in the featured seventh race at Dufferin Park. Each won a heat.

Soo Greyhounds Fire Don Grosso As Wolves Pull Up to Share Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds were so busy firing their coach and quieting the resulting squabble Tuesday night they hardly noticed Sudbury Wolves pull up to share first place with them.

Don Grosso, the coach who led the Greyhounds to three straight Northern Ontario Hockey Association championships, was given his notice by the executive. The same evening Sudbury whipped North Bay Trappers 6-1 to tie the Hounds for first place.

In the Ontario Hockey Association, Owen Sound Mercurys moved within three points of the leading Stratford Indians by sliding past Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen 3-0. It was Bobby Gibson's first shutout and he earned it by stopping 31 shots compared to 18 stops by Keith Woodall in the Kitchener goal.

Marty Burion scored two for Sudbury. Andy Milne, Mauno Kauppi, Gordie Heale, and Rolly McLennan notched the other four. George Gosselin scored for North Bay.

Doug Gillespie and Ron Sutherland were the Owen Sound marksmen in the other game of the evening.

OHA action tonight features Stratford trying to stretch their lead against Chatham Maroons.

Hap Emms' 'Horse-Trades' Pay Off, Flyers Zoom to Loop Second Spot

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Barrie Flyers, the second-best team of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, are on the move.

Coach Hap Emms of the Flyers made a series of deals for slightly used hockey players (still in A-1 condition) and they responded by moving into second place Tuesday night with a 5-3 victory over Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts in Kitchener.

Ove Tessier, traded to Barrie by Kitchener only last week, set up four goals for the Flyers. Tony Poeta, acquired from Galt Black Hawks, scored twice.

St. Catharines Teepees kept Guelph Biltmores in a bed slump by defeating the Bilts 5-3. Oshawa Generals battled to an overtime tie in their first game of an interlocking schedule tour as Montreal Royals matched goals. The two Quebec junior league leaders, Montreal Canadiens, shut out Three Rivers Reds 7-0.

Barrie opened one point up on Toronto St. Michael's Majors with six points of the top-place Toronto Marlboros. Besides Tessier, Barrie scorers were Jean Martan with two and Doug Mohns with one.

Graham Joyce scored two Kitchener tallies and set up John Ford for the third.

Bill Tennessee, a Guelph boy and veteran of two years with the Biltmore junior A team, scored his first goal in A competition at St. Catharines. Other Guelph goals were by Jim Connelly who notched two, Brian Cullen blasted home two for St. Catharines as did big Hank Cecile. Bill Hass added another.

Montreal Royals scored two fast ones in the third period to force a tie with Oshawa. Bob Mader, Jack Armstrong and Fred Etcher were Oshawa marksmen. Claude Beaupre, Miller and Mowbray did the scoring for Royals.

It was an all-Canadian night in the other Quebec game. Claude Vinet scored twice for the winners, as did Claude Provost. Others were by Les Lilley, Gordie Hollingsworth and Jean Gauthier.

Toronto clubs are in action tonight with St. Michael's tackling Marlboros. Barrie will travel to Guelph for the other game in Ontario. Montreal Canadiens meet Three Rivers Reds in the only Quebec junior game.

Senick Leads Western Race

SEATTLE (CP)—Georgs Senick, called up from Saskatoon Quakers by New York Rangers last week, still tops the Western Hockey League scoring parade, league statistics show.

For games up to and including Sunday, Senick was related three times in a week because of a fractured thumb, has 42 points. Teammate Alex Kaleta maintained second spot two points behind Senick.

MAXIM

MOORE

Joey Maxim, light heavyweight champion, and challenger Archie Moore go to the mat tonight in a titular bout. Moore has been ruled as 8-5 favorite to snatch the crown from Joey's curly locks, but "Joey" says: "I'll still be the champion."

Bears Bashed By Barons 3-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons tightened their hold on first place in the American Hockey League Tuesday night by defeating Hershey Bears 3-2.

Vic Lyon sent an easy shot into the Bears' net late in the final period to give the Barons a much-needed victory.

Ike Hildebrand and Lorne Ferguson scored the opener to leave it all even at the bell. Jack Gordon gave the Barons a lead in the second period while Fisher of the Bears slammed a backhander into the net.

Remember When

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tony Zale, middleweight champion, was awarded the Edward J. Neil memorial plaque six years ago for his outstanding contribution to boxing during 1946. Zale won the award for his thrilling victory over Rocky Graziano in Yankee Stadium Sept. 27. He was the first to win the plaque on the basis of a single bout.

Jimmy Carter Held to Draw

SACRAMENTO, Calif (AP)—Freddie (Babe) Herman of Los Angeles fought world lightweight champion Jimmy Carter to an unpopular draw in a 10-round non-title fight Tuesday night.

Referee Ben Bransomil and Judge Billy Burke called the fight a draw, overruling Judge Fred Bottaro who gave the bout to Herman.

There were no knockdowns.

Cougars Score Five in Third

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Victoria Cougars rallied for five goals in the third period to defeat Calgary Stampeders 6-3 in the Western Hockey League game Tuesday night.

ENOS SLAUGHTER SIGNS

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Enos Slaughter, the old warhorse of St. Louis Cardinals, has signed his 1953 contract, the club announced Tuesday night. It was the 13th Cardinal contract for the 36-year-old outfielder who is reported to have signed for $35,000 for 1952 and about $5,000 over his 1953 salary.

Australian Tennis Fans Shocked At News Sedgman Is Turning Pro

By GAYLE TALBOT

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) Australian fans have just received concrete evidence that their young tennis lad, Frank Sedgman, intends to turn professional in about two weeks. They are taking the news hard.

Most fans had realized something of the sort was in the wind, but they hadn't really believed it until they read a board meeting announcements that Sedgman had obtained permission from Customs tax officials to leave the country early in January.

Probably one reason Aussie fans and officials had not taken earlier rumors about Sedgman too seriously was the fact they had a comfortable feeling they could get along without him.

Jaslery Not Good Enough

We have gotten less than one of them say complacently that their two fine juniors, Ken Rosewall and Lewis Hoad, would be capable or keeping the Davis Cup for years.

But recently they've awakened to the fact that Hoad and Lewis is still a not promising juniors after all. The two youngsters have a long way to go.

If they were all Vic Seixas, and Tony Trabert had to beat in the challenge round at Adelaide December 29-31, the United States could rest fairly easy. The Australians know it; hence their sudden sense of loss over Sedgman.

Sedgman himself is plenty mad over the lack of tax benefits he'll face. He's seen his lawyer and said he understands the guilty party can be fined up to roughly $500 and put away for a year.

There is no doubt the incident has placed Aussie tennis officials in an embarrassing position. They can't bar Sedgman from the Aussie round on the evidence at hand.

The Aussies are scheduled to defend their cup team Friday. It's possible they'll try to pin Sedgman down as to his intentions.

'Knock Him Out' Claims Mr. Moore; 'I'll Still be Champ' Chortles Joey

By ED WILES

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Old man Archie Moore, fulfilling a youthful ambition at 38, ends a 10-year trail to the championship ring tonight in his 15-round title bout with light heavyweight champion Joe Maxim.

This is a chance of a lifetime for Moore, and it almost took the St. Louis Negro a lifetime to gain it. For almost a decade Archie has been brushed off by light heavyweight champions — A sad fate for an 18-year-old beginner who had planned to get a title chance and retire at 25.

Despite the time lag, now that Moore has the opportunity he's favored to take the 175-pound crown from Maxim, a 30-year-old gent from Cleveland. The odds give Moore the edge at 8 to 5.

A crowd of about 14,000 fans is expected to pay about $80,000 to see the International Boxing Club's attraction at the Arena. The 9 p.m. CST bout will be telecast and broadcast (CBS) nationally with only the St. Louis area blacked out.

More than $80,000 in receipts has been iced away already, enough to establish St. Louis record. The old mark was $56,905 brought in by 11,115 fans for the Willie Pep-Charley Riley featherweight title match Jan. 14, 1950.

To that expected $80,000 haul you probably can safely add a minimum of $50,000 to the purse. This represents the radio-TV sponsor's reported purchase price for the air rights.

Maxim, as champion, has the biggest cut coming. He's been guaranteed about $75,000 in making his third defence of the world title taken from England's Freddie Mills in 1950.

But the fact he'll receive only a token payment doesn't bother Maxim, who insists "the main thing is that I'm finally getting my shot. I know I can beat him. I'm going to knock him out."

Moore, however, has other ideas. "I'm the champ," says Maxim, "and I'll still be the champion when the fight's over."

Fights Last Night

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Reno, Nev.—Kenny Nicholes 159, Boise, Idaho, stopped Kid Leon, 156, Salt Lake City, 6.

Miami Beach, Fla. — Emerson Butcher, 144½, Rock Island, Ill., awarded decision over Claude Hammond, 145½, North Bergen, N.J. (Hammond disqualified ninth round).

Galt, Bilts Swap Players

GALT (CP)—Guelph Biltmores of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series have finally found another defenceman.

Gail Black Hawks Tuesday announced a deal with the Bilts "hereby Art White will join the Memorial Cup champions in return for left-winger Frank Bettiol and an undisclosed amount of cash.

The Biltmores have been seeking defence reinforcements since they lost Harry Howell to their parent New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

NEW YORK (CP)—A month ago football fans on the Pacific coast were all but sure their team would win the New Year's Day Rose Bowl game and break the domination of mid-Western representatives of the Big Ten.

Now, however, time has turned their optimism to apprehension. They're not at all sure University of Southern California will beat University of Wisconsin and bring the bowl to the coast after six unsuccessful seasons.

Original optimism was based on the fact that UCLA of the Pacific Conference beat Wisconsin 20-7 in October and then UCLA beat USC 14-12. But then the high spirits were damped when USC bowed to Notre Dame 9-0, Nov. 29.

Hard Thinking

That set the fans to thinking that if Notre Dame could do it, then Wisconsin with a good offense and an adequate defence might turn the trick.

An expected 103,000 fans will jam the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1 to watch the big bowl game.

In the Sugar Bowl, at New Orleans, two favorites from the same conference are matched for the first time.

Georgia Tech, ranked No. 2 in the country, and Mississippi, No. 7, will clash before 82,000 fans. Both squads are from the Southeastern Conference and both are undefeated.

In the Orange Bowl, at Miami, Fla., football experts were dubious when Syracuse was invited to play Alabama. Alabama, they said, would run the Easterners out of the stadium. However, Orange Bowl officials hoped a colorful, high-scoring contest. Alabama has a record of nine wins and two losses while Syracuse won seven and lost two. A crowd of 68,000 is expected.

The Cotton bowl at Dallas brings together the scenes from that meet a year ago, Texas, with its powerful offence, and Tennessee with its usual bulldog defence. Texas won last Jan. 1 20-14. Tennessee is 8-1-1 (tied 1 game) with two touchdowns against it all season. Texas, in winning eight out of 10, picked up an average of about 700 yards a game on the ground and in the air. Expected attendance is 75,000.

Maroons Drop Three

CHATHAM (CP) — Chatham Maroons have released three players to the Ontario Hockey Association Big Seven Senior A player pool, player manager Jack Stewart announced Tuesday.

Forwards Fern Towers, Paul Strong and Art Skov have been released to the pool, an arrangement among the Big Seven teams giving them first chance at signing the players released by their outright release.

Clawless Cats Lose 21 Games

GALT (CP)—Hamilton Tigers, who have played 21 games in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series without a win or a tie, are nearing a record they'll certainly do all they can to avoid breaking.

The record is the 25 straight defeats suffered by the Galt Moose club in the 1939-40 OHA senior season. The Galt team lost its entire 36 scheduled games.

That season was the darkest in history for Galt hockey clubs. Besides the woes of the senior outfit, the Intermediate Galt Flyers dropped 14 games without a victory and the Galt juniors floundered through 12 consecutive defeats.

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP)—Pete Finlayson, secretary of the Ontario branch of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association, announced Tuesday night that Bob Gray of Toronto Scarboro has won the A. T. Hunt Trophy for the best low average during the last season.

Gray had a mark of 71.2. Gordon Brydson of Toronto Mississauga finished one-fifth of a stroke behind with 71.4. The average was determined from scores in prescribed tournaments, including the Canadian open, the CPGA Ontario Open, Millar Trophy qualifying round and a number of club invitation competitions.

TORONTO (CP)—Alex R. Duff, organizer and coach of the Dolphin's Swimming Club, died suddenly Tuesday night. He specialized in swimming instruction for girls and more than 30 years ago founded the Dolphinets. Many of the thousands of girls he trained in swimming and diving won Dominion titles.

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League announced Tuesday that Leon Bouchard, Walter Pawlyshyn, Pierre Brillant and Copper Leyte have been released. Bouchard was sent to Halifax and Pawlyshyn to Charlottetown of the Maritime Senior Hockey League. Both are forwards. Wingy Brillant and defenceman Leyte were sent to Lower St. Lawrence League teams.

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!

EAGLE TENNIS THE SERVE

1 Ball should be hit to bounce on your side of the table first and then on opponent's side. Ball must be hit from behind the table, not from a position over the table surface. Server must not step on line or foot on floors hold the ball for serve.

2 Keep control of your serve by bounding ball near the end of the table on your left. Bounding ball too near the net will result in too many netted balls and lost points. Keep serve low.

3 Before prohibit finger spins and rubbing ball against face of racket when serving. Use a forward stroke on a vertical plane for best control. Practice changes of pace and positioning by getting your service under complete control.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in table tennis as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and game.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

My aunt Minnie insists on making me happy. Even if it makes me unhappy to do it her way, I like some bridge rules. You may not like them. But some players think they are good for you.

West opened with a diamond and north doubled for takeout. The east hand passed. The correct response for partnership good is one heart with the south hand shown here:

♠K
♥10 7 65
♣J 9 76543

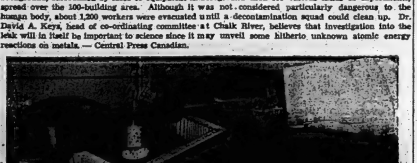
In answer to a takeout double, partner may pass if there is an intervening bid by the opponent. But if that opponent does not come in with a bid, partner is forced to bid something.

When required to bid something, such partner should first show any unbid major suit that contains any four or more cards. Even if the major is anemic. Even if you also have a much better minor.

Why? Because the opponent opening is assumed to show a certain amount of strength. Usually it is enough to take three tricks with the high and sure cards continuously provided.

If so, your side will have a tough time taking more than ten tricks. If you have any hope of making game, expect it to be only in a major. Because, to make game in a minor needs 11 tricks.

If the major you show happens to be the suit the doubler favors he may see enough for game. If the major is not the suit he favors the minor can be shown later if necessary and convenient.



Of course, even if the doubler favors the mentioned major no game may be there. But this does not mean you should avoid seeing first if it is what the doubler has in mind.

You may not like such rules. Forced upon you for your own good they may make you unhappy. You may even resent the idea because of your own desires. But there is one good way of avoiding them. How? Simply refuse to play bridge that wins.

Isotope production in the Western World's most powerful heavy water atomic furnace has been knocked out — perhaps for many weeks — as a result of the radioactive "burst" at the $40,000,000 atomic plant at Chalk River, Ont. The "burst," which erupted from the val-like structure seen in background, surrounded by mass of equipment in foreground used for various kinds of experiments, spread over the 100-building area. Although it was not considered particularly dangerous to the human body, about 1,200 workers were evacuated until a decontamination squad could clean up. Dr. David A. Keys, head of co-ordinating committee at Chalk River, believes that investigation into the leak will in itself be important to science since it may unveil some hitherto unknown atomic energy reactions on metals. — Central Press Canadian.

Those concerned with the production of isotopes, one of which is seen above being readied for shipment, found their work had been cut by the idle furnace, now in the process of "cooling off." The expensive heavy water in the atomic pile has been drained off and stored, but there is no way of neutralizing the radioactivity in the pile itself. Scientists must wait until the furnace "cools down" and the radioactivity is dissipated by normal atmospheric change before they can scrutinize its insides. —Central Press Canadian.

AT THE CAPITOL—A scene from "Torpedo Alley." The deadliest undersea corridor in the world, starring Mark Stevens, Dorothy Malone and Bill Williams opening Thursday at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program James Oliver Curwood's "Yukon Gold" starring Kirby Grant and Chinook the Wonder Dog. Both hits are first showings.

AT THE McCARTHY—Joseph Cotten, Shelley Winters and Scott Brady head the strong star cast of Universal-International's "Untamed Frontier," a rugged Western story of the frontier warfare waged between land barons and land-hungry homesteaders. Screen newcomer Suzan Ball receives introductory billing in "Untamed Frontier," opening today at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The film

town can't believe it. Winnipeg-born Deanna Durbin is back in Hollywood, but she says she's not interested in doing movies.

"I've had my career but her family. It consists of her husband, writer-director Charles David, their son, Peter, 1½, and her daughter by a previous marriage, Jessica, 7.

"I can't seem to make people believe that I don't care about doing any more pictures," she said. "Mr. Pasternak is a fellow who won't take no for an answer."

Joe Pasternak, who produced her successful films at Universal, now is a big man at MGM. He has long been after her for a return to films. It would possibly be for a co-starring opus with Mario Lanza, who has expressed an eagerness to appear with amiss Durbin.

"I'm not a hsm," she comments. "I never have been, although I could never get people to believe it. Some people love to perform; it's their life.

"But not me. I started when I was 13, doing a short at MGM with Judy Garland. I did "Three Smart Girls" when I was 13.

"I was caught in the whirl until I quit three years ago at 17. That's a big chunk out of my life.

"Sure, I had a lot of fun and I enjoyed things I otherwise wouldn't have had. But I also missed out on a lot of the joys of girls who lead normal lives."

Deanna indicated that her young son has a great deal to do with her decision.

"I can see how much it means to Peter to have a mother who is always there when he needs her."

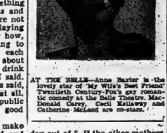
Little Benny's Note Book

I started to tell pop and ma about The Young Debaters, being the new club us fellows are getting up, saying. It's something like our Current Events and Bridge Club, Ma. Only we're not going to waist any time playing bridge, and we dont know how, anyways. We're just going to meet every afternoon in each others houses and debate about important things while we drink lemmonade and eat cake, I said.

Well, I said a few idea, ma said, and pop said, It's not bad at all. A little experience in public speeking often does more good than harm, he said.

The fellow offered to make me the president of it, I said, and ma said, My, you sound as though you're not sure whether you'll accept the honor.

Oh, sure, I'm willing, I said, and soon said. That's mitey unselfish of you. By golies if looks as though we've got a future public leeeder in our mist, he said.



I suppose I can stand it one day out of 5, if the other mothers can, ma said, and I said, The only thing is, the idea has char-ed a little. None of the other 4 mothers like the idea as mu-h as you do, ma, so the fellows decided to meet at the president's house every day. Thats why they are offering to make ma the president, I said.

Oh goodness for land sakes, ma said, and I said, But jimmies, ma, you said it was an honor.

And you said it was a rotating debating club, not a stationary picknick, ma said, and I said, Aw heck, it may be my last chance of being the president of anything.

Not at all, pop said. Rite here and now I appoint you president of the society of almost presidents, he said.

Being a bum consolation.

AT THE BELLE—Anne Baxter is the lovely star of "My Wife's Best Friend" Twentieth Century-Fox's gay romantic comedy at the Belle Theatre. MacDonald Carey, Cecil Kellaway and Catherine McLeod are co-stars.

DEAD IN BATHTUB

TORONTO (CP)—Firemen chopped their way through a locked bathroom door in a home in West Toronto Tuesday. They found Irene Mitchell, 45, dead in a bathtub of water. Police said they believed Miss Mitchell suffered a seizure and plunged into the tub. She is believed to have drowned.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 18, 1952

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Doy's outlook should brighten returns, make for happy ending of a day well done. Give thanks for all your blessings, share some with the less fortunate.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—The more amiable you are, the surer you will evoke co-operation from all concerned. Share your entertaining qualities that you and others may enjoy life more.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Stop, give thought to other than wordly goods, pastimes. Live your life bravely with compassion for those less fortunate and you will be really happy.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—The kind of outlook that can be most encouraging. Show your true, better side, spread cheer in all your efforts. It will pay better dividends.

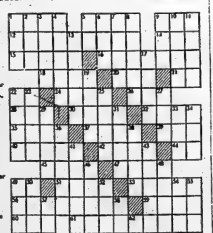
July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Pleasant if not exciting indications. May be well to get some planning done for tomorrow's tasks. Keep in touch with good friends, contacts.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Keep vibrations for you conservative, sensible. Virgoans. Let nothing mar prospects. Virgo needs occasional diversion from routine matters; take, heed, it's a good tonic.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Handy period for stabilizing plans buoying the mental outlook. First tend to essentials; don't rush things. Keep calm attitude; don't fuss or worry.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Especially beneficial for things you enjoy and for are suited. Literary, scientific efforts, art, daily business generally favored.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Usual and rightful interests, building, handling groups, public service should return gains. It may be mild for financial and investment undertakings be careful



December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—So-so day for activities entailing study, research. Personal affairs in favored position. No heart interests. Be extra tactful.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Can be a field day for you if you knuckle down, to real effort. Plan well before acting; time spent thus will pile up profitable returns.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Excellent advantages for major matters, mental execution of higher type. Don't push beyond your capacity; be reasonable.

ENDS CANADIAN TOUR

MONTREAL (CP)—Lord Provost James Miller of Edinburgh left Canada for home by air Tuesday after a three-week, 12,000-mile goodwill tour of Eastern Canada and the United States. Before his departure he said business people he had met during the tour were interested in Scottish goods but he believed more should be done to emphasize the goods were of Scottish origin.

SAVED FROM GAS FUMES

OTTAWA (CP) — The timely awakening of a seven-year-old boy early Tuesday was credited with saving the lives of nine other persons when coal gas fumes spread through their suburban Eastview home. Awakened by screams from his father, Laurent Villeneuve, 21, who put the emergency call to the Eastview fire department. All members of the household were unconscious when firemen arrived and emergency treatment was given for five hours before they were out of danger.

RAWDON

Origin of Christmas Carols Graphically Told at W.M.S.

RAWDON — The Christmas secretary, and her assistant, Mrs. meeting of Mount Pleasant Mrs. Gordon Lisk, counted the con- don Woman's Missionary Society tents of the boxes as they came was held recently at the home of in and over $32 was realized with Mrs. Carleton Potts. The lighted the sale of it in copper and silver. Christmas tree with tinsel and roping, and other seasonal decorations throughout the rooms, gave a cosy atmosphere to the meeting.

The pianist, Mrs. Burton Sixteen members, six visitors Sharpe, presided at the piano, and and several board members were played soft Christmas music prior in attendance. to the opening and accompanied Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mile-Box the carol singing throughout the afternoon.

Christmas Thought

The president, Mrs. John Holmes, gave a "Christmas Thought" and all sang "Hark the Glad Sound," and "O Little Town The Benedictus as found in St. Luke.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave her report.

The allocation for Mount Pleasant community was $100 for the building fund of the United Church training school in Toronto, and $105 has been forwarded to headquarters.

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver, treasurer, reported that funds to end of November $179.77.

A letter was read re supply work and a parcel will be shipped to Manitoba soon. Two babies were shipped to Toronto for the Overseas Mission in Korea last week.

Mrs. Frank Jeffs gathered her community friendship data and said almost 200 calls had been made in home and hospital this year.

The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Roy Thrasher, when the year's reports will be given and officers installed.

The president read a letter from Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson, who are missionaries in the Belgian Congo, in Africa; also a message from Dr. A. A. Scott, Moderator.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Herbert Smith and Mrs. Robert Merrick and the latter presided.

Mrs. Eric Summers sang a carol with guitar accompaniment.

Origin of Carols

Mrs. John Mulheron of Bethel who came to Mount Pleasant as Rawdon's first war bride, a few years ago, gave an outstanding message on the theme, "How We Got Our Christmas Carols."

Coming from England she has an intimate knowledge of the origin of these lovely old Christmas songs and her audience was carried in fancy to many of those ancient cathedrals where the various carols have been sung for many many years.

Following a description of the origin, carols were sung by the audience. Among the large list were a few that were specially popular.

In the 18th century, Frederick Oakley translated from Latin to English, "O Come, All Ye Faithful." In December 1816, a young writer, James Montgomery, was delighted to have his carol "Angels From the Realms of Glory," given wide publicity, both in England and America.

John Byrom in 1745 wrote, "Christians Awake," as a Christmas gift to his little daughter. Previous to the glad day, his little daughter had requested her daddy to write a few lines for her very own. It was never intended for publication, but a few years later the choir leader in his church wrote the accompanying music.

Graphic Description

Mrs. Mulheron gave a graphic description of the groups of children singing carols from door to door for pennies and other coins for England's needy poor days and one of the most popular was, "God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen."

The speaker read a carol written by Father Breberry in 1641 who came to America as a missionary to the Indians and the Negro people.

"I Came Upon the Midnight Clear," was written by Edmund Hamilton Sears, early in 1800, and it has had wide usage since.

Charles Wesley wrote "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," as he was crossing the ocean to America about the year 1760.

Phillip Brooks wrote, "O Little Town of Bethlehem" for his Sunday School class to sing and the organist of the Sunday School composed the music.

Joseph Mohr wanted to be a musician but his father wanted him to follow his footsteps and be a weaver. One cold night, with only a few folks at church and no organist the young lad had his chance. He played his own accompaniment for his poem, "Silent Night." Everyone was thrilled and the father granted Mohr's wish to be a musician.

Mrs. Will Jeffs with guitar accompaniment sang the beautiful carol after which the stewardship secretary, Mrs. Will Potts, offered prayer.

Mrs. Ross Hoard contributed a Christmas piano selection.

Short Skit

A short skit entitled, "A Revised Christmas List," was given by Mrs. Burton Sharpe, Mrs. Herbert Smith and Mrs. Robert

MARMORA

1,000 Children Attend C. C. Christmas Party

MARMORA — Over 1,000 children participated in the Christmas party for the children of the Marmora district which was held on Saturday afternoon by Marmora Chamber of Commerce.

EXPLOSION IS FATAL

CLEVELAND (AP)—An electrical explosion in the basement of the Hotel Hollenden killed a workman early today and severely injured two others. The blast occurred in the subterranean vault where the transformers of the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company are stored. The explosion apparently occurred when a switch was pulled on a line carrying 4,600 volts.

OFFICE CLOSED IN CHINA

HONG KONG (AP) — The British-owned Asiatic Petroleum Company announced today it is closing its Canton office because of a stoppage of trade. The company's Shanghai office has been "requisitioned" by the Chinese Communists.

RAWDON

EUCHRE PARTY

Rawdon — The fourth euchre party sponsored by River Valley Women's Institute was held recently at the school house with ten tables in play. Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Morrow and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Finkle convened the party. Visitors were in attendance from Mount Pleasant, Bethel, Wellman's and Stirling. The prizes were won as follows: Ladies' high, Mrs. Bert Bedford (won on a draw); ladies' low, Miss Ida Gould (won on a draw); men's high, Ross Bush; men's low, Ralph Carr.

Refreshments were served and a vote of thanks tendered to the convenors of the party.

There were 44 tables of euchre at the four parties as well as the odd guest who didn't play. There has been little surprise as the Institute is financially successful.

Just recently the Institute spent $100 on four card tables and 20 folding chairs, the same pattern as those purchased a year ago.

The next euchre party will be held at the school in January.

NET: ATOMIC TESTS?

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Another series of atomic tests in Nevada, possibly early in 1953, was indicated Tuesday by an atomic energy commission announcement. The AEC said it was awarding the Reynolds Electrical and Engineering Company, El Paso, Tex., a contract calling for maintenance, minor construction and scientific structural services at the Nevada proving grounds beginning Jan. 1.

UN Held Partially Responsible By Foreign Minister

PARIS (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, faced with crises in two French North Africa protectorates, Tuesday held the United Nations partially responsible for the Casablanca riots of last week.

The UN debate on North African nationalist hopes has a direct relation with the agitation and the rioting," he told the National Assembly.

The riots, staged in protest against the murder of an Arab labor leader in Tunisia, killed more than 50 persons and resulted in wholesale arrests of Communist and nationalist Moroccans last week.

Schuman was supporting a government plea that no immediate debate be held on affairs in Morocco and Tunis. The plea was rejected by 310 votes to 303.

The foreign minister must also hammer out with Jean de Hauteclocque, Tunisian resident-general, a means of overcoming opposition from the Bey of Tunis to French-proposed reforms. Hauteclocque arrived in Paris on Tuesday after the Bey had reneged on a promise to sign two reform decrees.

The Bey astounded French officials in Tunis Monday night when he pleaded a "slight illness" and refused to sign the two decrees — least controversial of seven proposed by the French seven months ago to appease nationalist demands for total self-government.

Reports from Casablanca, capital of the other troubled French colony, said police raided an Arab shanty town and arrested 18 Moroccans in their search for nationalist ringleaders and weapons.

UN Winds Up Lengthy Debate On Morocco

By OSGOOD CARUTHERS

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) The UN hopes to wind up its debate on Morocco today with a vote on two rival — but similarly moderate — resolutions urging France and her North African protectorate to settle their differences.

The general assembly's political committee scheduled the 1st speakers in debate on the question this morning and planned a final vote before afternoon.

The two resolutions:

1. Sponsored by 13 Asian and Arab countries — asking France and the Sultan of Morocco to negotiate for self-determination "in accord with the sovereignty of Morocco, the aspirations of her people" and the UN charter.

2. By 11 Latin-American countries — expresses hope France and Morocco "will continue negotiations on an urgent basis towards developing the free political institutions of the people of Morocco, with due regard to legitimate rights and interests under the established norms and practices of the law of nations."

As it became apparent during the debate that the latter draft had the stronger support, Pakistan Tuesday night asked that the Latin-American resolution be amended to call for negotiations "with a view to bringing about self-government for Moroccans."

This wording was identical to that in the Tunisian resolution adopted by the committee last week, but the group voted down the Pakistani amendment Tuesday night and the Latin-American resolution remained in its original form.

France, which has boycotted the debates on both Tunisia and Morocco, contends her relations with her two North African protectorates are her own domestic affair.

Order Admirals To Keep Reds Out Of Mediterranean

To Act if Soviet Union Launches Attack on West

By ARTHUR GAVERSON

PARIS (AP) — Two Allied admirals got orders today that if the Soviet Union attacks the West, it's up to them to keep the Reds out of the Mediterranean.

U. S. Admiral Robert B. Carney and Britain's Admiral Earl Mountbatten hurried here by plane to hear the North Atlantic alliance's supreme commander in Europe, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, spell out their new assignments in the vital sea joining Europe, Asia and Africa.

Their conference came as the foreign defence and finance ministers of the 14 Atlantic Pact powers — the North Atlantic council — wound up a four-day session in which the major achievement was approval of the Mediterranean commands.

Abbot at Conference

The statesmen, including Finance Minister Douglas Abbott of Canada, met behind closed doors six times over Europe, as economic slowdown which led them to take what their military advisers believe to be calculated risks. Among them were:

1. A broad decision to scale down army, air, force and naval goals for the coming year. The advisers had wanted the equivalent of 72 divisions under arms by the end of 1953; now they will have to settle for about 60.

2. An attempt to modernize gradually their weapons during the next few years, slowly getting rid of obsolete planes, ships and guns and concentrating also on guided missiles and atomic bombs and shells.

3. A cut of the $428,000,000 program for construction next year to between $200,000,000 and $275,000,000. An official spokesman who reported this said the council later today would decide on the exact amount to be spent during 1953 for new bases, roads, airports, harbor installations, radar screens and the like.

Approve Three Missions

The council during its session approved these missions for the NATO Mediterranean commanders:

Carney, commanding the American Sixth fleet and the land forces of Italy, Greece, Turkey and Portugal, must fall back with his fighting ships and planes if he becomes.

Mountbatten will guard the Allied lifelines from Gibraltar in the west to the Dardanelles in the east, from Trieste at the head of the Adriatic to the Suez canal in the Mediterranean. His job he has British, French, Italian, Greek and Turkish warships.

The division of Mediterranean responsibility was worked out at a conference between Ridgway and demand for supremacy in the sea the long discussion and American refusal to give up control of her Sixth fleet, the largest armada now in the area.

CANADA'S FIELD CROPS MAY BRING $2,400,000,000

Picture Darkest In Ontario and Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) — High yields from Canada's 1952 field crops — with a record wheat crop in the vicinity — may bring their value to a peak $2,400,000,000, the bureau of statistics estimates.

That is 7% above the harvests in the West, the bureau said Wednesday, would more than offset lower prices for most crops. Higher prices for wheat, oats, oats and barley also helped swell the forecast figure to almost $300,000,000 over the previous record of $2,125,000,000 in 1951.

The picture was darkest in Ontario and Quebec, where lower output and declining prices brought an estimated drop of $457,764,000 — more than $45,000,000 below the 1951 figure for the central provinces.

Get Instalments

The bureau's production value estimate is based on the assumption that 1952 field crops will bring Prairie grain pools may get another $450,000,000 or so in instalments during the crop year, which ends next summer.

To date, preliminary figures based on initial payments made by the Canadian Wheat Board on deliveries of wheat, oats and barley showed an estimate of $1,940,000 for 1952 field crops. This is 13 per cent higher than last year's $1,716,000,000.

Figures not Final

The bureau's figures are not final, and will be affected by any changes in prices received by farmers during the balance of the crop year.

Preliminary value of all crops by provinces, without taking further instalment payments on grain into account includes: (last year's figures in brackets)

Newfoundland $16,343,000 ($$14,533,000); Manitoba $200,261,000 ($$231,381,000); Saskatchewan $301,316,000 ($$316,387,000); British Columbia $36,114,000 ($30,379,000).

Charges in Code Passed by Senate Go to Commons

OTTAWA (CP)—The Senate Wednesday approved amendments to the Criminal Code suggested by the banking and commerce committee and sent to the Commons for action before prorogation of the coon.

The amendments, incorporated into the proposed new code, prompted only brief discussion before the Senate chamber opened for the Christmas recess until Tuesday, Jan. 6.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario) suggested that as a result of the discussion on the committee the section dealing with treason should be considered by the committee for further revision of the code.

One proposed section which was in the code as a definition of treason was inserted in another section by the house of commons. If it had remained under treason, the penalty would have been death or life imprisonment. In the section where it was inserted the maximum penalty was 25 years.

Atlantic Treaty Countries Agree to Spend $239,600,000 For Airports, Solid Defences

PARIS (AP) — The North Atlantic treaty countries agreed today to spend $239,600,000 in 1953 for airports and other solid defences against possible Soviet aggression. This is just a little more than one-half of the $428,000,000 which Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, supreme commander in Europe, had outlined as the "minimum" to provide security.

Rene Pleven, French defence minister, said the reduced figure was agreed upon by the NATO council after a four-day debate. The money voted will provide enough to begin work on airports and other long-term projects as soon as weather permits.

Voted All They Could

Decision on the final figure was taken a few hours before the projected conclusion of the meeting, called to get 14 members to vote all the money they could afford without going broke.

Field Marshal Sir Alexander of Britain, meanwhile, announced that "in time of war" Admiral Earl Mountbatten will be boss of NATO's Mediterranean naval and air forces.

Alexander, Britain's minister of defence, told reporters privately: "While the United States Sixth fleet is not now under the new Mediterranean command, in time of war the commander-in-chief will be responsible for co-ordinating the activities in time of war of the American fleet with those of the naval and air units operating in the Mediterranean."

Authority Outlined

This was the first public announcement on just how much authority the new Mediterranean naval commander - in - chief will have. The ministers of the 14 North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries last Tuesday approved both the setting up of the new naval command and the appointment by Britain of Lord Mountbatten.

The NATO communique had distinguished between the responsibilities of Mountbatten and U. S. Admiral Robert B. Carney, who commands the U. S. Sixth fleet.

The communique had defined Mountbatten's command as mainly defensive. It was to meet in peacetime, while Carney, who commands a striking force, was to have the offensive assignment.

Ridgway Will Speak

Mountbatten and Carney's jobs will be outlined to them by the man who is boss over both of them — U. S. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, supreme Allied commander in Europe. Ridgway called Mountbatten and Carney to a conference this afternoon at NATO headquarters in Paris.

Mountbatten was supreme commander in Southeast Asia during the Second World War, commanding Chinese, Indian, Burmese, British and U. S. land, sea and air forces.

Besides the British fleet, Mountbatten will now command the U. S. Sixth fleet and Greek fleets in the Mediterranean.

Alexander also told reporters British had presented plans to increase her Mediterranean fleet, but he added, "in time of war, it would be increased."

Besides answering to Ridgway, Alexander said Mountbatten will be "responsible to the British chiefs of staff for Britain's military commitments in the Middle East."

Eisenhower Cloaks in Secrecy Views Outlined by MacArthur On Korean War, World Peace

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Eisenhower cloaked in deep secrecy today the Korean and world peace views outlined to him by Gen. MacArthur.

Aides of Eisenhower was studying ideas MacArthur set forth at their conference Saturday, but they added that no detailed public account of what was discussed can be expected.

Eisenhower made ready, meanwhile, for a visit today with a group of Republican leaders in the House of Representatives.

The President-elect said the session is one of a series he will have with the House Republican leaders in Congress to chart a legislative program to deal with inflation and other domestic and foreign problems.

Discussed Problem

After Wednesday's Eisenhower-MacArthur conference at the home of John Foster Dulles, secretary of state-designate, the two generals said they discussed the problem of winning peace in Korea and the rest of the world.

The get-together resulted from a MacArthur request to Dulles. He said then there is "a clear and definite solution to the Korean conflict."

Eisenhower telegraphed MacArthur that he would be glad to have his views. MacArthur accepted.

After the meeting, neither Eisenhower nor MacArthur, in their brief statements whether they were in agreement on how to follow in Korea.

An Eisenhower aide said yesterday there was no doubt that MacArthur had set forth a plan at the two - hour - 45 - minute conference. Dulles sat in on it.

Not With Friends

Afterwards, Eisenhower said: "I have just met with two old friends for a very enjoyable luncheon.

"Our general topic of conversation was peace. We discussed the possibility of peace in Korea with particular reference to the world situation, in which, of course, such Korean peace would have to be determined.

MacArthur said he had "a very pleasant luncheon with my first dent-elect," and remarked it was the first time they had seen each other in 15 years.

5-VOTE MAJORITY

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Stanley Leeder was declared mayor of the township of Front of Yonge Wednesday with a majority of five votes following an recount by Judge D. E. Lewis.

He was re-elected Dec. 1 with a majority of two votes but the defeated candidate, Harry Leeder, requested a recount.

Man Is Found Clinging To Mangrove Bushes

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A 38-year-old man, given up for dead after falling from a tugboat 20 miles off Miami Tuesday, was found clinging to mangrove bushes on Angel Fish creek Wednesday.

Harry Tyzzer was in the water more than 28 hours through one of the season's coldest nights. He was stripped to his shorts and blue with cold.

He was reported in "satisfactory" condition in hospital today.

Tyzzer was found by a Coast Guard PBY and a helicopter flew overhead. But he couldn't attract their attention. Finally a Coast Guard abandoned the search and he began swimming toward shore.

Tyzzer left his balance and fell from the tugboat Logan about 11 a.m. EST Tuesday between Key Florida and Cutter bank. He was rescued late Wednesday by Capt. Cleveland Knowles aboard his fishing vessel.

Tyzzer watched the tug until it moved out of sight, then shed his clothes and swam three or four miles to the mangrove swamp. All the night he sat in the trees in the mangrove roots to ward off the chill northwest wind.

Knowles headed for port when he saw Tyzzer, waving a mangrove twig.

Korean Casualties

OTTAWA (CP) — A Korean casualty list today included one man killed and three wounded in action, bringing the total killed to 306.

The list brought to 1,264 total casualties to date, suffered by Canadian troops in Korea. They include 237 dead, 913 wounded, 28 missing, 25 injured and one prisoner.

In addition the navy has reported 15 killed and one injured in action, and the RCAF has reported seven missing.

Today's list included two Saskatchewan men and two from New Brunswick.

CHURCH RESTORED

DOVER, England (CP) — The "Hellfire Corner" church at St. Margaret's Bay near here has been restored. The church, damaged by cross-channel shelling in 1940, will be retained as a reminder of the ordeal endured by the village in the Second World War.

W.C.A. BENEFITS TO BE EXTENDED IN ONTARIO

Civil Defence Workers Covered in Agreement

OTTAWA (CP) — Benefits of the provincial Workmen's Compensation Act are to be extended to Ontario's civil defence workers, with the costs shared equally by the federal and provincial governments, the federal health department announced today.

The agreement is the first such joint undertaking entered into by the federal government's offer to share equally the cost of insurance which the provinces might agree to pay to anyone killed or injured while serving in the civil defence organizations.

The announcement said it is expected other provinces will take advantage of the cost-sharing plan and that such agreements will aid in recruiting civil defence workers.

The Ontario agreement covers persons training for, as well as actually engaged in, civil defence work.

Can Submit Claims

Under the agreement, if a civil defence worker is killed or injured by an accident related to such service, either inside or outside Ontario, claims may be submitted to the workmen's compensation board by the worker or, as for other employment covered by the act.

Provisions of the agreement do not apply to federal, provincial or municipal employees already entitled to compensation by virtue of their regular employment or to other civil defence workers already covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act.

The agreement may be ended by 90 days notice by either party, and it automatically ends if "any attack on or invasion of Canadian territory by armed forces of any foreign country."

House Briefs

OTTAWA (CP)—Value of cigarets released for consumption in Canada in November totalled $29,315,000, Stats Secretary Bradley said in a statement Wednesday in the Commons for Rev. E. G. Hansell (SC—Macleod). The excise tax on the cigarets was $79,812,000 and the excise duty $94,136,000. It was unable to give the sales tax figure.

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada imported 9,900 tons of refined sugar from Cuba in the first nine months of this year, State Secretary Bradley told Dr. W. J. Brown (L—Essex East) in reply to a series of questions, he said this sugar is subject to a duty of 2½ cents a pound. He added Canada has no agreement to buy Cuban refined sugar.

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is not planning to reduce the 20-per-cent down-payment provision for home loans under the National Housing Act, Resources Minister Lapierre said in the Commons Wednesday. The minister, in charge of housing, was replying to a question from P. T. Hellyer (L—Davenport) who said there were newspaper reports that steps were being taken to reduce the down payment on government-guaranteed loans.

—BRESLAU (CP) — Thieves broke the office safe — from the branch mill of Waterloo Country Supplies Co-operative Wednesday — and escaped with their late for any big haul.

Manager Norman Brunk said today that the safe contained between $60 and $70 in cash. The thieves had removed $1,000 to the head office at Kitchener, six miles away.

Nineteen Entombed

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)—Nineteen African miners were entombed Wednesday when 4,500 feet underground by a subterranean landslide. Two other Africans died in European hospitals after being killed by the landslide.

A pressure-burst in the Nourse gold mine caused a fall of rock. Six Africans, all of them injured, were saved.

U.S. Agents Find Red Spy Ring Among Japanese

TOKYO (AP) — The United States told Japan Monday that left, ist writer Wataru Kaji was involved in a communist spy ring and appealed to U.S. authorities for shelter from his Communist bosses, a highly-reliable source said today.

The source expected:

The American note to the Japanese foreign office said Maji was lying when he denied espionage but was held illegally by American counter - intelligence agents for more than a year.

The note also told of American efforts to smash a Communist spy ring operating in Japan since at least 1951.

Note Delivered

The note was delivered to the foreign office in four copies in questions about Kaji's allegations. Both American embassy and Japanese officials refused to comment on the note.

A foreign office spokesman told a press conference Tuesday that Japanese police were investigating the spy ring.

A Japanese radio operator has been arrested for transmitting illegal messages to Vladivostok and North Korea. He said he sent them for the Communist party after showing them to U.S. authorities.

Kaji was reported to be a close associate of the No. 2 Japanese Communist, Kasuo Nozaka.

The source said the American note made these points:

Kaji's story was an attempt to convince his Communist bosses he was held under duress. Actually he was not.

Trap Laid

American agents discovered while investigating the spy ring that espionage headquarters communicated with its agents through Japanese intermediaries. U.S. agents laid a trap and caught Kaji. Kaji admitted being a Communist party member and spied and his life was in danger because he had confessed. He was released prior to April 28, when the peace treaty went into effect.

HUGHES HEADS RKO

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Howard Hughes, manufacturer of airplanes, oil tools and movies, was elected chief executive officer of RKO Wednesday, although he recently sold controlling interest in the studio to Chicago interests for $7,023,940.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP)—Sympathetic Fetir air from the northwest completed its three through Ontario this morning. Temperatures will in general be 10 to 15 degrees lower than those experienced the last couple of days. A few light snowflurries particularly in localities bordering Lake Huron may be expected today, but under the influence of an extensive area of high pressure which is moving rapidly eastward, skies are expected to clear over night. However, even with sunny skies on Friday, temperatures are not expected to climb above 15 in southern sections and 15 northern sections.

Turkeys Plentiful Across Canada, Selling Much Less Than Last Year

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dad will probably enjoy his 1952 Christmas turkey as he hasn't for years. It'll cost him less.

A Canadian Press survey today shows most families buy turkeys in the 10 to 15-pound range. For birds they'll probably pay less prices ranging from a high of 65 cents a pound in Quebec to a low of 49 cents in Ontario and a low of 49 cents in Saskatchewan.

The wheat province, with a large supply of birds, reports prices will probably be lower than in six or seven years. Last year's high prices and big demand "probably" parallels in most parts of the country to go in for turkeys last spring in a bigger way.

Only two cities which hints there may be a shortage is Winnipeg, where turkeys are being shipped to Ontario and Quebec by the boxcar.

A heavy movement of the birds from the Prairie provinces over the last month to the East during Eastern farmers cause for alarm. Turkeys are rated cheapest in the Prairies. The climate is good and there are large stretches of land in which they can forage for food.

Western birds are expected to total from 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 this year, 10 per cent less than last year.

Ducks and geese are in fair demand in Alberta at prices considerably lower than last year. There's less demand for these birds in the East.

Jingle of Santa's Bells Drowned Out by Ringing of Cash Registers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The ringing of Santa's sleigh bells is being drowned out by ringing cash registers these days in what is shaping up as Canada's greatest Christmas buying season.

A Canadian Press survey shows the country's Christmas pocketbook bulging. But it's being emptied faster than ever before and likely will be cleaned out when Dec. 25 rolls around.

Department stores from coast to coast report business up from 10 to 30 per cent over last year. A brief look at their Christmas boxoffice receipts is available across the country. Prices are about the same as last year.

There is a marked trend everywhere toward buying more expensive gifts, such as radio consoles and electrical appliances. But the old standby, wearing apparel, still is far ahead of any other single item.

The womenfolk most often choose gifts for husbands, dressing gowns and ties for the men. Chances are good the missus will find lingerie, perfume or slippers for her under the tree Christmas morning.

Shoppers are extravagant in gifts, including luggage, jewelry and expensive perfumes.

Retail's hot for more dollars shows in increased sale and supply of goodies. Here's a typical report in Saint John, N. B., is a china cup and saucer selling for $2.50.

Fredericton farmers are keeping stores in Prairie provinces report the blast. Edmonton reports sales well up, as high as 50 per cent in some lines. The boxoffice also is saying for "quality" products.

Jewellers are sharing in the holiday buying bonanza. One manager of a large Canadian chain said china and silver are doing unusually well. Glassware and living room lamps are other luxury gifts in demand.

Heretic Invades 'Peace' Meeting, Fight

VIENNA (AP)—A British clergyman today defied Communist domination of the world peace congress and attacked Russia for several of its. present-day international policies.

Canon C. F. Harman, a vicar of Swindon, Wiltshire, describing himself as a Christian pacifist, told the congress that the Soviet Union is responsible for a number of wars in several methods "causing great disquiet among a large section of public opinion in the West." He said they were:

1. "The cavalier dismissal by Mr. Vishinsky of the Indian proposals for a truce in Korea has caused bewilderment and a sense of hopelessness. Would it be possible for this congress to urge certain concessions on these crucial issues in order to bring life and hope to the world?

2. "The retention of German prisoners taken in the Second World War. This is not calculated to foster friendly relations between Germany and Russia.

3. "My Christian conception of the sacredness of human life revolts against the savage sentences imposed on political offenders in any society. Such a peaceful approach to political and racial minorities would do much to allay bitterness and bring about reconciliation.

Canon Harman's attack on Soviet policies was the most bitter heard during the five-day congress. So far only three other persons among scores of speakers, have in any way criticized Russian or Communist policy.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Delta Air Lines carried its 5,000,-000th, passenger today and not without a flurry of excitement.

When ticket No. 5,000,000 was issued in Chicago to Miss Marcia Chapman, the time prepared to give her full honors, including an orchid corsage and a set of matched luggage.

But when Miss Chapman strolled in to claim her ticket she turned out to be four years old and could barely be seen over the top of the ticket counter.

A doll was substituted for the orchids.

CHRISTMAS PARTY HELD AT PLANT

Completion of one year in business was observed on Wednesday night, when Addison Lloyd, entertained the staff of Lloyd's Cleaners and Dyers to a Christmas party at the plant on Catherine street. Tables were arranged in the plant and a delightful banquet was served. The tables were suitably decorated with Christmas favors. Mr. Lloyd thanked his staff for the spirit of co-operation that had been shown during the past year and Santa Claus delivered to each in attendance a suitable gift along with a substantial cheque.

Th (owner was sincerely t anked for his kind gesture and the arrangements for a social evening.

CHRISTMAS ASSEMBLY WILL BE BROADCAST

The annual Christmas assembly of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Institute will be held Friday morning, Principal George E. Corrie announced today.

A portion of the varied program will be broadcast over radio station CJBQ from 9.05 a.m. to 9.30 a.m.

One of Oldest Landmarks Being Cut Down

A big elm tree on the bank of the Rawlen Creek at Stirling and said to be one of the oldest landmarks of the village, has come to the end of its days. The old elm whose limbs were beginning to rot and which was considered rapidly becoming a menace was cut during the week and is now being hauled away.

Residents of Stirling with an interest in such things, claim the big tree, which has shaded the main street of the village for several generations, was close to 150 years old. However, no one has yet found the trunk was still relatively sound.

The tree was situated near the bridge on the highway route through the village.

Rev. A. E. Baker, Stirling, Receives 16th Christmas Card From Dowager Queen Mary

Proudest people in Hastings County this Christmastime, albeit repetition are the family of the Rev. A. E. Baker, minister of the Point United Church, Stirling.

Today, Mr. Baker was the proud possessor of the sixteenth Christmas card from the British Commonwealth's beloved Dowager Queen Mary.

Exemplified in the beautiful card is the Dowager Queen's exquisite yet simple taste of her own England's quiet countryside. Her Royal Highness selected the quiet flowerful beauty of an old English church.

Mr. Baker, after adding this sixteenth card is a treasured collection, recalled the incident that prompted the Dowager Queen to include him and his family in her remembrance.

It happened away back in 1936 when a large host of Canadian First War veterans attended the unveiling of the famous Canadian memorial at Vimy Ridge.

Mr. Baker and his family attended a garden party at Sandringham House, in London. He was introduced to the Queen Mother, and a subsequent conversation with regard to a font that was dedicated in a Toronto church to her Majesty, led to the royal Christmas appreciation.

Mr. Baker, naturally, has treasured the collection. He has carefully guarded these pictured remembrances of one of the Empire's most loved queens.

Obituary

MRS. GEORGE WOODHOUSE (Marmora)

The funeral of the late Mrs. George Woodhouse took place on Tuesday. Service was conducted at St. Andrew's United Street by Rev. K. J. Crawford, B. A., B. D., at 1 p. m. He was assisted by Rev. J. F. Lane of Madoc who took the Scripture readings and Rev. W. C. Stevenson of Renfrew, a friend of the family who preached on Solomon's description of a virtuous woman as found in the 31st chapter of Proverbs. The hymns were "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me," and "Still, Still, With Thee." Mr. A.W. Drew and Mrs. H. C. Barlow sang, "When My Soul Reaches Home." Following the service the cortege proceeded to Yarker where interment took place in the cemetery there.

The bearers were Stanley Lavender, W. B. Wilde, Charles Lummiss, Jack Hatch, William Leonard and Harry Keating.

PERCY GRANT SAGER

Funeral services for the late Percy Grant Sager, who was instantly killed in an automobile accident near Rochester, New York, on December 9th, were held from the residence of his brother, Grant Sager, of Eldorado, on Saturday, December 13. He was in his 45th year.

Born in Bannockburn the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sager, he is survived by two brothers, Charles and Leslie, of Eldorado, and a sister, Mrs. R. B. Hynde, of Hillier.

The deceased was employed by the R.C.A.F. He attended Cooper public school and was a member of the Anglican church.

The Rev. H. Good, of St. Bartholomew's Anglican Church, in Bannockburn, was in charge of the service.

The bearers were: Fred Knapp, Wilfred Short, Lavern Beaudrie, Fred Rollins, Ross Rollins and Rex Rollins.

Interment was in Fox's Cemetery.

Moiras Swamp Picton Army In Basketball Tilt

Belleville Moiras climbed all over Picton Army last night in an intermediate 'B' Bay of Quinte basketball game played at the R.C.I. gymnasium. The score was 81-37.

John Batchelor paced the victors with 24 points. He was followed by Doug Soules who potted 16.

Despite the fast action, Army never could get untangled and trailed at the half, 44-17. Moiras continued to outclass their opponents in the final 20 minutes.

The teams:

Picton Army—Kauffman (6); Hooperman (9); Sedoris (1); LeBlanc (2); Scarff (1); Davies (4); Rice, Herron, Powers, Olson and MacCauville.

Belleville—Muirhead (8); Doucett (4); Batchelor (20); Massey (8); Spiegel (2); Pappas (4); Garrow (4); Soule (16); Hayman (11); Watson (6); sub, Fitzpatrick (8).

Hope for Action

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Trustees' Council is seeking the same legislative power to organize that was granted to teachers eight years ago. If granted, the trustees could meet teachers on such matters as salaries on a more equal footing.

The council at a meeting here, drew up a draft of legislation needed to incorporate itself as the official co-ordinating body of the seven trustee groups in Ontario. The draft has been sent to the provincial government and member school boards.

It is hoped action will be taken at the next session of the legislature.

"LIFE" IN SPANISH

NEW YORK (AP) — The publishers of Life Magazine next week will issue their first foreign-language magazine, Life en Espanol, a Spanish publication to be sold in Latin America. Roy E. Larsen, president of Time, Inc., announced today the start of the new magazine and said it would be a fortnightly published every other Monday.

SAYS EUROPE CALM

Boston (AP) — Senator-elect John F. Kennedy, Dem.-Mass., says the attitude of Europeans is that Russians will not attempt a military invasion of western Europe. He returned Wednesday night from a three-week tour of Western Europe and also told reporters that Europeans seem to feel there will be no major change in American foreign policy under Eisenhower.

The Editor Suggests--

The attention of all fathers, young in spirit, is drawn to the Edgar Guest poem on page 4 — "Toy Shopper". The writer, Edgar Guest, whimsical mood sums of those delightful thoughts which seem to lie dormant in all "boys" 20 years old and over when they go into the toy stores these days.

MOUNTBATTEN TO PARIS

V.:LETTA, Malta (Reuters) — Vice-Admiral Earl Mountbatten, Royal Navy commander in the Mediterranean, left today for Paris to talk over his new job as Atlantic pact commander-in-chief for the Mediterranean. He will meet Gen. Matthew Ridgway, Atlantic pact supreme commander in Europe, under whom he will serve.

Standard Electrical Equipment Should be Used on Yule Trees

Mindful of the many fires involving Christmas trees as well as other accidents which occur at this time of year, the Canadian Standards Association urged that only electrical equipment and toys conforming with rigid specifications be used or purchased.

They point out that saying to yourself, "It couldn't happen in my home" is no protection. Christmas trees will burn—if they are ignored as the utmost precaution with lighting should be used. Candles should never be used near lighting Christmas trees and window decorations —only electrical equipment which is fully approved.

A fire hazard exists when the wiring of Christmas lights is frayed or the bulbs used are unsafe or if sockets are cracked in connecting or disconnecting lights. Be sure there is no fire hazard wire, loose connections or broken sockets. Watch those Christmas gift electrical toys and electric equipment gifts. Choose those which comply with the safety standards of the Canadian Standards Association.

In decorating the home for Christmas, don't place cotton and other flammable material around the tree. If in doubt, look to wiring, electric trains and other electrical toys away from Christmas trees. Don't hook up electric toys near water, heating or gas pipes. If a fault occurs, a child might be badly shocked. If in doubt, call in a qualified electrician.

T.W. Dunwoody, Tyendinaga Twp. Drowns in Well

Dropping through a wooden cover which apparently broke under his weight, Thos. W. Dunwoody, 74, of Tyendinaga township, died in the well outside his home either late Tuesday or Wednesday morning.

Dunwoody, who lived alone on the 6th concession of the Hastings county township, a few miles east of here, was last seen by neighbors on Tuesday. When he was seen Wednesday neighbors went to his farm and failing to find him put in a call for provincial police.

In the search for the missing man the broken well cover was noticed and although only water was visible, probing in the well by police revealed Dunwoody's body beneath the surface. He had dropped into the well feet first and then slumped over when his feet reached the bottom.

Provincial Constables Custer and Perry investigated. There will be no inquest.

NEW TURBOJET

WOODRIDG., N.J. (AP) — Roy T. Hurley, president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, said Wednesday the Napier-Nomad-2 Thunderstreak, powered with a Curtiss-Wright Sapphire turbojet engine, is vastly superior to the Russian MIG-15. "It outperforms any airplane of its class anywhere in the world," Hurley said in a statement. The speed of the plane, while above 600 miles an hour, is secret.

Fire of Unknown Origin Destroys Unoccupied House

West Huntingdon (Special) — Fire of unknown origin early today destroyed a vacant frame house owned by Mrs. Fred Johnston of West Huntingdon. Loss was estimated at $3,500, partially covered by insurance.

A blind man on the farm of Vincent Farrell saw the blaze at about 2 o'clock this morning and raised the alarm, but the fire had gained too great a start and everything could be done to save the structure. The house stood alone and no other buildings were endangered.

The owner is at loss to explain the fire as the home was not wired for electricity and had been unoccupied for six months. It was possible, however, that a transient may have slept in the house, the fire being caused by careless smoking.

APPROVE EQUAL RIGHTS

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — The United Nations social committee Wednesday approved the text of a proposed pact which would bind all countries ratifying it to give women political rights equal to those of men.

Reeve Graham Hit by Car, Arm Broken

Tweed (Special) — Reeve T. C. Graham, of this village, is in Belleville General Hospital with a broken arm and facial lacerations suffered Wednesday evening when he was struck by a car in front of the Tweed Post Office.

Reeve Graham was on his way home when he is said to have stepped in front of a car driven by W. Bruno. It was reported Mr. Bruno was driving without lights and Mr. Graham apparently failed to notice the vehicle.

READY FOR NEW JOB

Salem, Ore. (AP) — Douglas McKay, who will become secretary of interior in the Eisenhower cabinet next month, resigned as governor of Oregon Wednesday. Paul Patterson, 53, who as president of the state senate was first in line under the egon law to succeed McKay, was sworn into office as governor. He will serve until January, 1955.

NOTICE

All members of the Holy Name Society are requested to be present at the Corpus Christi Church Room on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock for the annual banquet in the late James Lafferty, a former member.

IN MEMORIAM

CRONKRIGHT. — In fond and loving memory of a dear wife and true companion, Effie Jane Cronkright, who departed this life one year ago today, December 18.

One year has passed away and gone. Left lonely by the side of the lake
Here I must journey on
Till the angels come to take me home
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers I place on her grave
May wither and decay,
But the love of her, this always beneath
Shall never fade away.
Sincerely remembered by husband,
Ernest. D318

CRONKRIGHT. — In fond and loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Ernest Cronkright, who departed this life one year ago today.

They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget,
But time so far has only proved
How much we love and regret.
God gave us strength to fight it
And courage to bear the blow,
But that we meant to lose you, dear mother,
We can tell you now.
—Ever remembered and longed for always by a loving son Mac and family. D318

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartiest thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, floral tributes, cards and telephone calls received following the death of a beloved husband and father. Our thanks also to Canon A. H. Creegan and the Belleville Burial Company for their kind understanding.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Western oils continued to push ahead in early afternoon stock market trading today as the rest of the market settled backward.

Western Oils gains outnumbered losses about three to one although Britalta, a recent rapid riser, dropped 15 cents in active trading. Mid-Continent, Ronzana, Scurry and Sweet Grass added pennies in turnovers ranging to 53,000 shares while Bailey Selburn, Cal. and Ed., Central Explorers and Del Rio gained larger amounts.

Base metals showed a majority of losses led by Noranda, Consolidated Smelters and Osisko. Dominion Asbestos gained.

Papers were weakest in the mixed industrials list but manufacturing companies also slipped. Utilities and refining oils gained.

Some golds slipped but secondary issues held firm in light trading. Among the juniors, Campbell and Sullivan gained. Conwest led the prospects' gains and Hoyle the losses.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Cattle trade was dull today at the Ontario stockyards and sales were too few to establish a market trend. Receipts: cattle 70; calves 40; hogs 300; sheep and lambs 40. The bulk over from Wednesday was 400 cattle.

Choice weighty steers sold at $25.75 with common to medium stockers at 16-20 and good cows at 12.50-13.50.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The American dollar was at a discount of 3 1-16 per cent in terms of Canadian funds at the Bank of Canada reported at noon today.

Veteran Boston Political Writer Left School at 10, On Job at 92

BOSTON (AP)—James Morgan, who left school at 10 to become one of America's great political reporters, was 82 years "young" Dec. 18.

The Boston Globe's editorial writer and political analyst for 69 years says he can never grow too old to learn from "my teacher, curiosity."

"He still has the sharpest mind in the office," a Globe executive said.

Morgan recently wrote a friend: "We are not responsible for the binding of our book of our life, but we are responsible for its contents. So long as we keep it open to new ideas and hopes we are young."

Morgan has chronicled for, millions of readers the careers of almost a third of the presidents of the United States and covered the presidential conventions of both major political parties for more than 50 years.

Wrote Election Story

Yet, rather than rest on his laurels, when he was almost 92 Morgan raced the newspaper's deadline to pound out the Globe's lead on the greatest story of the year—General Eisenhower's election as president.

He wrote one of the most tender love letters of his life when he was 91. It was to his wife, Helen, on their 58th wedding anniversary. They never had been separated for a single day of their married lives.

When he was 90 he flew—for the first time—across the country and learned to type.

Although Morgan is intellectually young, he confesses to being "a reactionary in my habits."

He was 40 before he would carry a watch, a gift from Globe associates. For years he refused to have the privacy of his home invaded by a telephone and wrote his news stories in longhand.

Curiosity was his teacher but reading and traveling were his playmates.

Inveterate Traveller

Mention "travel" and Morgan's face lights up like a lamp. Yet he has crossed the Atlantic 24 times and this continent 28. He spent two years retracing Napoleon Bonaparte's footsteps through Europe, Asia and Africa.

Morgan's impartial but crisp reporting is a model for any cub reporter.

"The words just pop out," Morgan explains modestly. "I never need to use a dictionary. Sometimes, though, I have to be careful to get the right rhythm in the words."

Graciousness and composure, perhaps those are the secret of his youthfulness. Associates say they have never known him to lose his temper, raise his voice in anger or swear. Rare qualities, indeed, in a newspaper man.

55 Spoons Missing

KITCHENER (CP) — Three weeks ago the Kitchener Chamber of Commerce and the Waterloo Federation of Agriculture sponsored a town-and-country dinner. About 450 persons attended.

Today they discovered 55 spoons, valued at about $20, were missing.

"We hate to think they were stolen," said a county representative.

Driver Fined For Leaving Scene of Crash

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) A driver who, police said, struck a motorcycle reverely injuring a rider and drove on to a dance without reporting the accident, today was fined $300 and prohibited from driving for a year.

Daniel Krnpotich, 21, pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident.

Melvin McMillan, 15, lost a leg as a result of the accident. Police said the youth lay bleeding on the road half an hour after the accident although a crowd of spectators gathered.

Accused of Car Theft, Given Prison Term

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — One of two Clinton airmen charged in the theft of a car owned by Charles Chute, of R. R. 1, St. Thomas, today was sentenced to reformatory. The other was freed.

Lewis Thomas Albrecht, 17, admitted stealing the car Dec. 1. He said he drove it to Toronto where he picked up Ronald D. Murrell, also 17.

Magistrate Donald Menzies sentenced Albrecht to 12 months definite and three months indeterminate. Charge against Murrell was dismissed.

MEAFORD (CP) — Forty tons of turkeys were auctioned here at prices less than 50 cents a pound Wednesday at the 29th annual Meaford turkey market. Ducks and geese sold as low as 35 cents a pound, with capons selling at 50 cents.

Officials at the auction said it was highly unusual for turkeys to be selling at a lower price than chicken. They said large numbers of turkeys being shipped into Ontario from the West were responsible.

Tito's Break With Vatican Arouses Fresh Worry Over Weakest Link in Chain

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Premier Tito's break with the Vatican aroused fresh worry here today over the weakest link in the chain of anti-Soviet countries in Europe—relations between Communist Yugoslavia and Roman Catholic Italy.

The U. S. government's concern with the situation arises from its desire, as a matter of major policy, to establish close political and military co-operation among all the European countries, in and out of the North Atlantic alliance, in the interest of checking Soviet power.

The diplomatic break probably will make it more difficult to achieve this aim in two regards: tying Yugoslavia closer to West Europe, and trying to solve the Italian-Yugoslav dispute over Trieste.

Some officials think there may be difficulties with Congress, where the anti-Soviet Communist government of Yugoslavia has always been regarded with skepticism by many members.

Tickles Relations

Tito broke with Russia in mid-1948. Since then the U. S. has tightened its relations with him. During the fiscal year which ended last June 30, Britain, the U. S. and France together provided Tito with $120,000,000; this year their help totals $99,000,000. In both years the U. S. share has been $78,000,000.

The Truman administration has regarded Yugoslavia as a great asset to the West because (1) it is a living example of the ability of a satellite state to break with Moscow and survive, and (2) Tito's 30-odd divisions, though they have been badly in need of modernization, are a valuable addition to anti-Soviet strength.

Tito has made clear he is a doctrinaire Communist with no interest in adopting democratic ways or policies. Moreover he has had a long feud with the Roman Catholic Church, culminated Wednesday by the diplomatic break.

The particularly thorny problem is posed by the rival claims of Yugoslavia and Italy to Trieste, bring between them at the head of the Adriatic sea.

Muncy Reserve Indian Charged With Cattle Theft

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Exactly one week after a rustler escaped when surprised while butchering two calves on the Muncey reserve range, Frank Morris Fisher, 50, of Forest was arrested Wednesday night and charged with theft of the cattle.

Grant Carruthers, Melbourne farmer, was ejding the range on horseback making an inspection of his cattle when he came upon a man butchering calves. The thief fled, was overtaken by Carruthers and gave a name which later was proved fictitious. When Carruthers rode off to get assistance the man made good his escape.

When Fisher appeared in county magistrate's court today he was remanded without plea to Friday on a charge of stealing two Hereford calves valued at $85 each and belonging to Carruthers.

THE HORSES WILL NOT BE FORGOTTEN

At the conclusion of prayers as the House of Commons began its afternoon session Monday there had been no intimation that the assembly faced much else than another day of desultory debate. But when Prime Minister St. Laurent rose to table the long-delayed report of the Currie probe into army camp lootings the stage was set for political drama of a kind the House has not seen in a long time.

The Prime Minister was aware, of course, that the report he tabled was loaded with political dynamite; that it was bound to shake the Government and shower it with much unpleasant debris before the last blasts were detonated. He made no overt gesture, however, that he was raising the curtain on a "double feature" which would magnify the worst features of the Currie report many times; if not, indeed, to the proportions of a political scandal.

"I am taken entirely by surprise," Mr. St. Laurent confessed when Stanley Knowles of the C.C.F. rose later in the afternoon to disclose that he was in possession of a draft of the Currie report which differed in a number of respects from publication in the press. He asked if the undisguised inference was that it had been changed to modify its reflections upon the Government before it was presented to the House as the official version.

As the best the report could do was not to offer much comfort to a government contemplating an early election test in the country. The unadorned facts were incredible enough. How does a government which has been in office for one of the great army camps of the country could lapse into a condition in which horses were placed on the Army's payroll as laborers? How is it that "ghost soldiers" on the camp included such highly serviceable things as kitchen ranges, heaters, sinks and the like; or that a boat and several wagons were purchased by putting them through false orders for 1,000 bags of cement; or that a dam was built at a cost of several thousand dollars without authorization and without any apparent utility unless it were to serve as a swimming pool for Army officers?

These, of course, are the glaring highlights. And most of these facts have been known to the public for many months. Most of them had already been investigated and in a number of persons, including two officers at Petawawa, have been sent to prison.

But it should have been revealed before that horses were on the payroll — and this at a time when half of a four billion dollar annual budget is going for defence spending by the Government. Whatever the ultimate aspects of the Currie report, nothing is more certain than that the Government of the day will never be allowed to forget that there were horses on the payroll. Indeed, Liberal governments in the future will be lucky if they escape being hit through such things as these that governments have been known to come completely apart at the seams. There may be answers for outright dishonesty in wholesale lootings of stores and materials but when the racketeers in the Petawawa camp went so far as to flaunt their easy deceptions of the paying masters in this manner, it cap be neither answered nor forgiven.

It is in the nature of politics that while the more shocking disclosures of the Currie report may be soon forgotten the horses on the Petawawa payroll will remain to haunt the present administration as a spectre of scandal.

All the arguments pro and con about the responsibility for this state of affairs must be thrashed out before the next polling day comes. It may be established that the Currie report is an indictment of military management rather than of government administration. It may be disclosed that some infamous traitor in government ranks was responsible for the embarrassment which two versions of the report have created for the government. And it can be shown that this confidential department report need never have been placed before the House of Commons, and would not have been, had not the Government determined to make a full disclosure of all that the Currie probe revealed.

But Canadian citizens who have been paying the highest tax rate in peacetime history for defence costs are never going to forget the horses on the payroll at Petawawa.

SERVING A TRAGIC NEED

The importance of Ontario's recently established disability pensions scheme is not realized by the average run of citizens but the deserving need is being fully revealed in the pension applications which are now being received at Queen's Park.

Tragic conditions which one would hardly believe existed are being disclosed. One family, for instance, applied for pension because Mrs. Mongrain is blind. The oldest was 32, the next 28, and the third 24. They required all their care of an infant. Despite the strain and the great amount of work the family hadn't sent them to an institution. That another case two idiots had to be chained. And still another and sadder case had to be kept in a cage.

Cases such as these, though fortunately not so shocking, are multiplied by the hundreds in the 4,000 applications for the new pensions now on file. There are a great many instances where families have been scraping along and developing what often looks like meagre resources to take care of these helpless dependents.

It will never be said that tit's measure of social welfare is one which is to be grudged by the taxpayers of Ontario.

TOY SHOPPER

As a shopper after toys
For our little girls and boys,
Say's a fire truck or a train
On the latest fancy plans,
Not of them alone I think—
Let me put it down in ink—
It must also be a toy
That their father can enjoy.

Not on anything I seize,
Though the children it would please,
And the plaything that I seek

May not last throughout the week.
Run by current or by spring,
It must also be a thing
For a little girl or boy
That their father can enjoy.

He must sprawl upon the floor—
As did I long years before—
Wielding pleasure, as his dad,
In the Christmas toys he had.
He must get the self-same fun
From the playthings of his son
Which is why I seek a toy
That his father can enjoy.

When Is It Obscene?

(Ottawa Citizen)

During the last session of parliament a special Senate committee began an investigation of obscene literature, but adjourned with its work incomplete. As considerable public interest has been shown in the question a move will probably be made to reconstitute the committee. Alternatively, as suggested in a resolution sponsored in the Commons by Mr. E Fulton, Conservative member for Kamloops, a joint committee of both houses might be set up.

In either case this is to be hoped that the investigating group will seek the guidance of as representative a body of opinion as possible. This can be said to have been done by the Senate's incomplete probe. In particular, there will be worth hearing the views of a wide range of modern novelists, many of whom have dealt with the lives of human beings with an extreme frankness of language. Depending on the author and the individual reader, their books may be a source of effects, ranging from titillation to sheer disgust. Certain books, this editor feels, there are different ways in which a reader may be shocked and revolted as a harsh and earthly realism may awaken the public to unwarranted or sordid preoccupation.

Definitions of indecency and obscenity are elusive. The subject of indecency in literature and pictures remains as serious as, if not more so, in some other fields, as for example in drugs.

Parliament apparently intends to continue its researches into this difficult problem, touching as it does such questions as early training of the individual and the Christian church. The committee will be well advised to seek the views of a number of professional writers, so that it may hear the point of view of some representatives of Canada's leading writer as well as the consumers of their product.

Why They Are Called 'Gls'

(St. Louis Post-Democrat)

Russia's Foreign Minister Vishinsky has complained that when he says the United States considers its soldiers government chattels he is misquoted when "GI" standing for government issue.

One of the more amusing explanations for the rigors of army training is that everything outside of port or starboard is "government." Uniforms, shelter halves, mess kits, canteens, rifles, bayonet, pick and shovel for digging in, blankets, rifle and ammunition belts, gas mask, infantryman, toilet articles, barracks bag, shoes and leggings, all are "government issue" or "GI." He does not get these necessities free, however. He can be sure that he has received all that he can possibly transport, he finds when he comes down with them at the supply room waiting for something that has been omitted. His does not have to pay for it and he cannot reject it. It is "GI."

So it was that many letters were tossed back and forth between friend and sweetheart during the last war. Such remarks as "Give me some more GI soap" or "Send me a hundred rifles by day. Men who had recently stepped into the military life seemed to find satisfaction in emphasizing the fact that their equipment was furnished by the government. Soon they were calling each other "GIs" and the designation finally took the fate of headline writers, it is not surprising that they tossed the successor of "doughboy," which was the name for the soldier in the First World War, I. Only Vishinsky, or someone else who is trying hard to make trouble for this country, could find any evil implication in the acceptance of the army recruit's GI equipment. He, however, is not to give either "doughboy" or "GI" our unqualified endorsement. "Soldier" is the best word to use when speaking of soldiers.

Title Matters But Little

(Ottawa Journal)

The loyalty and devotion which the average Canadian will give to Elizabeth II will depend little on the fact that in our statutes and proclamations she will be designated as Canada's Queen. For veneration of the sovereign, for so much of memory and history, depends little upon what formalists write on parchment.

On the other hand, no particular reason for violent indignation if the political theologians want Her Majesty's titles expressed in Latin and so, holding such things to be important, and insisting that such titles or forms be flexible enough to please all the peoples and creeds in a Commonwealth and Empire which extends over the globe and amazingly includes a republic.

Some may wonder why in the Queen's title, "Defender of the Faith," the word "Dominion" has been dropped, and why others want to know asked for such change. What the answer will be, if the question is put, is not known to us, but all seeing that we haven't thought of anything else and couldn't understand, and be collapsed at the top of the stairs, we can think for permission to determine cause of death by autopsy we have found. I never reached a satisfactory conclusion about it in my own mind.

The "heart failure" obsession carries weight in the community mind because old time doctors entertained the idea that there was but one likely "fault for no apparent reason. Doctors today, successfully operate on the heart to correct congenital (blue baby) and acquired (valvular leakage) defects, have proved that the heart is not so vulnerable as the old timers imagined.

Then, too, the familiar assumption that any case of unexpected syncope, faintness, dizziness, blackout or lapse of consciousness is a "near attack" adds confection.

Even today a good many doctors share the popular notion that the heart is inherently weak and undependable, and so they give many patients bad advice which keeps such patients walking on eggs for the rest of their lives—unless they are lucky enough to come under the observation and care of a doctor with a better understanding of the trouble.

It needs to be said again and again that exercise is just as important as rest. In the treatment of heart disease it means graduated exercise, adapted to the individual patient's requirement and properly supervised by the physician.

In a talk here a year or two ago I quoted an analysis by Dr. Master, Dr. Levy and Jaffe of the circumstances with the onset of coronary occlusion in 1,440 cases. In 25% of the cases the first symptoms occurred—I hate to mention it now, but I must—when the patients were asleep. In 21% when they were at rest. In 18% when engaged in moderate activity, in 15% when they were dressing and in only 9% when they were exerting themselves in unusual degree.

And yet, so unprogressive are most physicians that the standard treatment imposed in the coronary occlusion or thrombosis (heart "attack" to you,—) is still 8 or 10 weeks, in bed. Lest some opinionated "heart specialist" take this to the public forum to warn the public against this "dangerous" technique, I'm ready to talk I'll cite physiological and clinical evidence to get victims of coronary trouble out of bed within a week or ten days at the longest.

Island Relics Are Mystery

(Winnipeg Tribune)

Somehow it is hard to associate nationalization with Easter Island. This island, 2,500 miles out in the Pacific off the coast of South America, seems like a forgotten relic of unrecorded history. The origin of its people and the mystery of the 550 stone statues that dot its landscape, some of them approximately 30 feet high, have caused the curiosity of millions the world over. It is difficult to associate Easter Island with the present.

Yet news has come from Chile that the Chilean government has decided to nationalize Easter Island and convert it for the benefit of the inhabitants.

The island today is a far cry from what it was when the explorers discovered it in the 18th century. There a population of 5,000 lived on it amid surroundings that were of such a primitive character as to astonish the explorers.

Chile's new island has only about 700 inhabitants, about five per cent of whom are pure-blooded Easter people. Soil erosion, disease and civil war have changed its face and its people. Only the great bro-ding stone statues remain unchanged.

Canadians Not Convinced

(Saint John Telegraph-Journal)

It is unwise to count on the soldiers' vote as an overdose of brussels sprouts because it is actually a delicacy many people enjoy and it is obviously impossible to do for 1,000 men. The Canadian Vegetable Crops Book claims the vegetable is only about 400 years old, appearing in Belgium around the 15th or the 16th Century. Before joining the 27th Brigade, many Canadians had never tasted sprouts.

In spite of the Canadian Army's opinion of brussels sprouts, however, it is rapidly becoming a popular food. They are grown in a cool, moist climate and therefore, have been enjoyed by Englishmen since 1587. This year in California a crop of 33,000,000 pounds was harvested and it is time to pick them in a cold rain).

But there is still no marked increase in production of brussels sprouts in Canada. And it isn't surprising that any repatriated Canadian soldiers will take up the growing of them as a career.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

TO OLD FRIENDS

Are you growing old and feeling perhaps that you are useless? Cheer up. You are never useless as long as you can raise a hand to do anything. The modern idea that because people are past sixty-five they are no longer useful is unrealistic, cruel and unchristian.

Ponder these words of Longfellow.

"Ah, nothing is too late.
'Till the tired heart shall cease to palpitate.
Cato learned Greek at eighty;
Sophocles
Wrote his grand Oedipus, and Simonides
Bore off the prize of verse from his competers
When each had numbered more than fourscore years.

Chaucer, at Woodstock with the nightingales,
At sixty wrote the Canterbury tales,
Goethe at Weimar, tolling to the last,
Completed Faust when eighty years were past."

In my mid-sixties I am determined to be useful to the last day of my life on the basis of whatever strength I have. It will be our fault if we allow people who write books on parsley-kept or efficiency experts to relegate us to the junk heap. We are never going to the junk heap until our spirits collapse within us. Cheer up and brace up — there is reason for it to be so, although but a few years still to do it.

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

HEART FAILURE MY EYE!

In good earnest I can say that to the best of my knowledge and experience, the popular obsession of "heart failure" renders unaccountable or unexpected departure—seldom if ever happens. Granting my knowledge is no greater and my experience is probably less extensive than the knowledge and experience of the average practitioner, but nevertheless it seems worth mentioning that "heart failure" occurred just once in my eighteen years' experience, in a case of acute insufficiency of the mitral valve. Moreover I never reached a satisfactory conclusion about it in my own mind.

The "heart failure" obsession carries weight in the community mind because old time doctors entertained the idea that there was but one likely "fault for no apparent reason. TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON BEING INTERESTING

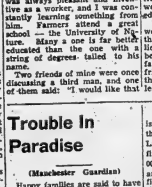
Interesting people are those who have a well stored mind, and who keep giving out of their storehouse. No uninteresting person sees nothing interesting in anything. We have to have something best and fine in ourselves in order to spy it quickly in others — and when we make this discovery in others there is always interest and joy in the heart of all concerned.

The human worker, or the uneducated, often is most interesting. I once had a worker named Jerry Sullivan in the country who only had a very short period of education, but he was one of the most interesting of men, for he had good common sense, was always pleasant and inventive as a worker, and I was constantly learning something from him.

Farmers attend a great school — the University of Life. Many a one is far better educated than the one with a degree who has failed to his name.

Two friends of mine were once discussing a third man, and one of them said: "I would like that chap on my payroll — just to get those flashes of sense and inspiration that he sees. He's short in lack."

That's interesting. The more we learn the more we like to lead others to learn. The interesting person is the one who creates the most interest in his students. I had a science teacher in college who was so interesting that he inspired us all — and at times we were interested.



Travellers are always interesting, to talk with whom is both a privilege and an opportunity. In a group of people the one most interesting is the one who remains silent! We learn from listening. People who are interests are never bores. They have something of interest to attract the ignorant as well as the well informed or highly educated.

The most interesting book, as well as human being, is that one that sparks the most in us that is dormant. That person is a benefactor — a travelling benefactor. The most interesting friend is that one who sets alight the most lamps in our inner gallery of treasured thoughts.

Trouble In Paradise

(Manchester Guardian)

Happy families are said to have no history. But although we hear little of Swiss politics it has been clear for some years that the balance of peoples and languages on which the country's stability has so far rested is gradually being upset.

The German-speaking majority is steadily gaining ground on the three minorities. The "Gazette de Lausanne" points out that while fifty years ago 691 out of every 1,-000 Swiss spoke German, 20 French and 67 Italian, the corresponding figures are now 722 202 and 59 (the tiny Romansch minority accounts for the remainder).

The change has come about not so much because of differences in birth rates as because the growing industrialization of the country has led many people to drift to the towns and often out of canton into another.

Right Way to Apply Powder

To apply powder properly, start at the cheekbone and don't forget to powder your shoulders, too.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEREVER she is, wherever she goes, a girl has two beauty props with her—the powder pad and the lipstick. Both get action several times a day. Even the rushed-to-death wife and mother, getting breakfast for her bathrobe, will have a calcimined nose and ruby-red lips She wouldn't look natural without them. Dad and the kids would think there was a stranger in the house.

Let us hope that the powder pad is scrupulously clean so dust won't be pressed in the pores. Let us hope that every member of the beauty class learns the right way to powder her complexion.

Powdering of Necklace

A girl is not to load the pad, when it on her nose. That is the usual method, but to it. She should pat her neck first, work upward. She should do her nose last, when there is not much powder on the pad. Then she should remove the surplus fluff-stuff with a camel's hair powder brush, leaving but a film. The skin will have an appearance of softness and delicacy.

The complexion should be conditioned for powdering so there will not be need of frequent touch-ups. The question of what is the correct powder base confuses many of the fairies along the pulchritude road. Is it the pancake variety, a cream or a lotion? What glorifies one complexion may not be a happy choice for the next one. The wise girl chooses the powder base most becoming to her skin.

Oily Skin

The oily type skin with enlarged pores usually has trouble retaining a dull finish. Make-up tends to blend with the natural oil secreted by the sebaceous glands. The thing to do is to use astringents and cold water freely to put a stop to the natural lubrication. Sometimes a vanishing cream solves the problem.

Use only the tiniest bit, friction it into the flesh, tap and pat until there is scarcely a sign of it.

For tender, dry skins an oily foundation is best, but even that requires a certain amount of light pressure and slapping motions. No matter what type of complexion you have, make-up should be removed with a cleansing cream before soap and water are used.

PASS LAND REFORM

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP)—The Chinese Nationalist cabinet today put the finishing touches on a land reform program which would limit private ownership to three hectares 7.41 acres. The government will pay land owners for any excess in land bonds and shares in public corporations.

Fashion Flashes

HIGH DIVIDENDS are paid by the handknitted dress, for it is at home in any gathering. A new and lovely handknit is a simple one-piece dress done on slim lines, with a curved neckline and back-zippered closing. It comes in white or pale pastel grounds and is knit with a small, multi-colored floral design spaced over the entire dress. Beautiful in pale pink, with a design in green, blue and white, or in pale beige with gold, apricot and rose.

NO BETTER BUY in the good, moderate price range than Persian lamb. Which explains why it is always in fashion and available in so many styles, including the new design, the short coat or long jacket. Youthful and pretty is a 30-inch black dyed Persian lamb jacket cut along boxy, chesterfield lines. It is double-breasted and has a notched collar and big gauntlet cuffs. Fine often a black suit. With a black skirt it becomes a smart suit.

NICE for theatre audience as well as for wearer is a head-hugging cap. Small in size but big in beauty is a cap of black mesh, with side crescents of tiny rosebuds that curve out toward the temple. Cap has narrow velvet ribbon edges. Over-all drapery of sheer mallne adds to the dainty design.

STILL OUT in front is the box handbag, in fabric as well as leather. Something new in the leather group is a series of calf-skin bags with tops or all-over tooling in gilt Florentine designs. Many such bags have gold leather or gold satin linings to pick up the gilt touch.

GOOD FILL-IN for a coat or suit neckline is an ascot of velvet studded with rhinestone studs. Beautiful in black or white, pale pink or bright red.

SMART GIRLS are doing smart jobs to get the popular decorative touches that distinguish both fabric and leather gloves. One girl purchased a pair of black suede shorties and crocheted a flared cuff of shiny gold yarn. Another girl has a touch of beading bring new interest to warm wool-knit gloves, as do sequin or bead accents smartly used on fabrics.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Round Shoulders

The old-fashioned corset was an aid to distinguished appearance.

More important than the usual beauty chores is the maintenance of good posture. Girls get excited over a new hairdo, take pains with cosmetics, but their fingernails, fuss about the dry goods they select, but pay little heed to the manner in which they carry themselves. Round shoulders is a common defect, not only among the middle-aged and the elderly —for whom there are excuses—but even among the young crowd.

Faulty posture has as much to do with round shoulders as imperfectly developed musculature. With a careless, indifferent carriage, the chest sinks in and the spine forms a bow; the abdomen, of course, is thrust forward. The entire picture is unnatural, lacks grace and leads to a poor degree of health. One of the greatest beauty assets is an erect, vibrant graceful figure.

Here is a test to be practiced before a full-length mirror, so you will see the lines of your silhouette. Stand straight against a wall. Flatten your shoulder blades. Thrust the chin up and forward. Draw in the abdominal muscles. The chest naturally fills out and assumes the proper position. Endeavor to maintain that position all the time. If you do not, your breathing will be more or less restricted, the chest will flatten, and the tissues that keep the breasts firm will lose tone.

Unless round shoulders are due to ill health, there is no excuse for them either than the burden of many birthdays. Even so, there are many old girls who carry themselves with splendor. While the steel-riveted, double-turreted corsets they wore in their younger days may have been a menace in some ways, they kept the spinal column extended and were an aid to distinguished appearance. When corsets were chucked into furnaces, along about 1918, and before the foundation garment became popular, slouchy figures appeared and have continued to prevail.

Corrective exercises will strengthen muscles that have been out of action, but the main thing is to keep tall— standing, sitting or walking.

Stand erect. Up on the toes, hands above the head and stretch as if you were tearing yourself apart at the waistline. Down on the toes, down with the arms, then up again. These movements make pliable the little cushions that separate the twenty-four little bones of your spinal column. Lift the chest and swing your arms in circles, one arm at a time.

TIP LEADS TO LOOT

NEW YORK (AP) — An anonymous telephone tip today led to between $10,000 and $15,000 in stolen jewelry hidden in a subway station locker. The gems were part of a $23,000 haul in a robbery Tuesday of a Broadway jewelry store. The tip was made to the Daily Mirror. The newspaper called police.

Euchre Party

The recent euchre party in charge of Mrs. Charles Ketchabaw and Mrs. Earle Sayers, of Bethel-Zion, was well-attended with ten tables in play. Prizes were as follows—ladies, Mrs. A. Hay; consolation, Mrs. H. Bosworth, Mrs. Sullivan; consolation, men, Bob Sullivan; consolation, Douglas Hedger; lone hand, Bob Sullivan.

Minerva Chapter Holds Yuletide Party

At the close of the regular meeting everyone gathered in the auditorium, where a nice program had been arranged by the conveners, Mrs. Russell Stark and Mrs. Tom Lewis, assisted by the members of their group. The children who took part in the program were those of the Minerva Chapter members.

There were two Grand Chapter members present for this occasion, Mr. Arthur Ashford, immediate Past Worthy Grand Patron of the Grand Chapter of Ontario; and Mrs. Anna Solomon, Grand Adah. Mrs. Ashford and Mr. Solomon, P.W.P., were also present.

The large Christmas tree was nicely decorated and the 60 or more children, enjoyed getting bags of candy from Santa Claus who came in shortly after the program had finished. The children were entertained during the regular meeting by Miss Joan Stark and Mr. Bob Marsh.

Women's Institute

MADOC W.I.

Mrs. Jamey Kincaid was hostess for the Madoc W.I., December meeting, which opened in the usual manner with Mrs. D. Kerr-ohan, presiding. The Roll Call was answered by an exchange of Christmas gifts and by recalling the best Christmas ever had. This showed a good attendance of members and visitors and many interesting and amusing reminiscences were heard.

There were no communications or accounts. Mrs. Albert Empey gave some interesting current events. Shut-ins will be remembered at Christmas by gifts or candy to be sent by Mrs. W. Parks, convener.

Candy Game

The program was in charge of Mrs. K. Caskey. Her opening remarks included a poem, "The Spirit of Christmas". She then conducted a candy game with Mrs. Nathan Bronson as winner. A ladies' quartet, Mrs. K. T. Nicol, Mrs. Carl McCoy, Jr., Mrs. Stewart Elliott, and Mrs. Irene Crawford, sang two numbers, "Silver Bells", and "Christmas Candles", which were well received.

Mrs. Caskey, assisted by Mrs. G. C. Moon, Mrs. K. T. Nayler, Mrs. H. B. Beatty, Mrs. K. T Nicol, and Mrs. A. D. McGowan, conducted a "Candlelighting Service of Friendship", at the conclusion of which Mrs. Martha Bronson was presented with a Life Membership certificate and pin by Mrs. Charles Whytock, also a Life Member. Mrs. J. W. Hulin thanked the Institute on behalf of her mother.

The members were then divided in groups of four and took part in a carol-singing contest. Mrs. Caskey conducted a Christmas game and concluded the fine program with the poems, "Keeping Christmas", "They After Christmas", and "A Way to a Happier New Year".

Institute appreciation was extended by Mrs. S. Beatty to the hostess and to all those who helped to make the afternoon such a pleasant one.

Mrs. Kincaid, assisted by Mrs. W. Parks, Mrs. Hulin, Miss Vanklieck, and Mrs. Charles Whytock served refreshments.

Contact Club Holds Enjoyable Christmas Party

On Monday evening, the Contact Club of Christ Church held an enjoyable husband-wife Christmas party in the parish hall. A glowing Christmas tree, surrounded with gifts for the husbands, and bright decorations on the walls lent the festive spirit of Christmas to the occasion.

Evelyn Warham, at the piano, gave generously of her every popular playing for the dancing, and for an amusing game of musical chairs which was won by Carol Smith. Prizes for a variety of special dance numbers were also given to Grace and Dick Young, Thelma and Ted Saunders, Florence Lennox and Ted Saunders, Canon J. B. Creegan and Daisy Rosevear.

Special welcomed guests for the evening were Canon J. B. Creegan and Rev. Everett Smith.

A soothing period of song and carol singing by the soft light of the Christmas tree, with Jack Fletcher as leader, preceded the advent of Santa Claus, Daisy Rosevear, playing the role, distributed the gifts with much merriment and gaiety.

New Executive

During the supper hour, with everyone seated in a circle, the girls served refreshments, and the executive and conveners for the new year were introduced as follows: executive —president, Florence Lennox; vice-president, Catherine Boulter; treasurer, Mary Fletcher; secretary, Hilda Smith; social convener, Joan Taylor; yearly representative and past president, Jeanne Jackson.

Conveners — Sunshine, Daisy Rosevear; telephone, Frances Rogers; press, Aileen Brunton; buyer, Grace Young; nursery, Dorothy Rutter; sewing machine, Mary Bunnett.

Hilda Smith expressed to Jeanne Jackson the warm gratitude and praise of the Contact Club for her ever constant and ever successful efforts on behalf of the club during her two years as president.

Canon J. B. Creegan also thanked the Contact Club for their excellent work and for their friendly approach to the young couples of the congregation.

Willis Jackson voiced the enjoyment and appreciation of the husbands for the wonderful Christmas party put on by them, while Dorothy Halbert gave special thanks to the program convening committee, Mary Fletcher, Evelyn Warham, Betty Fraser, Betty Ling, Hilda Smith, and Marion Hewson, and to Florence Lennox, convener of refreshments assisted with the

The regular meeting of the Albert College Women's Guild was held in the ladies' parlor of Bridge Street United Church on Friday, with Mrs. A. May, the president, in charge.

The devotional period was in charge of Miss Helen Sulman, who read the Christmas story as told in St. Luke, Chapter II. She then read an article from the "Readers' Digest" for December, entitled "What Does Christmas Mean to You?"

In closing she quoted Tiny Tim's words from Dickens' Christmas Carol, "God bless us every one".

Mrs. Ralph Morden gave a reading entitled "The Church of the Lighted Candles". This reading told the story of a little chapel in a far away European village. The chapel had been built in the sixteenth century by the duke who ruled over the village, in commemoration of his daughters who had married and left home.

To each of the inhabitants of the village, the duke gave a bronze lamp, and when they went to the chapel they carried their lamps with lighted candles in them. When all the congregation had assembled the church glowed with light. No one wished to be absent, as his seat would have been dark. The lamps were handed down from generation to generation and were preserved with the greatest of care.

Mrs. May thanked Mrs. Morden for her beautiful reading.

Mrs. C. McDonald, Miss L. McDougall and Miss N. Arkles, accompanied by Mr. William Connor, sang, "Winter Wonderland", which was much enjoyed.

After the meeting closed, tea was served.

Negro Actress Likely Choice For Top Award

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Academy Awards race is still months away, but it looks now as if a Negro—at is strong contention for the top actress award.

Ethel Waters, recreating the role she made famous on the stage in "Member of the Wedding", is the possibility.

As producers rush to get their top product on local screens to make the 1952 deadline, the race among the women at the moment is Broadway 3 to 1 over Hollywood.

Shirley Booth in "Come Back, Little Sheba," Julie Harris in "Member of the Wedding" and Joan Crawford in "Sudden Fear," plus Miss Waters, are the most talked-of distaff performances. Folks in the industry will nominate five for final voting.

Accusations of Role

For Miss Booth and Miss Harris, their first movies are recreations of roles that gained them laurels on Broadway. Both are excellent, but there is a growing feeling among academy voters that such tailor-made roles work an unfair advantage on the Hollywood talent.

That feeling erupted last year when the voters chose Humphrey Bogart over Marlon Brando for the top male actor award.

Should the anti-Broadway feeling persist, Miss Crawford stands an excellent chance to win her second Academy Award. Her triumph in

Corporation Does Not Qualify To Hold Queen's Arm at Ceremony

LONDON (AP) — Supporting the queen's left arm while she holds the royal sceptre is a service which simply cannot be performed by a corporation, the Coronation court of claims held today.

If such a service is to be performed it is the ancient privilege of the Duke of Newcastle, who now lives in Southern Rhodesia, the court added.

The London and Fort Geforge Land Company thought it had a case for presenting the Queen with a glove for her right hand, and for supporting the arm which carries the sceptre.

Both services have long been the privileges at coronations of the Dukes of Newcastle. The company claims was based on the fact the present Duke has left the country, but that most of his properties have been merged with the holdings of the corporation. It argued that his ceremonial privilege had been merged, too.

The court held the royal arm must be supported by a living duke and that a stock company, no matter how much it owns it, simply does not qualify.

Women's Activities

BETHANY W.M.S.—W.A.

The Christmas meeting of the Bethany W.M.S. and W.A. was an afternoon meeting and held at the church, with 21 present.

The president Mrs. John Ritz, opened the meeting with a hymn, a Christmas reading and a prayer.

Mrs. Fred Hanney and Mrs. Douglas Martin were in charge of the interesting program, choosing the "Nativity Scene" and "Lighted Candles" as their respective items.

Mrs. Hanney read several passages of the Christmas story from the Bible A reading, "Christmas and the Common Man," was given by Mrs. Lenny Metz. Mrs. Ray Walker gave a reading, "How Far to Bethlehem." Another reading by Mrs. Orva Beer was also enjoyed.

Mrs. Fred Clarke gave some thoughts on "Christian Stewardship" as well as a reading. Mrs. Douglas Martin gave a reading, "The Inn at Bethlehem." A poem was also read by Mrs. Douglas Dunmore, followed by "The Innkeeper Makes Excuses" by Mrs. John Ritz.

Mrs. Ritz took charge of the business period. Mrs. Clare Sills is to be in charge of the next program. Mrs. Russell Ritz invited the ladies to her home for the January meeting. In the absence of the W.A. president, the vice-president, Mrs. Grant Cole, conducted the W. A. business period.

The fourth line ladies served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A bride of a year wants to call it a day

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a bride of a year, and am very unhappy, as my husband and I have nothing in common. We have met a man who can give me the love and affection I so crave.

Should I go on bearing the mental strain of not having my husband's complete love, or should I seek my freedom?—S. A. T.

Dear S.A.T.: How did it happen that you didn't find out before you were married that you and this man had nothing in common? What was it that attracted you to him, if your minds and hearts had no common meeting ground? Was it a very great and impulsive marriage that you made without really knowing anything about the man, or was there something substantial on which your love was based—which now, for some reason, has become obscured?

In either case, it seems to me that if you are a young woman of character, or any kind of good sport, you would make it your business to see what you can do to save your marriage by giving it a well-considered try, instead of throwing the whole thing into the discard so soon. Do you want people to think that you are just an immature and superficial girl who flashes in and out of marriage, and then in again, because she hasn't the judgment, in the first place, to choose the right husband, or the character, in the second place, to stick by a bargain and do her best to turn it into an asset instead of a liability?

I suggest that you make some inquiries, in the large city where you live, about where you can find a qualified marriage counselor, with whom you can discuss all the circumstances of your marriage—of which you have told me actually nothing—and get some practical advice on how to turn what looks like a failure on your part into a success. Then go home and put the advice into operation for a reasonable length of time before deciding to cast off one man and take on another just so hopelessly as you probably fell for the first.

A situation that couldn't be sillier

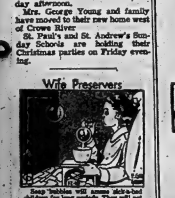
Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 16, and two years ago I was infatuated with a teacher 10 years my senior and unmarried. He found out about this from a mutual friend, and said he would not speak to me in hopes I would stop caring. When I heard this, I decided I would do the same. However, one day later that year when I happened to see him he did greet me, but I didn't speak to him, and since then neither of us has spoken to the other.

I suppose it is foolish of me to think this, but whenever we see each other and just look at each other without speaking, I could almost swear from the way he looks at me that he feels about me as I feel about him. Neither of us, though, will break the silence. Should I speak first, or leave things as they are? It seems so silly for us not even to speak to each other.—Cindy.

Dear Cindy: I think it is not only silly but childish on both your parts, and I think the next time you meet this man you should greet him politely, in a casual way, and let it go at that. I think it is equally silly to let yourself get the idea that he has any special feeling for you, because it is not likely at all, except that he may be a bit flattered to know of your "hero-worship" for him.

Girls in their teens practically always, at some time or other, develop an infatuation for some older man with whom they come in contact. It is a perfectly normal thing and just a passing phase of adolescence.



My suggestion would be that you let this young man see that you are growing out of adolescence and into maturity by treating him in a normal, friendly way, instead of either idealizing him or refusing to speak to him.

A Joyous Christmas Dinner at Home

By Mary Moore

Is the silverware gleaming? Is your biggest and best tablecloth pristine clean and ironed? Did you remember to buy new candles?

Have you decided what your table centre will be? (Ours is going to be glazed grapes and red and green Christmas tree balls and silvered pine cones.)

If you are tired and in need of an understanding ear, sit down with this paper and read over the menu for Christmas dinner. During this month I have tried to anticipate your wants and likes and dislikes and the food prejudices that some of your crowd may have. For that reason I have given some alternates in the menu.

You will remember the chestnut stuffing recipe I gave you last week. I have included potatoes on this menu because I love them so with gravy. I have included up lightly to the turkey. (I waited to include oyster. Blame not it is a meal in itself and what we want room for is turkey.)

CHRISTMAS DINNER IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD 1952

Fruit Cocktail, Mint-flavored, but unsweetened
Consomme with Toasted Shredded Almonds
Roast Turkey (see below)
Chestnut Stuffing Giblet Gravy
Cranberry Orange Relish
Sliced Parsley Potatoes
Buttered Fresh or Frozen Peas
Onions au Gratin
Frosted Green Salad with Pomegranate Seed Garnish
Celery Curls Pecans
Plum Pudding Foamy Sauce (last week)
Milk for Children Coffee

COMMENTS

Those who do not know how to dress a turkey may turn to butcher do it. But it still requires singeing, that is the hairs must be singed off over an open flame. Wash skin well with scrubbing brush and baking soda. Wash inside well, dry inside and out, and sprinkle inside with salt. Fill with Chestnut Stuffing, recipe for which I gave you last week, but do not pack too tightly. The bird should just have a plump appearance. Close openings by sewing or skewering. Truss bird into a snug shape.

TIME TABLE FOR ROASTING TURKEY

Brush skin lightly with unsalted fat such as lard, cover with double cheesecloth or moistened parchment paper, dipped in melted fat. Remove cloth or paper during last half hour of roasting to brown bird.

Dressed Oven Tem-	Ap. Roast-
Weight perature	ing Hours
6½ to 8 lb. 300° F.	3½ to 4
8 to 11 lb. 300° F.	4 to 5
11 to 14½ 300° F.	5 to 6
14½ to 17½ 300° F.	6 to 7½

If larger turkeys are roasted to test for doneness—run metal skewer into thick part of thigh. When done meat is tender and juice does not show red tinge. Do not over roast—you do not want the thighs to fall away.

CRANBERRY ORANGE RELISH

Put through coarse knife of grinder all together 1 lb. washed and dried cranberries and 1 large seedless orange, rind included. Stir in 2 cups sugar. Let this ripen in refrigerator, covered for a day or two before Christmas. This relish is very popular.

ONIONS AU GRATIN

Two lbs small onions, 2 cups medium white sauce (4 tablespoons each butter and flour blended together; stir in 2 cups hot milk until thick; add salt and pepper to taste.) 1 cup buttered breadcrumbs, 1 cup grated old cheddar cheese, paprika. Peel and cook small onions in salted water until nearly tender. Drain and place half of them in large casserole. Cover with half white sauce, buttered crumbs, cheese and paprika. Repeat. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until sauce bubbles and crumbs are brown.

For the salad use plenty of best lettuce, water (thin slices cucumber, tomato, celery, plenty of parsley and watercress). French Dressing. Sprinkle with about 1-4 cup of those red little pomegranate jolos (cute).

Merry Eating and Merry Christmas from Mary Moore. God keep you and bless you.

Best-Dressed Women Headed By Duchess

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Dress Institute's list of best dressed women of the world numbers 15—not the usual 10 — to include two new political figures:

The Institute said Tuesday Mrs. Eisenhower and Mrs. Hobby were "late starters", but came up so strongly in the voting that they tied for 11th, place.

The first 10:

The Duchess of Windsor; Mrs. William Paley, of New York; Princess Margaret; Kent; Mrs. Byron Foy, of New York; Miss Louis Arpodo of Paris and New York; Marlene Dietrich; Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Jr.,; Mrs. Winston Guest, the former Lucy D. Cochrane of Boston; Countess Rodolfo Crespi, of Rome, the former Consuelo O'Connor; and Mme. Henri Bonnet, wife of the French ambassador to the U.S.

How to address a Christmas card to a clergyman, a priest

To a Protestant clergyman without a scholastic degree:

The Reverend John Peter Allen

The Reverend Dr. Thomas Phelps (Or: The Reverend Thomas Phelps, D.D.)

To a clergyman and wife

The Reverend (or The Rev. Dr.) and Mrs. John Davis

To a Roman Catholic priest:

The Reverend Joseph Kenny (This is the correct form of address also for Greek Orthodox priests and Anglican priests who are self-supporting.)

The initials of the order may be added:

The Reverend Joseph Kenny, S.J.

To a Monsignor:

The Right Reverend Monsignor Paul E. Breslin, S.J.

Most important note: The word The should always be capitalized before the word Reverend used with the name of a clergyman or priest.

The Reverend The Very Reverend Dr.—The Right Reverend—The Very Reverend.

Why? The word "Reverend" is not a title—like "Mr." or "Dr." It is an adjective, an adjective of courtesy used in addressing those in the spiritual profession. So, when you address the envelope, never write "Reverend John Smith" always The Reverend John Smith.

Has applied to use first husband's name after her divorce

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Before I married my present husband, I was a widow. Now I have been receiving my present husband and am asking for permission to take back my former husband's name. Would I be correct for me to call myself "Mrs. Helen S. Johnson" or "Mrs. Arthur D. Johnson"?—H.

When you take back your first husband's name, your formal name will be Mrs. Arthur Dale Johnson (or Mrs. Arthur D. Johnson)— for example, correct to use on the first page of your informals (now carrying your present formal name).

Your informal name (correct for your signature) will be: Helen Smith Johnson (or Helen S. Johnson). Don't use the form "Mrs. Helen S. Johnson" if you can avoid it. Socially, the use of the first name after "Mrs." is taboo—and should be.

It also takes time to send Christmas Cards —it's proper to send them even to acquaintances

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I met a number on my vacation I met a very nice fellow who, it so happened, lived in my aunt's home city. We had several dates —movies, dancing, and so forth. Although he mentioned correspondence, he has not written me, nor have I written him. What would you think about my sending him a Christmas card—or wouldn't you approve? —Noreen R.

Indeed I would approve, heartily! That, one of the many nice things about Christmas cards—they are properly (and with a casual air) be sent to those whose paths have crossed ours pleasantly even though briefly. The fact that he hasn't written you and that you haven't written him isn't important—not in these busy and casual days. But what is important is that you choose cards that are suitable for these special acquaintanceships. Nothing too, too personal. Choose a card on the conservative side, traditionally Christmas, write "Christmas greetings" inside, sign your name —and certainly this friendly gesture couldn't be criticized!

Season's greetings . . . and holiday courtesy

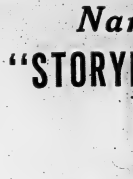
Make this your special rule-of-courtesy, of course this is particularly important when the number of guests is a consideration. . . . a dinner or luncheon, for example, or a ticket-for-one game-party, or a buffet party.

Don't make the excuse to yourself that you're too busy to answer a kind invitation. . . your hostess isn't too busy to give a holiday party and thoughtfully to invite you.



Write messages on your Christmas cards . . . be merry, like merrier!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it really proper to add a note or message to the printed message on informal Christmas cards?—Florence M.

Yes . . . Indeed Yes! Those "wide, open spaces" on your Christmas cards should be used for your message to you. . . . news of you and your family, messages of good wishes, or any of the other thousand-and-one messages that keep a friendship "in repair" and brightly flourishing. Just a few simple words of friendly message written on your greeting cards can make your cards even more gloriously welcome as a golden memory of friendship.

A Child's Life of Jesus

"One day Jesus taught everybody how to talk to our Father in Heaven. He gave us a prayer to say."

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the last books written by the late Father Cursier, noted author of such volumes as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Cursier's book has been specially finished for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Neill O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER VII

One day Jesus taught everybody how to talk to our Father in Heaven. He gave us a prayer to say:

"Our Father....."

God is not just my father, or just your father. He is ours—the Father of everybody.

"Our Father Who art in Heaven ....."

Heaven is our home, where our Father is and we can get there only by loving Him.

"Our Father Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name...."

God's name is holy and we should say it lovingly.

When we all love Him, His kingdom will be everywhere. Then there will be nobody doing anything wrong, but only goodness and spiritual joy.

"Our Father, Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven....."

We all should do what God wants us to do here in this world just as the saints and angels do in Heaven.

"Our Father, Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread ..."

We ask our Father for whatever we need. Just as you ask dad, who is your earthly father. Jesus told us that God is a good Father and will never forget us.

"Our Father, Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. ....."

What does that big word "trespass" mean? It means a wrong done to someone. Like taking candy from someone else. That is "trespass." We want God to forgive us. But only if we forgive other persons, will God forgive us.

"Our Father, Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation ."

And that means: "Oh, please, dear Father in Heaven, watch and guide me. When I try to be good, let me do it Your way and not just my way."

"Our Father, Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation , but deliver us from evil ..."

And that means: When we have pain or trouble, God can take it all away. Because with God all things are possible. And that is the prayer that Jesus taught.

OursFather, Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever. Amen.

Tomorrow: Jesus and the loaves and the fishes.

Strange Tale of Modern Piracy On Spanish Main Is Recounted With Cigaret Fortune as Booty

TANGIER, Morocco (AP) — An international procession of unshaven sailors, Dutch skippers and hard-bitten adventurers crowded a court today to continue the recital of a strange tale of modern piracy on the high seas.

This time, however, machine-guns were the weapons instead of cutlasses. Cigarets were the booty, not gold from the Spanish Main.

Two Americans living in Morocco Elliott Burt Forrest and Sidney Paley, a Tangier nylon manufacturer, are alleged to have played key roles in the hijacking of $100,000 worth of smokes from the 300-ton Dutch motorship Combinatie on Oct. 4.

Near Testimony

Testimony is being heard by consular Judge Milton J. Helmick and two civilian assessors.

Paley is charged with aiding in drawing up the plans for the attack on the Combinatie and of aiding and abetting in the piracy. He is not charged with participating in the actual attack.

Testimony Wednesday named Forrest, a nightclub operator and cigaret trader, as the leader of the attack. He is a fugitive, last reported in Corsica, and no formal charges have been lodged against him.

Edward J. Engelsman, Dutchentire 12 days.

captain of the pirate vessel, the 80-ton Xame, came to testify from a Tangiers jail, where he is awaiting trial before an international court for complicity in the piracy.

Captain's Story

Forrest and Paley chartered the Xame from her owner, accountant Rue Wright, for $8,000 purportedly for a salvage job off Malta. Forrest brought along his own crew to help Engelsman. After they sailed, the crew produced three or four machine-guns and some pistols.

Forrest ordered the Xame to shadow the Combinatie. At 1 a.m. Oct. 4 the Xame rammed the larger ship and the attackers leaped aboard, "all except Forrest, he stayed with me on the bridge."

The attack occurred 18 miles off the east coast of Spain. The pirates sailed both ships to Corsica and unloaded the cigarets—2,700 cases —then sailed beyond land and released the Combinatie Oct. 15.

The Combinatie's Dutch captain, Johannes van Delft, 50, testified he was handcuffed and held in the blacked-out hold of his ship the

Revision of Companies' Act Completed After Nine Months

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario legislature's select committee set up to revise the 40-year-old Companies' Act has completed its task after nine months of work.

Chairman Kelso Roberts, Progressive Conservative member for Thornhill-David, is to announce today that the 313-section bill received unanimous support of the committee which represented all parties in the house.

One major feature of the proposed bill is that companies will have to make a fuller disclosure of their financial position and operations in annual reports to shareholders. Shareholders of public companies will be entitled to these statements at least 10 days before the annual meetings and shareholders of private companies on request.

The bill also contains provisions for investigations and audits by the courts on application of shareholders. The courts will have power to order any director, officer or employee of a corporation who refuses or neglects to comply with the act to do so. Shareholders will also have the right to obtain information concerning transactions of directors in the shares of the company at the annual meeting.

Other Features

Other features of the proposed bill:

1. Cumulative voting will be permitted for the first time in Canada. By a complicated system cumulative voting would enable minority shareholders to elect one or more nominees on the board of directors.

2. Methods of reserving a name for a limited time before incorporation and protecting the names of unincorporated companies are provided. A company must produce clear evidence of its real entity when using a name other than its corporate name for any of its undertakings.

3. Procedure for organization and incorporation is simplified.

4. The bill provides a deterrent to indiscriminate voting of shares now owned or controlled by the apparent holder without completing the question of ownership on the records of the corporation.

5. Protection is afforded the dissenting minority shareholder in a private company along the line of British legislation when such shareholder opposes a sale of assets or conversion of the company into a public company. The new law requires the purchase of the shareholder's interest in such cases.

6. It will no longer be necessary for mining companies to discount by-laws and file them with the provincial secretary. The directors will be empowered to fix rates of discount from time to time. Mining companies will have the general powers of corporation to have preference shares.

Suggests Postponement

The Ontario Chamber of Commerce suggested postponement of legislative action on the bill until recommendations are forthcoming from the Dominion-provincial committee on uniform company law.

The chamber criticizes sections of the proposed bill that deal with cumulative voting for company directors and the inclusion of a law enabling a shareholder dissatisfied with the conduct of a company's affairs to apply to the courts.

CAUGHT WITH MARIJUANA

NEW YORK (AP) — An unemployed tailor was arrested Wednesday night and accused of possessing $120,000 worth of marijuana. Police said they picked up Homer Jackson, 38-year-old Negro, as he walked down a Brooklyn street carrying a canvas bag containing 20 pounds of the weed. They said they found 70 more pounds at his home.

JAP STRIKE ENDS

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's bone-chilled, candle-burning millions picked up today when the national electric strike was settled only 24 hours after the country's coal miners went back to work. For more than two months the main striker cut down a heat and light to a minimum. Electric workers received a government compromise giving the workers an average step-up in pay from the old ¥46.50 to ¥55.50 a month.

St. Paul's United Church Holds Special Christmas Services

Rawdon — Sunday was a red-letter day in the history of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, with large congregations in attendance at both services.

The church has been newly decorated in a color scheme of mushroom rose with gold trim, and the organ has been refinished in three blended shades to match the walls.

Twin Christmas trees, decorated with silver and red tinsel, and ropes added Christmas touch to the services. St. Paul's W.A. provided the two pedestal baskets with white chrysanthemums. A memorial basket was placed in memory of Mr. William Thomas Wilkins, who died a short time ago in Uxbridge, by his widow who is spending some time in Stirling at the home of her son.

The new guest register was opened Sunday morning and the first names entered were: Rev. C. D. McLellan, Napanee, and Mrs. McLellan. The former gave the morning message and were dinner guests at St. Paul's parsonage. The old register has been in use three years and is filled to capacity, even to the back cover.

The 1953 envelopes were issued to congregation members during the two services. A great many visitors were in attendance from nearby cities and towns. The largest number to take Holy Communion was recorded at this service.

Baptismal - Rites

The sacrament of baptism was administered to six children, Catherine Jean Cornett, born May 28th, 1952; Peter Alan Urman, born January 6th, 1952; Patricia Ann Patterson, born June 10th, 1953; Trudy Margaret Bush, born September 16th, 1952; John Ellsworth Francis, born August 27th, 1951 at Alliston and his sister, Gwen Elizabeth Francis, born November 7th, 1952 at Renfrew. These last two are children of John A. Francis, and his wife, the former Shirley Hanley, who have recently taken up residence in Stirling.

Mrs. A. E. Baker, A.R.C.T., presided at the console of the organ and rendered Handel's "O King of Kings, Alleluiah", as a prelude; "Christ Lay in Todesbanden" as offertory interlude and Bach's "On My Shepherd I Rely" as a postlude.

The Royal junior choir sang "A Little Child, The Saviour Came" and the senior choir contributed "Behold, If God So Loved Us" by Barnby.

Mrs. Wm. Wilkins rendered a soprano solo "Open the Gates of the Temple."

The pastor, Rev. A. E. Baker, gave the call to worship based on "peace," and conducted the various parts of the service.

Previous to the evening service Mr. R. A. Patterson led in the singing of Christmas carols from song sheets which he thoughtfully supplied for the special sing-songs during December.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker was Rev. G. Pettesham, Trenton, chairman of Belleville presbytery.

St. Paul's senior choir interpreted "The First Christmas" a delightful cantata by Ira Bishop Wilson. The soloists were Mrs. Walter Warern, Mrs. William Wilkins, Miss Verna Brown and Miss Marlene Carlile; contraltos, Mrs. Harry Brown, Miss Janet Reynolds; tenors, Douglas Pyear, Harry Brown, Jack Bush; baritones, William Aylsworth, Grant Richardson. Other choir members are Mrs. Perry Bronson, Mrs. R. Leury, Mrs. Cecil Macklin, Mrs. Ed. Warren, Mrs. Russell Stapley, Mrs. Ivs Thain and Mrs. R. A. Vandervoort; Misses R. Donnan, N. Fleming, J. Heasman, L. Jeffrey, M. E. Ketchenson, D. Carlisle, J. A. Good, E. Lancaster and H. Stapley.

The other male voices are, Rev. W. S. Irwin, Robert Patterson, Harold Hagerman, Edward Reynolds, Keith Hansen, Charles Reynolds, Stephen Rogers, Robert Bird and Thomas Wells.

Mrs. A. E. Baker chose Handel's "The Faithful Shepherd" as prelude, "The First Noel", written by Balogh as offertory interlude and "A Medley of European Carols" as postlude.

Three-Part Cantata

The cantata was presented in three parts and Mr. W. D. Grant, West Huntingdon, gave a violin accompaniment to Miss Harry Brown in a "Lullaby" number.

Part I, "The Prophecy", centred around "The People that Walked in Darkness", and solo "Bethlehem."

Part II, "The Fulfillment" centred around "My Soul Doth Magnify" and "It Came to Pass."

Part III, "The Star and the Song," gave a presentation of "The Shepherd's Vision," "The Angel's Song", "The Star and the Song," "No Room in the Inn," "O Babe in Bethlehem Manger," "A Christmas Lullaby."

Part IV, "The World Wide Christmas," closed with "The Heart of God" and a final chorus "Blessed Be the Lord."

Mr. Wellington Smith, Fort Francis, Ont., Grand Worthy Patron of the Eastern Star who was visiting in this district, read the Christmas Bible lesson.

This unique service opened with "Joy to the World" and closed with "Angels From the Realms of Glory."

Following the service, members of St. Paul's W.A. entertained the choir and distinguished guests to a social-half hour in the church parlors where refreshments were served.

Presentations

Two presentations were made on behalf of St. Paul's senior choir.

A book, "The Life of King George," to Mr. R. A. Patterson, president of the choir for his valuable contribution to the success of this organization. Mr. Patterson has been a member of St. Paul's choir 48 years.

A hand-painted porcelain electric table lamp was presented to Mrs. A. E. Baker A.R.C.T., organist, and choir leader, for her untiring zeal and devotion to the cause of good music.

Both recipients expressed grateful thanks.

Two services will be held on Christmas Sunday. The morning

New Bullet-Proofing Developed

A Denver, Col., policeman studies a new, light, bullet-proof material developed to replace heavy metal in bank and military cars. The material, a plastic, weighs one-quarter as much as steel and will stop a bullet from a rifle or revolver at 35 yards. U.S. army ordnance is studying the material for military use. — Central Press Canadian.

DESERONTO
Girl Guides Elect Officers

DESERONTO, — The annual meeting of the local association of Girl Guides was held at the home of the present, Mrs. D. F. Weber, with nine members present.

Reports of the various committees were given by the conveners. Captain Armstrong of the Deseronto Girl Guides, gave a brief report on the activities of the company for the past year.

Mrs. G. Rickwood, Divisional Commissioner, presided for the election of officers. The following were elected for 1953:

President, Mrs. D. F. Weber; vice-president, Mrs. H. Transue; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. J. White; social convener, Mrs. E. Dowling; camp convener, Mrs. W. Rendall; Badge secretary, Mrs. K. F. Blachford.

Tentative plans were discussed for a mother and daughter, banquet in February.

Miss Marion Crabbe, of the Deseronto Girl Guides, gave an interesting account of her trip to the Girl Guide Camp at Otawa, this past summer.

UN Urges France To Negotiate Tunisian Issue

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) —The UN general assembly moved overwhelmingly Wednesday night to urge France and Tunisia to negotiate a settlement of their differences on Tunisian demands for self-rule.

The full 60 - nation assembly, meeting in special - night session, informally adopted by a vote of 45-5, with eight abstentions, a mildly worded 14-nation resolution recalling for French-Tunisian negotiations. Canada voted for the resolution.

This resolution was adopted previously by the assembly's political committee instead of one from 13 Arab and Asian nations who had proposed a UN commission to supervise the dealings.

The Arab-Asian bloc voted for the 14-nation Latin American resolution after its own plan was rejected.

Bloc Disappointed

But spokesmen for the group expressed disappointment that the UN did not take a stronger stand in demanding that France lift martial law in Tunisia and accept UN good offices.

The Soviet bloc abstained with its five votes on the ground that the resolution was too weak and did not assure independence for the Tunisians.

France boycotted the Tunisian debate on the ground that the UN is not competent to intervene in what she claims is a pure domestic issue.

Britain, Australia and Belgium supported France in this stand, claiming such interference threatened the very foundations of the UN.

The political committee earlier Wednesday passed a similarly mild resolution, over U.S. opposition, calling on France to open urgent talks with her other North African protectorate, Morocco, on self-government.

City Solicitor To Recommend City's Appeal

HAMILTON (CP) — A. J. Polson, Q. C., city solicitor, said today he would recommend that the city appeal to the county judge a court of revision judgment given Wednesday, directing the city to rebate $13,000 in business tax to the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, Ltd., because its plant was closed for 118 days this year due to a strike.

Mr. Polson said he believed such a judgment would set a principle, which he thought was wrong, of "shifting" taxpayers in general with more taxes because of an industrial deficit in Hamilton.

Evidence given the court Wednesday was that no one had left the plant from June 9 to Sept. 23 because of the strike.

Alfred Champaigne, chairman, said there had been no similar case in his 14 years' experience on courts of revision.

Court based its rebate allowance particularly on the case of Algoma Steel Company in Sault Ste. Marie, cited by John Marshall, solicitor for Firestone, before the Ontario Court of Appeal had allowed a rebate.

A factor in the court's ruling also was that the company has been prepared to accept the findings of a conciliation board, but the union took a strike vote and rejected it, so the shutdown was not the responsibility of the company.

RETIRED EDITOR DIES

MIDLAND, Ont. (CP)—J. Herbert Cranston, 72, retired editor and publisher of the weekly Midland Free Press Herald, died today after a month's illness. He had spent 56 years in the newspaper field and was the author of several books.

Mr. Cranston retired July 1, 1947, as editor and publisher of the Free Press Herald, handing over his duties to his son, W. H. Cranston. However, he continued to write a regular column for the paper's editorial page.

He published two books on the history of the Midland area. One is used as a history textbook in public and high schools in the Georgian Bay region.

Surviving are his widow, the former Eva Wilkins; two sons, William of Midland and Thomas of Markham. There also are four brothers, Don and Fred of Toronto, and Harry and Arnold of Alameda, Cal.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at Calvary Baptist Church, Midland.

MINESWEEPER AGROUND

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The Swedish navy minesweeper Orskar was reported leaking badly early today after running aground off the southeast coast of Sweden and the plight of her 39 crewmen was described as "very critical." Heavy seas prevented the crew from taking to lifeboats and the engine room of the 230-ton vessel was reported under water.

British Papers Demand Fuller Explanation Over Shooting Riotous Prisoners

LONDON (AP) — Three leading British newspapers express misgivings today over the shooting of riotous Communist prisoners in Korea and demand a fuller explanation.

The Liberal Manchester Guardian and the Conservative London Daily Mail warn that the shootings may weaken the whole UN position on the prisoner-of-war issue.

The pro-Labor London Daily Herald calls the latest shooting episode at Pongam, where 82 Red prisoners were killed and 120 were wounded "disturbing" and demands "let's have the facts."

"It does the United Nations no good to have to admit that some of the prisoners in its hands are still out of control," the Guardian says in an editorial.

Everything Being Done

The Guardian concedes that it is "extremely difficult to keep order in a crowd of fanatical Communist" but it asks "has everything possible been done in this and other camps to make them secure and to ensure that the prisoners are not incited to revolt by surreptitious messages from North Korea as they have been in the past?"

"After so many outbreaks," it adds, "this question still needs to be answered."

"The question to be asked is not why the Americans fired but why 3,600 prisoners were allowed to concentrate in such a fashion."

The Mail asks whether all the experience at Koje has gone for nothing. "The Americans have a responsibility not only to themselves but to the whole Free world in this matter for the Korean war is being continued over this very question of the prisoners of war.

"The United Nations refuse to release captives who would almost certainly be shot when they got home. But the effect of this humanitarian policy will be weakened by continued shooting of prisoners, even in self-defence."

The Daily Herald refers to a statement in the House of Commons Wednesday that the British government has been pressing the U. S. government for full reports on earlier Korean prison incidents but the reports have not yet been received.

"It is not the way to establish confidence between allies who have a joint responsibility in Korea under the UN," the Herald says. "We trust that urgent efforts will be made to restore that confidence by supplying the detailed information to which the public is entitled.

$1½ Billion in Govt. Funds To Bolster Health Insurance Service in U.S. Recommended

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman's commission on the health needs of the United States came up today with a middle - ground proposal for solving one of the hottest issues in the U.S. — how to pay the doctor's bill.

The commission proposed a $1,200,000,000 annual outlay of federal and state funds to bolster voluntary insurance plans covering the costs of hospital and medical care for all persons lacking full ability to pay.

It differs both from a plan unsuccessfully espoused by Truman and a rival proposal of the American Medical Association.

Truman has vainly plugged for a federal system of pre-paid sickness insurance for 125,000,000 wage-earners, to be financed by a compulsory tax on employees and employers.

The AMA has termed Truman's proposal "socialized medicine," and has campaigned for the extension of "voluntary" insurance plans — that is, plans which a person can purchase if he wishes. The AMA, however, has never taken a stand as to whether it favored federal subsidy of such plans.

One of the commission's main findings was that "despite superior medical service and low death rates, Americans are not enjoying as good health as might be expected in this country."

One prime reason was that people in low - income groups can't afford adequate medical care even on present pre-payment plans.

The commission, whose formation in 1951 was termed by the AMA a "political expediency," also called for:

1. The training of more doctors, nurses and other health personnel.

2. Construction of more hospitals.

3. Increased medical research.

4. Support of industrial health and of migratory workers.

In Chicago, Dr. Louis H. Bauer, president of the AMA termed one aspect of the report "compulsory health insurance."

Dr. Bauer said a major recommendation in the report provides that "the federal government, through payroll deductions, would pay directly for the medical care of a large segment of the population. This is compulsory health insurance."

Commission officials told a reporter the federally - aided prepayment insurance plan would be aimed primarily at helping people with annual incomes of under $3,000.

But it would also provide full costs for people having no income and give some aid to those making more than $3,000 a year but still unable to pay the full cost themselves, officials said.

EAST GERMANS FLEE

BERLIN (Reuters) — East German farmers are fleeing to West Berlin at the rate of 200 a day, refugee officials said today. Fifty to 70 farms have been abandoned ofery day by farmers escaping state collectivization.

What Made "The Little Woman" a Tough Critic?

and why that means

Better Living for Everybody!

Today's home-maker is a shrewd buyer, an informed critic of everything she buys. She knows values better than her mother or grandmother ever did. When it comes to food, she buys wisely to obtain the greatest nutrition yield and money for every dollar. Textiles and clothing she judges as carefully, gauging workmanship, wearing qualities. She is an expert buyer.

Advertising helped make the "Little Woman" what she is today. Through the advertising pages of her newspaper she's informed of the qualities of goods offered for sale. The advertising messages strive to give her the facts that guide her buying. Advertising helped make her an expert buyer. Now, advertising must work all the harder to continue answering her demands for facts before buying.

Information makes the big difference in the buying performance of today's homemaker. We live better because we set high standards before everything we buy. Manufacturers of goods, merchants who sell those goods—all of them must meet our high standards before we know how good the things we want can be. Today, nobody need buy a pig in a poke.

Information is the force of advertising. Scan the advertising columns of this paper, and you'll find them packed with information that makes intelligent buyers of all of us. It adds up to better living that surpasses the dreams of a generation ago.

Because of advertising appearing regularly in its pages, this newspaper is aware that the service it performs for its readers is far greater and much more valuable than it could otherwise be.

Historic Surgical Operation Separates Siamese Twin Boys But Odds Against Survival

After Half Century

CHICAGO (AP)—In a history-making operation, surgeons Wednesday completed the separation of 13-month-old Siamese twin boys who were joined at the heads.

The operation, several hours after the 13-hour and 40-minute operation, were reported in critical condition. This was regarded as natural for such dangerous and lengthy surgery.

The separation was the first successful one of its kind in medical history. In two previous attempts to cut apart babies joined at the heads, the patients died.

By "Hearty Shape"

No member of the medical team which participated in the operation would predict if the infant twins will recover. Earlier, doctors said the odds were against the twins' survival even after they had said that the boys were "unbelievably hearty."

The ultimate outcome of the operation is as yet unknown," said a spokesman for the Research and Education Hospitals of the University of Illinois where the operation was performed.

Stanley Olson, dean of the university's college of medicine, said the twins had a "long road to go" before their survival is assured.

Expert post - operative and nursing care will be required, Olson said, as the babies had been subjected to intense shock and had lost considerable blood.

Under Oxygen

The twins were placed under oxygen tents. A university spokesman said doctors plan to resume surgery today on the tiny patients, Roger Lee and Rodney Lee Brodie of Moline, Ill.

"It sure looks good to see them apart," said Brodie. Earlier he said he realized the real risk involved in the operation but "we wanted them to have a normal life."

After the main operation, the actual severing, surgeons waited for another two hours and four minutes to cut off blood vessels and stop bleeding.

The operation was the ninth of a series performed on the twins since their birth. Previous operations were designed to prepare the twins for the main ordeal.

The twins appeared to have had their heads joined wholly to each other at the top. Tests, however, showed the babies had separate brains and separate brain coverings, at least in part.

The operation, in which the Brodie twins was much more complex and risky than the successful operation of twin girls in Cleveland. The girls were joined at a point where chest and abdomen meet by a thin band of flesh. No vital organs were involved.

Woman Killed On Way to Work, Seek Driver

TORONTO (CP) — Annie Orlapiuk, about 55, was killed by an automobile on her way to work today and police immediately launched a hunt for the car that hit her.

Witnesses said a 1948 - model cream convertible struck the woman as she stepped the west central intersection of Bathurst and Queen streets on her way to her job at a clothing factory. They said it tossed her 20 feet in the air and that she landed on the pavement 50 feet from the point of impact.

Police said they were told the driver raced through a red light and continued west on Queen street. They have a description of the car and asked all garages to report any cars brought in them with damaged radiators or fenders.

Witnesses Will Have to Wait For Decision

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada Wednesday reserved judgment on a request by Jehovah's Witnesses for recognition as a religious denomination, entitled to the same freedom as other denominations.

The case, argued before the court for seven days, was based on a Quebec City by-law prohibiting distribution of literature without a permit from the chief of police.

Many Witnesses have been arrested and prosecuted for distributing Bible tracts in the streets without a permit.

W. Glen How of Toronto, counsel for the Witnesses, told the court that approximately 800 cases in Quebec hinge on the court's decision. He asked the court to declare the by-law invalid on the grounds that it interferes with freedom of religion.

Ernest Guilbout, counsel for Quebec City, and Emery Beaulieu, counsel for the Quebec attorney-general's department, argued that the by-law was valid. They said a municipality had the right to ban distribution of anything on its streets.

Mr. Godbout said the Witnesses asked to be classed as a religion and yet in their own literature they stated they were not a religion.

Mr. How was questioned by the bench on that point. He said the Witnesses consider themselves Christians. They placed a different interpretation on religion than the ordinary dictionary meaning, in a narrow sense, they took religion to mean a false belief.

Hottest Sabre Jet Ace Shoots Down MIG

SEOUL (AP) — The United States' hottest jet ace has shot down another Communist MIG fighter and a second MIG was damaged in a swirling air battle high over North Korea today, the U.S. Fifth Air Force reported.

Lieut. James F. Low of Sausalito, Calif., credited with his ninth MIG kill, was in the roughest dogfight he has had in two tours over Korea.

Ten Sabres clashed with 22 MIGs high above the Yalu reservoir, almost directly over the Yalu river boundary of Manchuria.

Ground action was light.

The air force reported its fighter-bombers smashed a large Communist troop concentration area about 30 miles below the North Korean capital, Pyongyang.

The air force said planes from four wings showered explosives on the Reds, destroying more than 70 buildings, and damaging 30.

Low praised the firing ability of the pilot whose MIG he shot down. "We went through everything in the book and that pilot really knew his stuff," he said, "it was the roughest fight I ever had."

Low said he raked the MIG with four machine-gun bursts, and it started to burn. It crashed before the Red pilot could bail out.

On the ground, the most pronounced lull in months settled over the frozen 155-mile battle line.

Non-Stop Air Service Planned Over Arctic Route

VANCOUVER (CP)—Grant Mc-Conachie, president of Canadian Pacific Air Lines, said Wednesday CPA is planning a non-stop air service between Vancouver and London over the arctic route.

He said this service would connect with CPA's present non-stop service from Tokyo to Vancouver to provide the fastest transportation between Asia and Europe.

Mr. McConachie did not elaborate.

Addressing the Transportation and Customs Bureau of the Vancouver Board of Trade, he said the planned route over the Arctic would also provide the fastest air service between Australia and British. CPA now operates a service between Vancouver and Australia, and soon will start service to South America.

"These are gigantic undertakings and will be met by terrific competition by all nations of the world. . . With the development of longer air-port facilities, I do not believe we can be driven from the skies by aviation as we have been driven from the seas by seafaring nations. We are pioneering one of the great airfaring nations of the world."

Turning to helicopter developments, he said:

"At the end of this decade, we can expect to see 30-passenger helicopters in the air. They will be a promising solution to the problem of the tedious journey between city and airport. They also offer exciting prospects for the residential commuter."

Michael Patrick O'Brien Becomes Flying Dutchman

HONG KONG (AP) — Michael Patrick O'Brien, who became a nautical yo-yo for lack of a passport, today started his fourth month of ferry boat rides between Hong Kong and Macau.

He began his 74th round trip, thankful that "anyhow, I've got a roof over my head."

Since he boarded the ferry at Lee Hong at Macau September 18 he has logged nearly 6,000 miles and spent 29 days in dry-dock.

He can't get off at either end of the 40-mile run because immigration authorities refuse to recognize him. He entered Macau from Red China and was given permission only to pass through.

O'Brien, 57, says he was born in the U.S. The state department says he is Hungarian.

So far nobody has doomed, like the legendary Flying Dutchman, to sail the seas forever.

Imperial Midland Towed Into Port

PORT DALHOUSIE (CP) — The tanker Imperial Midland was towed into harbor here Wednesday after wallowing three days in wind-whipped Lake Ontario.

The ship, with 15 dockworkers aboard broke loose Sunday while being towed here from Port Weller, normally a 90-minute run. Ten men were taken off Monday after speeding Sunday night without food or heat. High winds Tuesday prevented towing.

The tanker will be converted into a packet freighter.

Battle With Living Costs Less Arduous in 1952 But Era Of Inflation by No Means at End

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The daily battle with living costs became less arduous in 1952 as prices slipped from their peaks, but the era of inflation was by no means at an end.

Monthly cost - of - living indexes showed slight declines, but price averages for the year actually were higher in 1952 than in 1951 when consumer and bank credit controls and other government steps were taken to brake the advance.

Prices eased, but they did not come down as fast as they went up in 1951. And as the year 1953 drew to an end, there were many reasons for thinking that the era of inflation is not yet over.

While many a housewife could argue that prices, generally, still were high in 1952, the same could be said of prices in other Western countries—the United States and Britain.

One of the factors in the 1952 price drop stemmed not from government anti-inflation measures, but from a near-catastrophe—the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in south Saskatchewan.

Government Support

With meat surpluses mounting and the American market affected, meat prices in Canada began to drop from their 1951 peak. Government price props helped to prevent a runaway meat price decline, but prices still were a lot lower than they were in the previous year.

Meat is a big item in the average kitchen and in cost-of-living indexes. Food prices generally provided the main power to propel the cost-of-living index to its 1951 peak. They also forced living costs to lower ground in 1952.

While foods declined, rents, the second most important column in prices yardstick, climbed, following removal of governmental controls.

RAISE FOR TEACHERS

WATERLOO (CP)—Salary increases of $100 to $200 a year were granted Wednesday night to Waterloo public school teachers. First and second year teachers will receive the $100 increase while others will be given a $200 increase. The pay boosts will amount to $7,200.

1951 to a peak of 118.2 from 109.1. It dropped only two points in the 19-month period of 1952—to 116.1.

The bureau of statistics plans to continue publication of the two indexes simultaneously for at least another four months. Then the old index will be discarded.

Guild Application Is Reserved By Board

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Labor Relations Board Wednesday reserved judgment for three or four weeks on an application by Toronto local 47 of the American Newspaper Guild (CIO-CCL) for certification as bargaining agent for editorial employees of the Telegram Publishing Company.

The Guild claimed 135 persons are eligible for membership and John Osler, Guild counsel, said the 110 membership cards on file represent 70 per cent of the employees. He urged certification without a vote.

The company held the bargaining unit should be 172, excluding office boys and messengers.

Eight members of the editorial department intervened to oppose certification because: any contract would have to be approved by Guild officers who are employees of the Toronto Star; messengers would have equal voting rights with senior employees; membership in a union which supported any political party would destroy newspaper men's reputation for objectivity.

Rabies Epidemic Among Wildlife Is Spreading

EDMONTON (CP)— Northern Alberta's rabies epidemic among wildlife has spread to within 175 miles of Edmonton, R. Bastianstyne, provincial director of veterinary services, indicated Wednesday.

Mr. Bastianstyne said the situation is "serious" with the disease spreading "close to the main settled areas of Alberta". The highly-infectious disease, carried by wild animals such as foxes and wolves, causes madness and death. Humans are not immune to it.

The newspaper director said a fox with rabies was killed at Marwayne, 194 miles north of Edmonton, in the first week of December and a rabies-infected coyote was killed at Wood Mickinney in northeastern Alberta last month.

The rabies epidemic is only about 60 miles across the border from La Loche, Sask., where another rabies outbreak was reported Wednesday among deer. A federal veterinarian, Dr. Rankin of Regina, has flew to the area, 250 miles northwest of Prince Albert, to start a vaccination program.

Dr. Bullington reported the death of the disease in confirming a communication from a pioneer settler-trapper. He added practitioner that the rabies epidemic was not over. Last October, Dr. Rankin returned from Fort Vermilion, 350 miles northwest of Edmonton, and announced the epidemic had been stamped out.

Dr. Mayer, veterinarian of Keg River, 125 miles southwest of Fort Vermilion, said eight dogs and two bears had died of rabies there in the last few weeks.

See 1,500,000 Auto Vehicles As Lifting of Steel Controls Boosts U.S. Production Goal

May be Cleared

WASHINGTON (AP) — Makers of automobiles and other civilian goods raised their production goals for the second quarter of 1953 today, on the basis of government assurance they will have more steel than at any time since the Korean war began.

The defence production administration authorized them Wednesday to use steel up to 70 per cent of their pre-Korean rate. This is about 16 per cent more than for previous high since the government began rationing scarce materials to assure adequate supplies for defence.

Aluminum Up

Aluminum producers weighed, meanwhile, a national government offer for a ceiling price increase of ½-cent a pound on primary aluminum ingot and four per cent on fabricated aluminum products.

Defence Mobilizer Henry Fowler tied the proposed increase to a provision that the big three producers agree to certain changes in their contracts with the government, among them deletion of the right of the government or the companies to cancel contracts for aluminum before they run their full five years.

Fowler's proposal was made in identical letters to the Aluminum Co. of America, the Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation and the Reynolds Metals Company. He asked immediate replies.

The companies have asked for increase last August, but they said it wasn't enough to meet their expansion program and asked Fowler for another raise.

Some Rates Unchanged

The DPA allotments of controlled materials for the April-May-June quarter of 1953 made no change in the rate of use of copper and aluminum. The agency said these metals still are scarce. Copper use will continue at 50 per cent of pre-Korea levels and aluminum at 55 per cent.

Acting DPA chief, Ralph Tyler, said the steel provided would allow production of 1,250,000 passenger automobiles and 215,-000 trucks. This compares with steel provided to build only 700,000 cars in the first quarter of the new year.

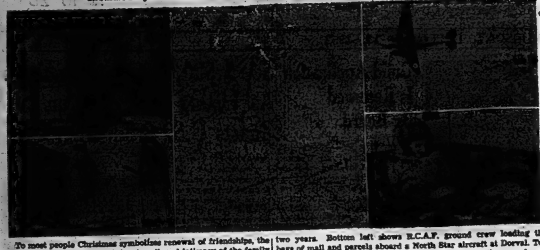
Reformatory Terms



STRATFORD (CP) —Three Listowel young men were given reformatory terms Wednesday, consecutive to terms they were already serving.

Perth county Judge H. D. Lang, sentenced Lyle Gowing, 22, to six months definite; Floyd Kesso, 19, to three months definite, and Orvis Fletcher, 17, to two months.

The trio was convicted of stealing flax seed valued at about $225 last October from the farm of Duncan Tindall of Britton in Morningston township.

The three were brought to Stratford from Guelph where they are serving reformatory terms for cattle theft in Huron county.

R.C.A.F. Flays Santa Claus to Men Manning Weather Stations in the Arctic

To most people Christmas symbolizes renewal of friendships, the exchange of gifts and the warmth and intimacy of the family group around the fireside. For the men who staff Canada's isolated department of transport weather stations in the Arctic, however, there can be no family reunion, but the R.C.A.F. lends what aid it can to mitigate the rigors of the men doing a responsible job far away from home. Two R.C.A.F. transport squadrons, 426 based at Dorval, P.Q., and 412 at Rockcliffe, Ont., will take over from St. Nicholas this year to deliver 2,000 pounds of parcels and mail to the weathermen in widely scattered areas of the far north. In top left, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gee of London, Ont., are seen busily packing gifts for their son Bill, who has been stationed at Arctic Bay for two years. Bottom left shows R.C.A.F. ground crew loading the bags of mail and parcels aboard a North Star aircraft at Dorval. Top right: After carefully surveying the intended area, the parcels are parachuted out where they are eagerly awaited by the men below, who wave their thanks. Centre: this portion of the map of Canada's northland shows where the various air drops are made. Bottom right: This shows the final phase of the successful operation with the weatherman reading the letters from his friends and loved ones at home, while in the cold, gray sky overhead, the R.C.A.F. transport aircraft head back for home with their crews in a warm glow of a good job well done. — Central Press Canadian.

POINT ANNE

Ladies' Aid Honors 40th Anniversary With Fine Gift

POINT ANNE. — The Ladies' Aid of Point Anne United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Ed. Fraser, on Tuesday evening with 13 members present and three visitors. The president, Mrs. Noble Brown, opened the meeting.

A Bible reading was given by Mrs. Akey from Isaiah and Luke. "Whatever may be lost among the years, let us keep Christmas still a shining thing; let us get back our childlike faith again", said Mrs. Akey. A Christmas reading followed given by Mrs. J. W. MacLaurin.

Letters and cards of thanks were received from those members who were ill thanking for cards sent to them. Business was dealt with, and the Aid closed.

At this time Mrs. Wedding announced the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fraser, they were given seats of honor in the centre of the room, and an address read by Mrs. Brown, following which Mrs. Fred Clarke presented them with a pair of lovely ruby-colored, hand-painted vases, from the women of the Aid, for which Mr. and Mrs. Fraser most graciously expressed their appreciation and thanks.

Mrs. William Norwood, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. William Gloag, sang the "Anniversary Song", followed by "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" in which all joined.

Refreshments were then served, including a lovely anniversary cake, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Fraser, by their daughter, Kay.

Mr. and Mrs. Fraser were also the recipients of a beautiful bouquet of red roses from their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Fraser, of Trenton, as well as a number of gifts from their family friends.

With the exchanging of Christmas gifts by the members, and wishing Mr. and Mrs. Fraser many more anniversaries together, the enjoyable evening came to a close.

Fills Atomic Post Vacated by Spy

Twenty-eight-year-old Dr. Brian Flowers has been appointed to the post of chief theoretical physicist at Harwell Atomic Research station in London, Eng. The brilliant young atomic scientist will fill the position left vacant by Klaus Fuchs, who was arrested in February, 1950, for betraying atomic secrets to Russia. — Central Press Canadian.

DESERONTO

United Church E. A. Returns Officers By Acclamation

DESERONTO — The December meeting of the Evening Association of Deseronto United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Gordon Burley, Green Street. There was a large attendance. The president, Mrs. H. A. Aylesworth, presided.

Christmas carols were sung and Mrs. C. A'Vrebeack read the scripture lesson. Reports were given by convenors of flower, gift fund and visiting committees.

Readings were contributed by Mrs. Isobel Young, Mrs. Harold McCaul and Mrs. Jeanne Burd.

Mrs. C. W. Neelands, wife of the United Church pastor, presided and conducted the election of officers for 1953. This resulted in an acclamation, as all the former officers were returned for a second year.

The association has finished a successful year with a gratifying financial balance of approximately $160.

A worthy deed is to be carried out by the association in the form of a donation of $25 to the W.M.S. This automatically grants a life membership of members. It was unanimously agreed that Mrs. Jas. Dawson be the honored recipient of this gift, for her many years of devoted service.

An exchange of Christmas gifts was much enjoyed and the Yuletide spirit was strengthened.

Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by a committee comprising Mrs. Aylesworth, Mrs. Allenbrace, Mrs. Young and Mrs. Burd.

Officers for 1953 are as follows: president — Mrs. Herb Aylesworth; 1st vice-president Mrs. Claude Thompson; 2nd vice-president — Mrs. Wilfrid Rendell; treasurer — Mrs. T. Tumbilffe; secretary — Mrs. William Wood; flower convener — Mrs. E. Gibson; press reporter — Mrs. W. G. Burd.

STIRLING

Mrs. C. Lansing Receives W.M.A. Life Certificate

Stirling—The Christmas meeting of St. Paul's W.M.A. was held in the Sunday School room of the church on Tuesday afternoon. A medley of Christmas carols played softly by Mrs. R. Stapley formed an appropriate setting for this meeting.

Mrs. E. Munro presided and used some fitting words on "Silence", as her call to worship, followed by a special Christmas prayer. The new theme song was sung.

A greeting card was read from Miss Lorene Powell, in Vancouver. Many commented on the bond of fellowship which prompted the sending of it.

Each department secretary presented a fine record and the president gratefully recognized their accomplishments.

Life Membership

Mrs. Munro called on Mrs. Clifford Lansing and after complimentary remarks for her missionary zeal, Mrs. J. B. Thompson presented Mrs. Lansing with her Life membership certificate.

Mrs. E. G. Bailey reported for the nominating committee, the new officers to be installed at the January meeting.

Mrs. P. Ulman took charge of the Christmas program, using festive hymns and selected Scripture passages. The various readers were: Meadames Duffin, David, Lucey and Miss D. Coldwell.

Mrs. S. Williams contributed some Scripture comments and Mrs. R. Stapley sang a lovely solo, "Christmas Starlight," accompanied by Mrs. A. T. Baker.

Mrs. A. Armstrong summarized medical and hospital work in Angola from the study book, pointing out the advance medical science is making, even in raising the average life expectancy. New drugs are making a marked improvement in the treatment of leprosy. Missions in general are raising the medical, spiritual, agricultural and educational standards of the natives.

Mrs. R. A. Patterson moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Munro, the retiring president, for her wonderful leadership during the year.

Refreshments of sandwiches, pickles, cookies and tea were served and Mrs. Munro thanked the lunch and program committee for the fine meeting and all who had made the meeting a success during the year.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rowe, of Frankford, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur McColl.

Miss Anne Richards, of Queensboro, is visiting at Mrs. L. E. Bryant's.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Putnam and Janie attended a Christmas party at the Masonic Hall in Belleville on Sunday afternoon. They spent the evening in Trenton at his brother's, Mr. Arthur Putnam.

W.M.S. Officers Elected.

The Evening Auxiliary of the W.M.S. held its December meeting at the home of Mrs. Arthur Dorland. The president, Mrs. Harry Ewing, opened meeting with a carol, "Silent Night". Mrs. Charles Nelson was in charge of worship. Reports were given and other items of business discussed. Mrs. Harry Ewing and Mrs. D. Dorland were given charge of the junior congregation for the first quarter in 1953.

Other officials were sung and a vote of thanks was given Mrs. A. Dorland for opening her home for the evening.

New Officers

Officers for 1953 are as follows:

Hon. President, Mrs. Fletcher; president, Mrs. H. Ewing; secretary, Mrs. M. Anderson; treasurer, Mrs. D. Fox.

There is a new arrival at the home of Mr. George Graham, a baby girl born in Trenton hospital on Wednesday, December 10, 1952.

THOMASBURG

THOMASBURG — Preparations are going forward in the school at Thomasburg for their concert in the I.O.O.F. Hall on the evening of the 18th. All hope for fair weather on that night.

The United Church Sunday School met on Sunday with a fair attendance. In the absence of Ruby Bateman due to illness Dorothy Pipe acted as pianist. The entertainment sponsored by the Sunday School will be the evening of the 23rd of December.

The Christmas service of Thomasburg United Church will be a joint service: Moira and Thomasburg congregations until 11 will be held at Moira at 7:30 p.m. Sunday December 21st.

Mr. Donald Richardson, Robbin, was a caller in Powell and Thomasburg on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Yateman were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. English.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Grills have recently come to their own farm home. Community friends wish them continued improvement in health.

Since the recent snowstorm, Thomasburg residents miss the sanding operations of the highway road gang. Walking this p.m. along the main street was indeed hazardous.

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!

HANDBALL: THE FULL-ARM UNDERHAND STROKE

1 Feet about eighteen inches apart, knees slightly bent, body faces forward and is turned to the right as right arm swings back into position. Hitting arm is bent at the elbow and weight is on right leg. Head is set squarely and focus side well.

3 Follow-through is important for control of the ball. Shoulders and arm swing about naturally with ease and rotation. Extra speed and control on this stroke comes when wrist is flexible. Ball may be hit with either cupped or flat hand.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in handball as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and game.

Religious Persecution High In Soviet Blocs Says Martin

By NORMAN ALTSTEDTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Health Minister Paul Martin of Canada told the United Nations Wednesday that religious persecution in Soviet-bloc countries has reached a level of frenzy comparable with the worst times under the Nazis.

The low-key or the Canadian delegation said before the social committee of the general assembly that efforts in Iron Curtain countries aim at putting the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths under complete subservience to the state.

Martin spoke during discussion of the economic and social council's report on prevention of discrimination and protection of minorities.

The Canadian called in particular on diplomatic representatives in Bulgaria to forward to Bulgarian authorities protests against the recent conviction of a group of which Dr. Evgen Brezilkov, senior Roman Catholic bishop of the Church of Bulgaria, was a principal defendant against charges of attempting to overthrow the government.

The Bulgarian trial of 40 persons "in which the guilt of all the defendants was assumed" in the indictment, was only one example of a ruthless attack on freedom of conscience, Martin said.

He recalled that Canada, as far back as 1948, protested against the violation of human rights in Hungary Romania and Bulgaria—bound to observe these rights under terms of the peace treaty with which Canada is associated.

'Pinto' Wires Ottawa Asking For Old Age Pensions for Horses

OTTAWA (CP) — Horses were put on the payroll at Petawawa army camp, according to the Currie report, and today Stanley Knowles, CCF-Winnipeg North Centre got this wire from Dauphin, Man.:

"Understand that horses now eligible for regular army pay in Canadian Army. On behalf local nags, all category E and not fit for service, I appeal to the government for old age pensions. Please hurry. Christmas just around corner. As alternative appointments to Senate will be considered. Please send cheques airmail. Hear railroad tracks torn up. Regards to our local MP."

It was signed "Pinto."

The railroad track reference relates to a section of the Currie report saying Petawawa camp is handicapped by removal of a section of track here.

Says Eire Resents Listing of North Ireland as Part of United Kingdom

DUBLIN (AP)—Foreign minister Frank Aiken said Wednesday night the people of the Republican of Ireland deeply resent the listing of Northern Ireland as a part of the United Kingdom in the royal title of the Queen.

Parliamentary approval of this phrasing will "but steel their determination that the counties cut off will sooner or later be restored" to the rest of Ireland, he declared in a statement.

Only the six northeastern counties of Ireland — Ulster — still maintain allegiance to the crown. The island's other 26 counties, the Independent Republic of Ireland, refuses to recognize this "partition" and continues to demand that Ulster be made part of the republic.

"These six northeastern counties are in an inalienable part of the Irish national territory," Aiken said. "It is no bad the British government should be induced to link the British crown and the royal family so directly with the cruel wrong of partition which is the last remnant of British aggression in Ireland."

The title proposed for the young monarch's Coronation was announced Dec. 12. It would proclaim her "Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of her other realms and territories, queen, head of the Commonwealth, defender of the faith."

This the form suggested for use in Britain itself. The wording will vary slightly in other parts of the Commonwealth.

Elizabeth's father, King George VI, was crowned King of Great Britain and Ireland in 1937 but at that time southern Ireland was still part of the Commonwealth. It gained complete independence in 1949.

Canada-U.S. Join In Fight Against Lamprey Attacks

WASHINGTON (AP)—Representatives of Canada and the United States met today to form an alliance against the destructive sea lamprey, which is destroying vast quantities of fish in the Great Lakes.

The state department said the aim of the meeting would be to write an agreement for joint action to wipe out the parasite. The lamprey is an eel-like creature which lives by attaching itself to a fish and subsisting upon the fish's blood.

"It is estimated," a state department announcement said, "that some $5,000,000 in lake trout alone have been lost to this parasite since 1940. The lamprey is now invading Lake Superior and threatens to destroy the lake trout fisheries there, as it has already destroyed those of Lakes Huron, and Michigan.

The U. S. fish and wild life service, in co-operation with agencies of the Great Lakes states, the department said, has developed electrical and mechanical devices for controlling the lamprey "but these must be installed on both United States and Canadian shores of the lakes to be effective."

"In addition," the department said, "it is expected that improvements will be made to co-ordinate the fishery research programs in the lakes which are now being conducted by eight state governments, the province of Ontario and the two national governments."

Man Has No Idea How He Got from B.C. to Kitchener

TORONTO (CP)—Albert Thomas Hetherington was walking down the street at Kitchener the other day when a buzzing started in his mind and he began looking for the harbor at Victoria.

"This isn't Victoria, this is Kitchener," an astonished stranger replied to his question and Mr. Hetherington of Victoria and Alberni, B. C., began the long road home from a 20-day memory lapse.

The last thing the 67-year-old janitor remembers before the blackout was making a $2 Grey Cup bet on Argos in the streets of Nanaimo, B. C. Since then baffled RCMP officers have sought him along the West coast. Most of this time he was working as an orderly in Kitchener hospital.

Mr. Hetherington has no idea how he got from Nanaimo to Kitchener or why he made the trip. Psychiatrists said they believe his unwilling return to central Ontario may in some way be connected with an unhappy childhood spent in virtual servitude in a farmer in Kitchener district. The 13 days as a hospital orderly they link with a period in 1939 when he was in hospital while serving with the Calgary Highlanders. While convalescing he assisted in the wards of Belcher military hospital, Calgary.

Mr. Hetherington told his story here yesterday. Friendless and bewildered, he passed a city newspaper building and recognized the name because he subscribed to the paper in Port Alberni. He entered the building and told his story.

Let His Wife Know

Mr. Hetherington went to the telegraph office to let his wife know he was all right. He still remembered he had been working in the hospital and returned to get the address of the boarding - house where he had lived.

Mr. and Mrs. Hetherington moved from Victoria to Alberni one month before the blackout. The move was made necessary after Mr. Hetherington suffered a heart attack and had to give up his painting and decorating business. It was then he obtained a caretaking job.

Just before that he lost all his life savings by trying to build his own home near Cranbrook. He went broke before the house was completed.

HOCKEY PLAYER INJURED

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Doug Gillespie of Owen Sound Mercurys suffered a bad bruise on his jaw during Tuesday night's Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game, hospital authorities said today.

At first it was thought Gillespie's jaw had been broken when he was hit by a high stick during the game with Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen.

Reds Boasting Will Be in Seoul By Christmas

By GEORGE McARTHUR

SEOUL (AP) — Allied warplanes smashed a big Red troop-massing area near the North Korean capital of Pyongyang today while the Communists boasted they would be in Seoul by Christmas.

The air force said more than 70 buildings were destroyed and 30 more were damaged.

The Communist boast about capturing Seoul came in loudspeaker broadcasts along the front. High-flying Red planes also made a rare appearance over the front, showering leaflets saying in effect, "Yankee, go home."

While Allied officers considered the broadcasts one more phase of the Red's psychological warfare, one officer said the news had spread through Seoul "causing quite a commotion."

No signs have been reported that the Communists were massing anywhere along the front for an offensive toward Seoul.

While fighter bombers worked over Red concentrations far behind the front, Sabre jets on screening patrol over northwest Korea shot down one MIG jet and damaged another, the air force said. The downed MiG was bagged by the behind Sabres are now operating in Korea.

British Columbia Business Men Still Talking in Millions But Keep Eye on Thousands

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's industrial forces paused to regroup during 1952.

That is, generally speaking. A few spearheads, notably oil and electric power, kept thrusting ahead. There were also some retreats.

There was not the sashe broad full expansion that the coast province experienced in 1951. Business men were still talking in millions but they were keeping a sharp eye on the thousands. In short, quiet optimism replaced the blatant optimism of 1951.

Labor Troubles

The year was one of labor upheaval. Management fought as it hadn't since before the war against wage increases. The result was one strike or lockout after another.

Biggest advances were made in the fields of oil and electric power.

By the time snow started to fall in the interior, Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Company had completed half its 711-mile, $86,000,000 Edmonton-Vancouver oil line. Oil companies are spending about $50,000,000 to expand refineries here. As the year ended, plans were announced for a new $3,000,000 refinery at Kamloops, along the Trans Mountain route.

Companies were spending $1,000,000 a month looking for oil and natural gas in northeastern B.C., where oil was first found Nov. 1, 1951. Westcoast Transmission Company awaited approval from the U.S. federal power commission to start construction of a $111,000,000 gas pipe line from Peace River to Portland, Ore. More than 30,000,000 acres were under permit for oil and gas exploration.

Boost Hydro Output

In the last five years, B.C. Electric Company has increased hydro output from 253,000 horsepower to 805,000. It says the increase is a yardstick to measure expansion and development during that time in the southwestern corner of the province, the main population area.

At Waneta, near Trail, work progressed smoothly on Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company's new 250,000,000 power dam. Initial output will be 205,000 horsepower.

In north-central B.C., the Kenney dam, third-largest rock-fill barrier in the world, was completed across the Nechako river. It will store water behind it which will be driven through the coast range by a 16-mile tunnel to create power for an aluminum plant at Kitimat. This $250,000,000 project will eventually turn out 1,500,000 h.p.

There were gains and losses in transportation. The Pacific Great Eastern Railway, province-owned, completed its $13,000,000, 83-mile link from Quesnel to Prince George in the interior, connecting the PGE with Canadian National's transcontinental line. British Columbians began to grouse about the coastal steamship service and this was aggravated by the sinking of Canadian Pacific's Princess Kathleen. It was estimated it will take two to five years beyond the original 1958 target date to complete B.C.'s portion of the trans-Canada highway.

Loses Ground

The province's major industry—lumbering—also proved a dud. World markets tightened as Scandinavia underbid B.C. for the United Kingdom lumber trade.

During the summer a 45-day strike paralyzed the industry and crippled the province's entire economy. (Fifty-four cents of every dollar made in B.C. comes directly or indirectly from the forest industry). The Vancouver Board of Trade estimated the strike cost B.C. a staggering $170,000,000. The strike was followed by a 30-day closure of the woods because of forest fires.

A bright spot was the opening of the first unit of a $40,000,000 newsprint mill at Duncan Bay on Vancouver Island. It was the first wholly newsprint mill for B.C. in 25 years. But production of markets and schedule pulp was cut 26 per cent because of narrower markets.

The construction industry in seven coast cities was hampered for 87 days by strikes and lockouts.

At one time during the summer, 40,000 workers were on strike on various trades and industries.

Fish Prices Drop

The fishing industry was hard hit by falling markets and a dispute over salmon prices, which tied up the fleet for 61 days. Near year's end, the fishing industry was still not operating although the season was more than half gone. The reasons were the same. The one bright spot on the fishing front was a post-war record catch of whales—651.

The tourist industry was up 10 per cent to about $65,000,000. Western Canada Steel Co. Ltd. announced construction of a $4,000,000 electric furnace to produce steel—first inroad into repeated demands for a steel industry in B.C.

The mining industry, one of the big four in B.C. (forestry, agriculture, fishing and mining) fell back during 1952, though not far. Production was estimated at $163,900,000 for 1952 compared to $175,639,301 in 1951.

HOUSE

At 10:50 p.m. EST, the House adjourned.

In the first vote, Liberal members beat down the three opposition parties in rejecting a CCF amendment to the throne speech by a vote of 127 to 57. The amendment proposed paying farmers for wheat stored on farms up to 75 per cent of the initial price they would get for their wheat in a crop year.

They the Liberals rejected by a vote of 114 to 47 a Progressive Conservative amendment charging the government with imposing "excessive and unjust taxation" and being responsible for "waste and extravagance." The three opposition groups again voted together.

The main motion for adoption of the reply to the throne speech went through without a formal vote but with opposition members signifying vocal disapproval.

The fight was climaxed in a speech by, acting Defence Minister Campeay which ended with him and Conservative leader, throwing charges of irresponsibility at one another.

The day saw these statements:

1. Mr. Campeay accused the opposition of playing politics by making "wild and irresponsible" propaganda to blow up a "relatively small matter" into a big issue. He regretted attacks on Mr. Claxton when the latter was away on Atlantic Pact business and lauded the minister's record.

2. Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North) charged Prime Minister St. Laurent for tabling a memo from Lt.-Gen. G.G. Simonds, army chief, taking exception to parts of the report. "Who is running this country anyway," he asked. He also criticized Gen. Simonds for requesting that the memo be made public.

2. Mr. St. Laurent said neither Gen. Simonds nor his predecessor, Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, could be blamed for the situation disclosed in the report. Gen. Simonds had not been chief when "all this" occurred Gen. Foulkes had had to devote most of his time to international matters.

4. Alfred Green (PC — Vancouver-Quadra) joined other opposition members in calling for Mr. Claxton's scalp and said he is incapable of cleaning up "the serious situation" in the army.

5. The prime minister suggested that the Commons defence expenditures committee might call both Mr. Currie and Gen. Simonds as witnesses in considering both the report and the Simonds memo.

6. Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver-East) joined others in calling for an independent commission to study the whole defence department and said only a naive minister could expect the opposition to let such go opportunity as the Currie report pass without making political use of it.

In the government's main reply, Mr. Campeay accused the opposition of working themselves into a state of political hysteria which they were trying to pass on to the people. "They are trying to play politics with the Currie report."

They were trying to throw the cloud that came from a small gang of crooks over the whole defence department. At Petawawa, those few crooks had conspired to steal. The government had taken action against them, had convicted 11 soldiers and civilians.

Although the Currie report said the first up on the irregularities came from an anonymous letter, Mr. Campeay contended that they already were under investigation by the provost corps.

No one condoned pilfering, but the Currie report itself said that nowhere were the losses large and that it was simply thievery on a large scale.

Mr. Claxton could well have treated the Currie report as his own confidential document but, with courage, had made it public so the House and people couldknow the facts.

Mr. Campeay described the army works service as a relatively unimportant branch until Korea forced it to expand many times, to multiply its spending 10 times. It had not been able to keep up with this expansion.

The basic reason was that the Army was seeking skilled men to handle the expansion just when a booming civilian economy offered them better jobs. It had had to start training them itself while the war piled up. Under the sometimes fantastic overload of work, it would take some time yet to get the service on its feet.

Mr. Currie had said the whole works service should not be indicted for the acts of a few crooks The opposition should remember this.

Mr. Currie hadi made interim suggestions and they had been carried out by the administrative staff. To suggest, as the opposition did, that Mr. Claxton knew about them when he said there had been no iterim reports was "not true".

A large part of the report's 44 recommendations had been carried out. But only two of the 11 on security had been implemented because security was a delicate problem and it was under active study.

Mr. Knowles, in calling for Mr. Claxton's removal, described the Currie findings as "disgusting and disgraceful" and said any man at the head of a department where that sort of thing went on should be fired.

The report also attached blame to army higher-ups and those responsible in that field should get severe and drastic treatment. The action should be taken quickly, because the situation was urgent.

Mr. Knowles was critical of the fact that an advance copy of the Currie report had gone to the defence department 19 days early for suggested changes and said thi? indicates that the department thinks it is top dog even when it is under investigation.

(Rejecting a suggestion by Mr. St. Laurent, Mr. Knowles said the CCF could "not disclose how it came into possession of a copy of the report before it was tabled in the House. That was the copy which prompted Mr. Knowles to charge Monday that changes were made before the final report was tabled.

(Later, outside the House, CCF leader M. J. Coldwell said a friend unconnected with the government service gave him the report Dec. 9.)

Mr. St. Laurent confirmed that changes were made at the suggestion of Deputy Minister C. M. Drury after the Currie firm asked a final check on the facts in a draft document. Mr. Claxton had allowed Mr. Drury to look over the draft copy with instructions to stick closely to facts.

The draft was received Nov. 27 and some of Mr. Drury's suggestions were accepted, some weren't.

Mr. St. Laurent said he had been surprised to learn that the draft had been handed into the department.

The House rose without getting a final reply to questions about whether Gen. Simonds made any suggestions for changes, particularly on a page which referred to indifference to administration among senior "higher-ups." The CCF claimed their copy used the term "people at or near the top."

Mr. Green called for immediate steps to improve efficiency in the defence department but Mr. Claxton wasn't the man to direct them. He wasn't practical enough.

(Mr. Claxton is due home Saturday from Paris.)

The people were entitled to a full statement by Mr. St. Laurent.

Boss Describes Conditions In Kure and Temptations In Way of Canadian Soldiers

The Japanese press has reported "reign of terror" by Commonwealth troops in Kure. Bill Boss, Canadian Press staff writer with the Canadian forces in Korea, was sent to Japan to investigate. In this story, one of a series, he describes conditions in the city and the temptations in the way of servicemen there.

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

KURE, Japan (CP)—Col. Willis Moogk of Ottawa, colonel in charge of administration for the 25th Canadian brigade, says Kure "caters to the soldier's baser instincts."

An indication of the atmosphere in this city of sin is a Canadian army order, telling troops what to do if they are molested by Japanese prostitutes. It explains soliciting for prostitution is illegal in Japan, but the police can't lay a charge unless the accosted person complains.

Service personnel who have been accosted and wish to make a complaint should go the nearest police box, or to any M.P. (military police) patrol, or civilian policeman," says the order.

Two nights before it was published, I saw two Canada-bound Canadian—members of the 1st battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry—literally hauled off their feet by three girls keen on detaining them.

Fewer Offences

Canadian military and civil offences in Kure have fallen from an August peak of 18 a day to six a day in October. Another eight offences weekly by Canadians against Japanese are settled by Canadian Army legal officers before they reach the civil police.

But even at the peak, the "reign of terror" reported by the Japanese press was created by the Japanese themselves. Of more than 2,000 serious crimes in Kure from April 28 to Nov. 15, only 230 were committed by Commonwealth troops including 97 by Canadians.

Kure, which has headquarters and base installations of British Commonwealth Forces in Korea, has a population of 182,000 counting its satellite city of Hiroshima. It was heavily bombed during the war. Since then its huge arsenals and naval base have been outlawed. New industries can't come in until factory buildings, used for Korean war purposes by the Australians, are released.

Some 10,000 to 12,000 Kure men and women are employed by the Commonwealth forces. As many more probably are employed by firms supplying the forces.

Most of the rest of the city lives off the spending of troops stationed here and those in transit to and from Korea.

Soldiers Mean Money

Many of the troops sit relaxing after front-line tension. They are interested in amusement and souvenirs. Kure abounds in trinket shops supporting entire families, their cousins and their aunts.

And the shopping districts of Kure and Hiromachi—a 20-minute drive from downtown Kure—are full of pin-ball dives, cabarets, beer halls and "tea shops" staffed by hostesses who are available for other purposes than serving tea.

There also is an extensive red-light district. There are almost 3,000 recognized—although not licensed—prostitutes. There are 115 licensed prostitute brokers. Registered with the public health department are 54 beer halls and cabarets employing 284 waitresses, 119 hotels with 307 room maids, 640 "tea shops" licensed to serve beer and spirits. There are 84 high-class geisha houses. Other meeting places include six licensed dance halls and five "dance-training schools."

"These people will do anything for food—and I mean anything," said one Canadian officer.

These are the only Japanese the visiting soldier meets. Turn loose into that atmosphere a soldier just out of the line and on the way home, and trouble often follows.

Japanese Offenders

Chief Mateo Kirihara of the Kure municipal police told me his force is more worried about the Japanese crime to which Commonwealth soldiers contribute than the amount of crime Commonwealth troops themselves commit.

Japanese police identified 1,948 armed robberies and 214 assaults between April and November mostly used Canadian and Australian service pistols and revolvers.

"Your men use the weapons to pay prostitutes," he said.

The girls sell them to Japanese. Since May we've recovered 24 such weapons and suspect there are many more in circulation. One of my men was killed in September with one of the guns. The man later arrested said he got it from a prostitute.

Chief Kirihara said he wants to prevent crime rather than punish criminals. He wants more Japanese in military police patrols.

Col. Moogk and other Commonwealth officers said they agree there should be close liaison between military and civil authorities. Moogk said an increase in the number of Canadians in the base military police company has "the sole object of keeping our chaps out of trouble."

District May Have Been Shaken By Meteorite

FORT FRANCES (CP)—Residents of the international border area think the district may have been shaken by a meteorite or earthquake tremor.

Two distinct sounds were heard Monday and Tuesday over a widespread area. Residents reported what sounded like an explosion Monday night and a rumbling noise at midnight Tuesday.

No cause has been found for the disturbance. It was reported as far away as 50 miles from Fort Frances.

MARSH HILL

Harmony Club Holds Christmas Meeting

Marsh Hill—Marsh Hill Harmony Club met Friday night in the Marsh Hill school for its Christmas meeting. The president, Mr. Farley Lindenfield, opened the meeting.

During the business, a nominating committee composed of Mrs. John Brown, Mr. Farley Lindenfield, Mr. E. B. Finkle and Mr. Leslie Finkle are to bring in a new slate of officers at the January meeting.

The January meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Slater with Mr. and Mrs. Farley Lindenfield as program conveners.

Rev. and Mrs. Giffin were program conveners and showed several Christmas film strips, "The Birth of Jesus," which was colored, "The Angels Message to Zacharias", "The Angels Message to Mary," and "The Hebrew Version of the Birth of Jesus."

Several Christmas carols were sung.

Recreation conveners were Mr. and Mrs. Farley Lindenfield.

Refreshments were served by the lunch committee.

JACK Ireland IS CALLING ALL LADIES!

HOTPOINT!

Automatic LAUNDRY

The Hotpoint Automatic Washer is truly the end to old-fashioned washday routine. The remarkable, exclusive WOND-R-DIAL . . . your master control . . . makes your washday fully automatic. You simply place your clothes in the tub, set the dial and the WOND-R-DIAL does the rest. Another remarkable feature of the Hotpoint Automatic Washer is that it requires absolutely No Bolting to the Floor.

The Hotpoint Automatic Dryer dries your clothes either damp dry and ready for ironing or completely dry, as you prefer. Either way your clothes are softer, fluffier, sweeter . . . even better than an outdoor drying because the Hotpoint exclusive sealed drying chamber seals out airborne dust and dirt. Your clothes are dried absolutely clean and it makes no difference what the outside weather may be.

Yes ladies we repeat that the "quickest way to end washday" is with the Hotpoint Automatic Laundry. Now thanks to Hotpoint's advanced engineering . . . it takes as little as 22 minutes of your time to wash and dry the average family's entire week's laundry. If you really want to take the work out of washday better consider the HOTPOINT AUTOMATIC LAUNDRY.

Hotpoint AUTOMATIC WASHER $429.50
Hotpoint AUTOMATIC DRYER $379.50

RAWDON

RAWDON — Sergeant John Barron, Camp Borden, who is taking a six-months' officer's course in Kingston spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Barron. Scott Junction, where the family enjoyed a pre-Christmas party. Mr. Barron will return to Camp Borden on Thursday for the holiday season. He left on Monday morning for his usual duties at Kingston.

Just recently, Mrs. J. S. Barron, her daughter, Mrs. Ira David, and her granddaughter, Miss Madeline Barron, attended the wedding of Miss Mona Barron, daughter of Sergeant and Mrs. John Barron at Camp Borden. The skirl of the bagpipes, reminding one of "The Hills and the Heather," ushered the young couple to and from the army chapel where the service was held.

Mr. and Mrs. James Mennies entertained on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Menzies, Lorraine and Allan, Warkworth; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Herron, Yvonne, Bruce and Helen, Morganston; Mrs. Norman Herron and Miss Audrey Herron, of Campbellford and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Nelson and Leslie, of Hilgay Stead.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Carr and sons, River Valley, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Board.

Mr. and Mrs. Sid Williams recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Campbell and Brenda, and Mrs. Don Campbell.

Mrs. Ted Gould, River Valley community, suffered a heart attack at her home on Saturday evening and is now somewhat improved.

Mr. Richard Chard, who is taking a course at Toronto University, spent the week-end at his home in River Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McMaster and sons, David and Larry, are holidaying in Florida. Last Wednesday evening they were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharpe and Bert; Ingrid Pleasant. They left on Sunday for their trip south.

Central cheese factory closed for this season on Wednesday last. Mr. Thomas Sarsfield has been re-engaged for another term.

Mrs. G F Spencer, Mount Pleasant, and several others have been ill with an infection of the throat.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ray have recently had hydro installed. The lights were turned on Friday.

Mrs. R. B. Rendell spent a few days last week in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Jeffs and Jean were overnight guests Friday evening at the home of their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. George Jeffs, Toronto.

Mrs. Ernest Carr and baby daughter have arrived home from Belleville hospital.

Santa's Parade

Hundreds of Rawdonians attended "The Santa Claus" parade in Stirling on Saturday afternoon. The prizes to the public schools for the best floats were:

Wellman's Public School, teacher Miss Gladys Clarke, "It's in the Book"; Sine Public School, teacher Miss Adeline Bush, "Old Woman That Lived in a Shoe"; Wellman's Public School, teacher Mrs. Russell Fryer, "The Snowman."

The latter group trimmed their wagon with imitation snow, icicles and a real snowman with one of the pupils in the interior waving his hands to the crowd that lined the sidewalks. Clowns completed the scene.

Mr. Allan Tweedle, Campbellford, visited his cousin, Mr. Bert Sharpe, over the week-end.

Mount Pleasant Two-by-Two Club held their Christmas meeting at the church on Friday evening. Mr. Mac Sharp presided and all sang "Stilled Night." Mr. Harry McAdam read the Christmas Bible lesson, and Mrs. Ross a crokinole party on January 9, 1953.

The children provided the program and duets were given by Diane and David McAdam, Kelvin Sharp and Carol Sharpe, Gail and Paul Jeffs; recitation by Kenneth Smith and Allan Wrightman; readings by Ray Spencer and David Potts, and a piano solo by Eleanor Smith.

All sang "Jingle Bells," and Santa arrived and gave each child a bag of candy. There was an exchange of gifts among the adults and the club Sunday School class presented their teacher, Mrs. John Holmes, with a copy of the new revised edition of the Bible. The Y.P.U. was also invited to this meeting.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The Bay of Quinte Women's Institute held its December meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jermyn Palmer on Wednesday evening with a good attendance. A fine Christmas program was enjoyed, also an exchange of Christmas gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Jeffery, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keary, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Ketcheson, also Mr and Mrs. Alex Vandervoort, of Johnstown, called on Sunday on Mr. Ritchie Ketcheson in Kingston General Hospital.

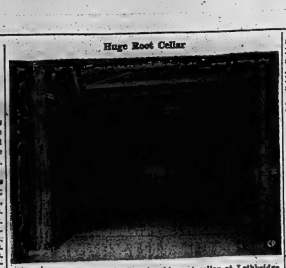
Mr and Mrs. Clayton Ritz, Carolyn, Kathryn and Arnold of Thurlow, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jeffery.

The children and grown-ups practised at Wall's Church on Thursday evening and Saturday afternoon for the annual Christmas entertainment which is to be held on Tuesday, December 23.

A number from this district attended the Bay of Quinte annual Milk Producers' meeting in Trenton on Wednesday and the banquet at Hotel Gilbert at noon.

Miss Audrey Bowers was a Saturday dinner guest of her friend, Miss Sylvia Bilham.

A large number from this district attended the Santa Claus parade on Saturday morning in Trenton and all voted the floats, clowns and good old Santa well-worth seeing. The children enjoyed the treats too.



Mr. and Mrs. George Bilham, Sylvia and Larry were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Hunter, of Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Vandervoort, of Johnstown and Mr. and Mrs. Selden Ketcheson of Belleville, were Sunday visitors of Mr. Ritchie Ketcheson, and Mrs. Ketcheson, in Kingston.

Messrs. Arnold Ketcheson, Frank Meyers, Douglas Reid, Cecil Jeffery and Ross Sickels were Monday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie Ketcheson in Kingston.

Church service at White's Church in charge of Rev. R. W. T. Middleton was held on Sunday evening. The choir rendered, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," as an anthem. Sunday School service was held in the morning with a good attendance.

Mrs. Leonard Young was a Wednesday dinner guest of Miss Mabel Brown.

Huge Root Cellar

Believed the biggest in Canada, this root cellar at Lethbridge, Alta., has a storage capacity of 200 train car-loads of vegetables. Storage for turnips and potatoes is in bins with 63-foot-long loading ways beside each. The root cellar is 225 feet long and 125 feet wide and can hold 70 semi-trailers at the same time, with the central driveway still left clear. — (CP Photo.)

Not Acting

The desperation of this unidentified woman is clearly indicated in her agonized face and gesturing arms. She pleaded for help from the window of a Los Angeles hotel being swept by fire. After this photo was taken, she put one foot out the window and contemplated jumping to the street, but was pulled back into the room by a rescuing policeman. — Central Press Canadian.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop t. the good ol his epetite, and some big went past in the back s it of a big red convertible holding a whole bunch of balloons on strings, and I said, Oh boy, that's the life.

Aren't you a little too big for toy balloons? pop said, and I said, Sure, for one balloon, but I wouldn't mind a bunch of 10. That's how many the kid had. I counted them, I said.

Counting them was better than holding them, because at least it exercised your branes, pop said. It's not healthy to go t' rough life holding balloons. The tertle spends its days slowly but industriously moving its house, and it lives 200 years, but the butterfly, tdly matching colors, just manages to live 2 to 3 days if it has a good sound heart. The boy riding around carrying balloons isn't nearly as lucky as the boy from the market riding around carrying groceries, he said, and I said, G, that's the kind of a boy I'd like o be.

I'm glad to hear it, pop said, and I said, Sure, I'd ride around on my own motorcycle 30 miles an hour pounding like the charge of the Lite Brigade, and people could hear me coming so I wouldn't have to ring their doorbells, and I'd have a big grate Dane dog running alongside of me for company, and I'd train him to set the groceries down on peoples frunt porches, so I'd never have to get off my motorcycle.

Yee gods, you win, pop said, and we kept on walking, me asking different questions and him answring about half, the most intriting one being where he would rather be if he was my age, unconscious in a comfortable hospitile of conscious in school.

Old-Fashioned Bean Suppers have been a tradition since Grandma's day...
SATURDAY NIGHT IS HEINZ NIGHT
Grandmothers are not an old-fashioned as they used to be, but many of them still have those old-fashioned bean suppers. They simply empty a can or two of Heinz Beans in a casserole, flip a switch, and in no time the family eats that regular old Saturday night treat. The oven-baking has been done for them by the Heinz chefs.
Of course, Saturday night is not the only Heinz night in the week. There are now five kinds of Heinz Oven-Baked Beans, two of Spaghetti and two of Macaroni. If there were nine days in the week, you could have one of Heinz thirty main course meals for lunch, dinner or late supper each day, and still get plenty of variety. Stock up for rushed meals during these busy shopping days.

MARMORA

C. W. League Reports Favorable Year

Marmora — The monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held on Monday evening at the Sacred Heart Parish hall. Opening prayer was offered by Rev. J. A. O'Neill and a minute's silence observed in memory of an old member, Mrs. Myrtle Crawford.

The regular devotional period followed. The president, Mrs. William Shannon, welcomed the large attendance and tendered seasonal wishes to the members.

Reports Given

The treasurer's report by Mrs. J. O'Neill, showed funds to be in good condition. The two social convenors, Mrs. J. H. English and Mrs. K. Donaldson, reported for Marmora and Deloro, respectively. Mrs. Rose Johnston, Missions' convener, also gave an interesting report. Mrs. L. F. Hughes had a favorable report on the recent canvass for the Catholic Register. Mesdames W. Meehan and G. Forestell as sick committee for the month, gave their report.

Mrs. Carl Heath presented two beautifully hand personally designed large Christmas cards for two sick members of the congregation.

Father O'Neill then addressed the meeting with general remarks, thanking members for their continued valued support in the past months. Mrs. G. Scanlon, followed with a pleasing short address.

Program

The program of the evening followed. Miss. Genevieve Shannon sang "Holy Night", with Mrs. R. Brady as accompanist; Mrs. J. Black gave of her elocutionary ability in her characterization "Painter of Seville"; next came a reading by Mrs. Carl Heath, entitled "Housewife's Revelation."

Christmas carols were then sung with Mrs. R. Brady presiding at the piano. A short humorous play, "Christmas Proposal", was put on by Miss Mary Hughes and Mrs. Charles Clemens. Mrs. Richard McGeary followed with a Christmas reading.

With the arrival of Santa gifts were distributed. All members enjoyed refreshments before returning to their homes.

DESERONTO

DESERONTO. — Mrs. S. Harvey entertained the members of the Ladies' Euchre Club at its regular meeting. Prize winners for the evening were, Mrs. C. M. Laffman; Mrs. Gerald Fox; consolation, Mrs. M. Ryan; travelling, Mrs. H. Bender.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

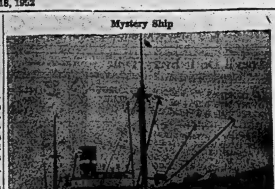
Mr. Thomas Brenton spent the week-end in Belleville.

Mr. Joe Laverture, and family, spent Sunday in Napanee, the guests of his daughter, and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Marven Sherman and family.

Mrs. Jack Sutbelz, of Belleville, was a recent visitor with her father, Mr. Bill Sager.

Mrs. Martha Marsch is spending a few days in Toronto.

Sunday callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ce Clare, were, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Valleau, of Kingston, and Mr and Mrs. Ward Valleau, of Gananoque.



Miss Estelle Burkett, of Belleville, was a caller in town on Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Anderson, of Weston, spent the week-end with the latter's mother, Mrs. J. E. Cole, who returned home with them for the winter months.

Mystery Ship

The Israeli freighter Abraham Graetz reaches port at Saint John, N.B., amid contradictory reports concerning her former skipper, Capt. Adam Graetz. The radio operator declared a report that Capt. Graetz held a pistol to his head and forced him to send messages to the Israeli government. Other ship's officers refused comment. Capt. Graetz left the vessel at sea. He transferred to a big and landed at Halifax, later going to Montreal. — (CP Photo.)

Mission Work Topic At Trinity Ladies Club

MADOC.—The December meeting of the Trinity Ladies' Club was held at the home of Mrs. Howse.

Mrs. Adams opened the meeting.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. K. Holmes.

Mrs. Drinkwalter reported on sick and visiting. Mrs. George Devolin thanked the ladies on Donna's behalf for the card received from the club while in the hospital.

There was a brief business discussion during which it was decided that some money be sent to help the children in Korea.

Thanks Expressed

Mrs. White thanked Mrs. Adams, on behalf of the ladies and herself for her fine official work as president for the past two years, mentioning how ably she had conducted her office in the club along with her choir work and Sunday School class.

Mrs. Adams had been in this country only a short time when she accepted the office and proved a capable president.

Mrs. Adams replied that she had enjoyed her work and thanked Mrs. White for her kind remarks and also for her assistance while in office.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Carman, who had charge of the Christmas program. Opening with three carols, "While Shepherds Watch Their Flocks", "Silent Night", and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing". Mrs. Burnside read the Scripture telling of the Christmas story.

Mrs. Carman read a touching story entitled, "Why The Chimes Rang."

Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Holmes favored with a lovely duet entitled "Loveliest Night".

Mrs. Empey introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Elliott, of Tweed.

Mrs. Elliott is 1st vice-president of the Belleville Presbyterial W.M.S. Her topic on mission work, was thoroughly enjoyed. She is deeply devoted to her work in that field.

Mrs. Carman thanked Mrs. Elliott after which the carol "The First Noel", was sung.

Mrs. Jackson thanked the hostess for her hospitality at the close of the meeting.

Rev. J. F. Lane installed the officers for the coming year, as follows:

President, Mrs. Harold Brintnell; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Geo. White; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Georga Devolin; secretary, Mrs. F. Brownson; pianist, Mrs. G. Murray; assistant pianist, Mrs. Hughes; Mrs. Arkell; treasurer, Mrs. D. Drinkwalter; sick and visiting, Mrs. K. Holmes.

Mr. Lane wished the officers every success and closed the meeting.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

UCKY?

The Senior Hawks probably finished with a seven-game winning streak just have relatives who own blacksmith shops. They pulled on their horseshoe connections to pull last night's game out of the fire in a third period that was a distinct departure to the skinny that both teams displayed in the first two chukkas.

We're going to be f bit brutal. It would not have done any harm to have seen Dame Fortune, or Lady Luck, toss their smiles in the other direction and give the Oshawa kids the nod. They deserved it.

That is, up until the third heat. Then Coach Barrett informed his yeomen they were not playing on the "bay" and for the invasion yet out there and show why you're on top of the loop heap.

They did. And they came up with a brand of hockey that they are capable of playing and pulled their seventh straight win out of the fire.

It just goes to prove that it doesn't pay to sell any team short in this loop, or any loop, for that matter. The Oshawa squad showed plenty of ability and after the time they get their rediforeseemis they should be a mighty potent factor in this junior "B" scramble.

Well, that wraps it up until the 19th., when the Hawks go to Peterborough.

* * *

GOOD STUFF!

Following Friday's and Saturday's battles between the Elems and Peterborough and Orillia and Kingston, the gladiators of the senior "B" ice-lanes will take a respite from hockey warfare until after the Yuletide celebrations, fiestas and hangovers have disappeared.

"Then," as Muskuky Jackson might put it, "we'll forget the social amenities, the fraternity of friends, the' blood collations and get down to series business.

And if pre-season performances in the group can be regarded as criterion, it is not trending on dangerous agronomquisitive grounds to predict that the type of hockey which should be produced after Old St. Nick and the New Year's cherub are memories, should go down in history as the best on record.

No one will deny that the brand of hockey produced in both junior and senior group of the district to date is far ahead of that dished up in early season activities of former years. There's a modification to that statement. Perhaps last year's junior "B" set-up when all squads were stronger may be the exception to the case.

The fact that senior "B" activities got under way two months before Christmas and well ahead of starting guns of other years has a lot to do with it. The teams at the moment are hitting a terrific pace, one that compares with the best playoff form of other years. And with the brand bound to improve as the pace grows hotter, and the race, as it inevitably will become closer, we feel definitely safe in predicting that this year's brand of senior "B" hockey will be the best ever offered a fastidious fandom.

And just to show the equalization of strength, during the past 22 games only four have been featured with margins over three goals. With the exception of the Kingston Goodyears 18-5 win over Orillia, Oshawa's 9-3 defeat of Stouffville, the last "heavy" score was the 10-4 setback of Peterborough by Oshawa on November 22nd. And previous to that only three games were at all "top-heavy", these being the first-game defeat of the Elems by Peterborough by a 9-3 score; the "revenging" game in which the Elems toppled the Petes 10-3 and the 9-4 victory of Oshawa over Kingston on November 7th. Kingston defeated the Elems 7-2 on November 14th. The rest have been one-two-goal margins with the schedule thus far featured by one tie game, that between Orillia and Stouffville which ended in a seven-all stalemate.

So it would appear that some nerve-shaking hockey is in store with the coming of the New Year. If our memory serves us correctly the playoff system agreed upon by all concerned was the first two teams of each division playing off with the winners meeting for the green fillie and a trip down the playdown trail. This means that two of the six squads face elimination. Kingston, Peterborough, and Stouffeville are in the eastern division, with Stouffville, Oshawa and Orillia making up the western half. At the moment the Petes and Orillia appear to be the weaker sisters of their respective groups, but nothing should be taken for granted.

The Petes after a shaky start are gradually acquiring strength and Orillia is not out of the race yet by a long shot. Anything can happen between now and playoff time.

Meanwhile the Petes and Elems wind up the 1952 part of the season here tomorrow night in what should be another senior "B" hotrace of hockey shenanigans. The winning laddies from Peterborough have seen victory snatched from their grasp a few times this summer and they won't be in any trifling mood tomorrow evening.

Blue Shirts Win First Game After Nine Staggering Starts; Hold Bruins in Fourth Spot

By CRAIG ARMSTRONG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York Rangers said goodbye Wednesday night to one of the most popular competitors ever to please Gotham hockey fans, and in the way he'would like it best.

The Blue Shirts won their first game in nine starts by blanking Boston 5-0 in the last game for Edgar Laprade before he leaves for home. And the popular 25-year-old centre, veteran of eight seasons of National Hockey League play, scored one Hagger goal.

Early in the season, when they were already well-established in the league cellar, the Rangers persuaded Edgar to come out of retirement to help the sagging club.

Edgar reluctantly agreed to the request of New York's affable manager, Frank Boucher, but soon as he explained, "how could you refuse a guy like that!" He planned to quit in time to spend Christmas with his family in Fort Arthur, where he runs a sporting goods store.

Big Help

Although New York still is at the bottom of the league, Laprade has been a big help in the 11 games he has played. He has filled in for injured Alex Kaleta as a penalty killer, and perhaps most important, he has helped keep the Rangers' morale up. His record for the 11 games is two goals and one assist.

The smallest New York crowd of the season, 3,500 persons, came to Rangers turn in their best performance. They kept fourth-place Boston from jumping into second place above Chicago and Montreal.

It was the first shutout of the season for goalie Chuck Rayner. He had 18 shots to stop, few of them difficult. It compared to 45 for Boston's Sugar Jim Henry.

A rookie brought in from Vancouver of the Western Hockey League, Ian Macintosh, made his NHL debut with the Rangers. He appeared nervous the first few times out but looked at home by the final period. He had a few good shots on goal but didn't click. He played on a line with Dean Prentice at left wing and Don Raleigh at centre.

Paul Ronty and Ed Slowinski, who scored his first goal of the season, put New York ahead 2-0 in the first period. After a scoreless second period, Wally Hergesheimer, New York's top goal-getter, assisted on three in the third session, Rookie Neil Strain notched a pair with Laprade scoring the other.

All six teams in the league play tonight. Fifth-place Toronto meets the league-leading Red Wings in Detroit; New York travels to Montreal and Boston meets the Black Hawks in Chicago.

Sport in Brief

DIETIKON, Switzerland (AP)—Neither Canada nor the United States will participate in the world hockey championships in Switzerland next March, an announcement of the International Ice Hockey Federation indicated today.

A letter from the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association "would like to enter a team if Switzerland, as host country, paid all travel and hotel expenses of the team."

This demand also is the crux of the Canadian situation. There has been no indication that Switzerland would be willing to meet these expenses.

TORONTO (CP)—There will be no harness racing at Dufferin Park from Dec. 20 until after Christmas Day. This will enable horsemen to spend the Christmas holidays with their families. The track will reopen for safety racing Dec. 26.

TORONTO (CP)—Real McCoy and Mickie Volo divided the junior free-for-all trot at Dufferin Park evenly Wednesday. They each won a heat and finished second to each other. Real McCoy is owned by B. Krumenacker of Pleasant Gap, Pa., and Mickie Volo by Lucien Dugre of Sherbrooke, Que.

LONDON (AP)—Randy Turpin abdicated as European lightheavyweight boxing champion Wednesday, apparently in hopes of meeting the way for a world middleweight bout with Commonwealth Sugar Ray Robinson. Robinson, the New York dandy who holds the world title, now is engaged in a night club act and may not fight again. The two have broken even in two previous title meetings. Turpin, however, still wears the British, Empire and European middleweight crowns.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—John W. Kane, Wilmington, Del., insurance company owner, told the Tampa Times Wednesday he has sold his controlling interest in the Tampa Park race track for $400,000 cash. He telephoned the Times from New York that he sold his interest to a syndicate he identified only as "L. and N." He said it is headed "by reputable people."

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Hugh Bolton, big defenseman who played a part of last season with the American Hockey League's Pittsburgh Hornets and finished out with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National League, rejoined the Hornets Wednesday night. Bolton had been ordered to report "on loan" to Providence of the AHL, two weeks ago. He refused to do so and remained at his Toronto home.

Four Arrested

INGERSOLL (CP)—A wild street brawl raged for half an hour near the main intersection here before it ended with the arrest of four Ingersoll brothers.

When calm was restored, provincial police laid these charges: Keith Bruce, 27, charged with driving while his ability was impaired; Gordon Bruce, 26, charged with assaulting a police officer; Harvey, 22, and Douglas Bruce, 20, charged with causing a disturbance.

The fight started when police investigated a three-vehicle accident on Thames Street.

Barons Sting Hornets 1-0; Increase Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons strengthened their hold on top spot in the American Hockey League by blanking the third-place defending champions, Pittsburgh Hornets 1-0 Wednesday night.

St. Louis routed the cellar-dwelling Buffalo Bisons 3-2 in overtime and moved into a fourth-place tie with the Syracuse Warriors. Buddy Boone scored all the Flyers' goals.

At Pittsburgh, Glen Sonmor's second-period goal gave the Barons their third victory in four games. It was goalie Johnny Bowers' fifth shutout of the season. He made 29 stops.

Vern Kaiser and Ken Davies scored for the Barons, who went ahead after two scoreless periods. Ed Stankiewicz, who had scored assists on each of Boone's first two goals, set him up for the winner in overtime.

Remember When

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa Roughriders were declared Dominion football champions 12 years ago today after defeating Toronto Balmy Beach 12-5 Dec. 7 to take a two-game, total-point series 20-7. The game was ruled a Dominion championship match when the Canadian Rugby Union denied the Western champions the right to challenge because they did not play under CRU rules during the regular season.

Senior 'A' League Race Tightens As Maroons Edge Stratford 5-4

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chatham Maroons aren't carrying any excess player weight these days and the streamlined form is paying off.

Coach Black Jack Stewart dropped three men from his roster Tuesday. Earl Towers and Paul Sirosen went into the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League player pool while Guy Celotto was farmed to Wallaceburg-Chatham Combines Junior B competition.

As replacements Coach Stewart signed Billy Cupolo, bought from Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen, and Paul Emms, formerly with Toledo of the International League. Emms made his name in Ontario playing hockey with Barrie Flyers of the OHA Junior A series under his dad, Coach Hap Emms.

Although Emms wasn't with them, the Maroons were impressive Wednesday night downing the league-leading Stratford Indians 5-4 in overtime.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group, Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians also gained an overtime win as they dropped their neighbors, Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds 4-3. Timmins-Schumacher Flyers of the Porcupine Mines senior league edged Abitibi Eskimos 3-1 to step back into second place.

Joe Carveth and George Edwards each accounted for two Chatham goals. Ernie Dick sank the other. Herve Dejordy, Jack White, Dinny Flanagan and George Aitken were Stratford marksmen.

In their first game under Roy Heximer after Coach Don Grosso was fired by the executive for "lack of confidence," the Greyhounds had poor luck. They scored three times in the first four minutes but failed to blink the light again.

Terry Biocchi, Hec Pozzo and Doug Towers scored for the losers. Johnny Lumley scored two for the Indians, Jimmy Farelli scored one and Vic Palladino knotched the winner.

Defenceman Claver Eckart gave the Flyers a 1-0 lead but Paul Godin tied it up for Abitibi in the second and Gil St. Pierre blasted the the winner from the blue line in the same period.

Sudbury Wolves visit the Greyhounds for the only NOHA game tonight while in OHA action Brantford Redmen visit Hamilton, who have lost 21 in a row.

Archie Moore Blasts Way To Clean-Cut Win Over Joey Maxim For Title

Gave Former Champ Lesson In Furious 1st Seven Rounds; Then Coasted to Easy Victory

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Archie Moore reached the rainbow's end Wednesday night as he smashed his way to a clear-cut 15-round decision over Joey Maxim that brought him the light-heavyweight boxing title.

The able, 36-year-old St. Louis Negro, successful in his first bid for the title that eluded him for years, promptly tossed a challenge to all comers:

"I'm going to put some life into the division. Any contender who deserves a chance will get it from me."

That was one of the first statements made by Moore after disposing of Maxim—a thoroughly beaten but astoundingly game ex-champion.

No Doubt

There wasn't much doubt about who would be wearing the crown at fight's end by the time the battle-tried fists of Moore had mauled Joey for seven rounds.

Moore, who weighed 172½ to Maxim's 174½, was an 8-to-5 favorite, with the odds shifting to 13 to 5 at fight time.

Judge Fred Connell gave it to Moore 77-67, and Judge Howard Hear saw it 82-68. Referee Harry Kessler also had it surprisingly close. Repeatedly warning Moore to keep his punches up, but penalizing him only when Kessler scored the fight 76-74.

The Associated Press press card had it 87-63 for Moore, giving the New champion 12 rounds, Maxim two and eight ends even. The fourth round was taken from Moore for a low blow.

The crowd of 12,615 fans that flocked to the Arena and paid a gross gate of $88,415 for St. Louis record also shouted approval of the decision. After the seventh Moore just went through the formality of fighting the prescribed 15 rounds.

The 30-year-old Maxim was hurt in every round after the seventh.

In the eighth Moore opened a set under Maxim's left eye. In the ninth blood spilled from a deep gash on Maxim's left cheek. He finished the 10th with a matching cut on the right cheek.

At the end Maxim was bloody but unbowed.

The fight was telecast across the country, with only the St. Louis area blacked out, and broadcast.

Maxim, who said "you don't defend your title for nothing," collected a $100,000 purse through a guarantee provision in the contract.

That, of course, leaves Moore little more than the title. But that, says Archie, is enough.

He'll give Maxim a rematch within 90 days, Maxim hopes. "This six-month layoff between fights gives me 160 much weight and I lose too much strength getting it off."

'Native Dancer' Two-Year-Old Nag Champion

BY JOHN CHANDLER

NEW YORK (AP)—Native Dancer is the undefeated two-year-old champion, but he's got to be one whale of a racehorse to earn more money in one year than Citation, which set the record with $709,470 in 1948.

Alfred Vanderbilt's grey juvenile star not only has to be mighty good, but he must remain sound and have a lot of racing luck.

Native Dancer, in winning nine races this year, earned $230,495, most ever stacked up by a two-year-old. Citation won eight of nine in his 1947 juvenile year, and $152,-320.

Trainer Bill Winfrey has Native Dancer in California, taking it easy with others in the Vanderbilt stable. Native Dancer probably won't begin his three-year-old campaign until April in New York. He wasn't nominated for the $100,000 Santa Anita Derby.

In Citation's biggest year, as a three-year-old, Ben Jones and son Jimmy of the Calumet farm visited their star at Hialeah Pork Pck. 2. Citation raced six times before heading into Kentucky and the Derby.

He starred, in those six races, $84,225, including victories in the Flamingo and Chesapeake Stakes.

Guessing that Native Dancer's schedule calls for the $25,000 Experimental Handicap and the $100,000 Wood Memorial at Jamaica before the Derby, the Vanderbilt colt could go into the Louisville classic on about even terms with Citation in the bankroll battle.

But Citation won 19 of 20 races in 1948 and in all-time winnings, is tops with $1,085,760.

Americans Take Two-Game Lead Over Italians

By GAYLE TALBOT

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The United States Davis Cup tennis team took a 2-0 lead over the Italians in the interzone final at White C'ty today, but it showed nothing which might lead to complacency.

Ch.ain Vic Seixas, beefy off his game, barely escaped defeat at the hands of the young Italian star, Fausto Gardini, before pulling out an exciting five-setter 5-7, 3-6, 6-3, 8-6, 6-3.

Tony Trabert followed with a convincing 6-3, 6-1, 6-3 victory over round Gianni Cucelli, but there's no particular cheering in sight replacing the veteran Cucelli these days. He's eaten himself out of the top flight.

The Australians felt much better about the challenge round in Adelaide after watching Seixas stumble through the first two sets and still bombard his 23 year old rival in the fourth set.

It was difficult to conceive that Seixas knocked Frank Sedgman, Australian ace, off the court less than two years ago.

Gardini was a far different performer from the nervous youngster who fumbled around against India in last week's interzone semi-final. Gardini played with a deadly inflamed eye which made his game stand all the more remarkable. He got something in his eye while warming up.

It was more or less taken for granted that Seixas and Trabert would clinch victory by defeating Cucelli and Marcello de Bello in tomorrow's doubles.

At the start Seixas apparently believed what he had heard about Gardini's poor play and thought he could trim the youngster merely by knocking the ball back at him. He quickly learned better.

Although he won the third set handily as the Italian relaxed the pressure it wasn't actually until he trailed 2-5 in the fourth and appeared to face certain defeat that Seixas lifted his game.

White Sox Leads League In Fielding

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago White Sox were the team fielding leaders during 1952 but seven clubs shared individual honors, official American League statistics disclosed today.

The White Sox, who made 122 errors, the least in the circuit, compiled a .980 average. The world champion New York Yankees were next at .979 followed by Washington with .978. The Yankees made the most double plays, 199.

In the individual races, First baseman Mickey Vernon of Washington and outfielder Gene Woodling of New York were the only ones to repeat. The veteran Senator made only 10 errors in 1,416 chances for a .993 average and Woodling made only one miscue out of 324 for .997.

Others on the league's honor list were: Nelson Fox, Chicago, second base, .980; Vic Wertz, Detroit, first base, .971; Johnny Lipon, Detroit-Boston, shortstop, .981; Clint Courtney, St. Louis, catcher, .996 and Bobby Shantz, Philadelphia, pitcher, 1.000.

Shantz handled 78 chances without an error.

CHURCH RESTORED

DOVER, England (CP) — The "Hellfire Corner" church at St. Margaret's Bay near here has been restored. The church, damaged by cross-channel shelling in 1940, will be retained as a reminder of the ordeal endured by the village in the Second World War.

The Hawks Had Horseshoes In That Jr. Tilt Last Night; Third-Period Rally Nets Win

By JOHN GOODFELLOW

Belleville Black Hawks last night defeated Oshawa Bees 4-2 in a junior "B" game played at the Memorial Arena. That was the score, but it wasn't the story. The Hawks, by the win, maintained their lead in the Central Ontario six-team loop.

Whether it was the heady champagne of ice that they had been getting from recent classy performances, or smugness, even Belleville coach Don Barrett didn't know; as he tried to evaluate his team's effort after the Wednesday near-catastrophe. He did know that he was pleased that they collectively got up off the floor to tuck it away. He also felt that his charges had learned fast when you sell a guy short, he's liable to clip you a short one on the jaw.

Johnny Lowe, a hard-working Oshawa rearguard, got that one back five minutes later, taking a pass from Pat McDonald to beat Barclay and it was 1-1.

Couldn't Score

Neither team counted in the second period. Davey Jones, Doug Hull and Fred Perlini were all over Chirka's front yard but couldn't score.

The Oshawans showed they weren't making the trip for the scenery shortly after the third period opened. Johnny Lowe took a relay from Dody Woodinsky and slapped the puck back of Barclay to send the visitors out in front, 2-1.

The Hawks proved in a hurry that they could be looked in the eye and stare back. Gilmour and Jones both had great chances and failed to click. Then Jerry Goyer who seemed to be carrying the team all night, caught fire. Picking up a loose puck from about 20 feet in front of the Oshawa cage, he drifted home a shot and the Hawks were back in the ball game.

Barclay Good

The Hawks still needed something. Don Barclay had to do the splits to rob Bob Bonsham from close in, then race 30 feet out to take the puck off Pat McDonald's stick when that Oshawa pivot man was in the clear.

At this point Hammarin' Hank Therrien, deciding to cut in on the melon. Picking up a pass from Archie Stocco at his own blueline, he sailed in on Mr. Clarks and put the Hawks ahead, 3-2. Last time out, he dig the carlocs. This time it was strictly from rhubarb.

Davy Jones, who doesn't have many bad games, saved himself from having a mediocre one by scoring the clincher just before the finish. Gilmour and Therrien did the spade work on the play.

For the winners, oddly enough, Goyer was not the star. Barclay got the score sheet. That was Doug Hull and he was flying all night. Goyer was a lot of hockey player. Paramulk and Perlini could rate in the same category as usual Barclay was Horatius at the bridge.

For the visitors, Pat McDonald was a standout, if not the best man on the ice. Chirka played a fine game, as did Lawrence and Plontek.

The teams:

Oshawa: Goal Chirka; defence, Grant and Chamberlain; centre, McDonald; wing, Lawrence and Woodinsky. Alternates: Lowe, Davis, Boneham, Myles, Plontek and Woodcock.

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Green and Stocco; centre, Jones; wings, Gilmour and Therrien. Alternates: Goyer, Paramulk, Perlini, Jacklin, Hull, Hermiston and Casey.

Referee: Jim Crombie, Bowmanville. Linesman, Tim Williams, Belleville.

East-West Moguls Plan Dominion Bowl Tourney

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Bowling Association is promoting an annual East-West five-pin bowling championship in which every one of Canada's thousands of bowlers could compete.

President Charles Hill of Toronto, here, declared in an interview Wednesday that bowling associations everywhere are favorable to the idea.

The big obstacle to an East-West competition is the different scoring systems in use in the East and West. Before the all-Canada championship can become a reality the two factions must agree on a uniform scoring system.

The situation is reminiscent of the Canada Cup golf event ago. Both methods have been in use a long time, both have certain merits and both are popular with their respective followers.

Hill said bowling officials in Western Canada were receptive to a revised system incorporating the best points of the current ones. He said action may be forthcoming next spring.

The West started to adopt a different scoring system in 1930. For three years prior to that the CBA rules still were in use East applied to Western leagues. Today all-events from the Lakehead to the Pacific coast use Western rules.

The chief variation is the scoring of points placed on the pins. In Eastern Canada, the headpin or centre pin is worth one point; in the West, five. The kingpin or counting pin in the left corner is worth one point in the West and four in the East.

West: 1-4-5-3-2
East: 4-5-1-3-2
Revised: 1-4-5-4-1
Revised. 2-3-5-2-2

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Lawrence H. Bolton, Q.C., of Dorchester district was freed Wednesday of a man's daughter charge arising from the traffic death of Mrs. Jean Britton on Hamilton road Nov. 22. A charge of dangerous driving was withdrawn.

Julius Boros Crowned 1952 Golf Champion

CHICAGO (AP)—Julius Boros, golf's cinderella man, Wednesday officially was crowned 1952 money-winning champion and sharp-shooting Jack Burke, Jr., certified as Vardon Trophy winner for the best scoring average.

Final Professional Golfers Association tabulation of cash-collecting along the tournament trail credited Boros with $57,032 against a paltry $4,697 in 1951 when he finished 34th money-winner in his first full year of pro tournament play.

Boros, from Mid Pines, N.C., finished ahead of runner-up Cary Middlecoff, who earned $30,884.

Burke, whose 70 54 stroke average for 72 rounds won the coveted Vardon award, was third in money-winning with $22,033. The handsome pro from Houston, Tex., also leads in Byrder Cup points as of Dec. 12 with 319 7-12, about 17 ahead of Sammy Sneed's 302 2-3.

Sneed was fourth in earnings with $19,908.

Germans Resume Sport Relations With 'Curtain'

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—German sportsmen have stepped a hole in the Iron Curtain and agree to resume competition between the Soviet zone and West Germany.

Relations were broken off last September because Eastern authorities refused to guarantee sports contests with West Germans would not be used for political purposes.

Last week-end sports officials from both sections got together and after long negotiations issued a statement saying:

"Sports relations will be resumed. All international sports meets will be held in the true Olympic spirit. There will be no political speeches at the contests. No political banners or slogans will be displayed."

Spend Christmas In Jail Rather Than Pay Fine

COVENTRY, England (AP) — Dereck Jack Pickering is a man of principle — he is going to spend Christmas in jail rather than pay a £2 parking fine.

The 47-year-old motorcycle salesman received a ticket for parking his car — and he's done it for 13 years — outside his home without light. He thinks police warning would have been in order, especially since he lives on a dead-end street.

"Someone would pay up, but not me," he said. "It's a matter of principle. I'd sooner go to the cooler."

He must pay by next Tuesday or face 21 days. Monday he and his wife, who supports his crusade, plan a pre-jail Christmas party for friends and will invite the chief constable of Coventry.

The determined Pickering is no novice in principle. Twenty-five years ago he refused to pay a £5 fine for a motoring offence and went to jail for two months.

Tessier Trade Brings Laurels To Barrie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hard work and travel combined seem to agree with Orv Tessier of the Barrie Flyers.

Tessier arrived in Barrie only last week as part of a deal which brought him and goalie Bill Harrington from Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts in exchange for three players and a bundle of cash.

News of the trade caused manager Staff Smythe of the Toronto Marlboros, current league-leaders in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, to send bellows of rage echoing through Maple Leaf Gardens.

The reason for Smythe's concern is becoming apparent. Barrie hasn't lost a game with Harrington in the nets and Tessier has scored eight goals in the last three games.

Bees Blank Bees

Barrie downed the Memorial Cup champion Oshawa Biltmores 5-4 Wednesday night. Tessier notched three markers for the winners.

Marlboros paced the second-place Flyers by downing Toronto St. Michael's 6-1 to maintain their six-point lead. The Irish gave the high-flying Dukes little trouble.

While Ontario games ran according to the book, there was an upset in Quebec. The third-place Three Rivers Reds bounced the first-place Montreal Canadiens 6-3 on Three Rivers ice and hardly raised a sweat in the process.

Tony Poeta scored three for Barrie. Doug Mohns, Jim Robertson and Bob White tallied singles. Jimmy Connelly notched two for the Bills and Chuck Henderson and Johnny Gillis scored the others.

The Marlboro scoring was evenly spread as Dave Reid, Charlie Burns, Eric Westerman, Louis Bendo, Wally Maxwell and Jerry James each scored one. Bill Lee deprived John Henderson of a shutout.

Jean Leclerc and Ray St. Cyr each scored two as the Three Rivers coasted to a comparatively easy win. Others were by Jean-Guy Gendron and Michelin. Phil Goyette, Guy Rousseau and Les Lilley split Montreal's scoring.

There is one junior game tonight as Oshawa Generals make their second start of an interlocking schedule tour against Quebec Citadelles.

CRUISER VOYAGE ENDS

VICTORIA (CP)—The 316-month cruise of HMCS Ontario which ended here Wednesday was a "tremendous success from the standpoint of good will," Capt. E. H. Tisdall, her commanding officer, reported. The 9,000-ton cruiser circumnavigated South America on this voyage intended to improve Canadian relations with the four principal countries of that continent. Ontario will carry with her Canadian ambassadors," said Capt. Tisdall.

Bobo Olsen Flattens Sala

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Fans may well be watching the next middleweight champion of the world when Cari (Bobo) Olson of Honolulu bones Norman Hayes of Boston in a 10-rounder here tonight.

Olson strengthened his position as No. 1 challenger by flattening high-ranked Lee Sala of Pittsburgh in two rounds here a month ago. Last year, he lost a close 15-round decision to champion Sugar Ray Robinson, who is reported about ready to retire.

Olson, 24, is punching harder than ever. He has been installed a 7 to 10 favorite. Hayes, 21-year-old Negro, scored a three-round upset knockout over stiff punching Joey De John last month.

10-Country Study Sees Limit To Aid for Europe

WASHINGTON (AP)—Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer is back from a 10-country study in Europe, Wednesday criticized business agencies for talking about "confusion and wasted effort . . . too many people doing too many things in Western Europe."

The time has come, Sawyer said in a report to President Truman, to take the emphasis off foreign economic aid and place it on trade, within the free-world of long-term economic thinking he said Europeans agree.

Sawyer reported there has been tremendous recovery in countries aided by the United States, and Europe can go on to prosperity if it keeps faith in itself.

The U.S. must avoid dictating or even guiding European policies on trade matters, he said, but should stand by "to give the encouragement which comes from having an understanding and helpful friend at hand."

He added emphatically that nothing the U.S. does to help Europe, such as cutting tariffs, could undermine the American economy because "a prosperous America is necessary not only for us but for the rest of the free world . . ."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Khibitzer

You enter deep stuff when you come into second round defence bids. But there is no need to let it get over your head. Use some guide that tells you how safe it is for you to go on.

The bidding has gone this far:

West	North	East	South
1 D	Dbl	Pass	1 H
2 D

When south opened the bidding with a diamond he did not show all that he had. So, there was no doubt at all that his rebid of diamonds cannot be questioned. Even with a pass by east.

But you have the north hand in this deal:

NORTH
♠Q 7 6 5 4
♥K 2
♦Q 6 2
♣A

WEST	EAST
♠A J 9 3	♠10 8 3
♥J 10 9 8 7	♥5 4
♦K 5	♦Q 10 9 7 2
♣K 8	♣10 2

SOUTH
♠K
♥10 7 6 5
♦3
♣9 7 6 5 4 3

What is your next bid, if any? Your double was for takeout. It forced your south partner to bid something — and he passed. Therefore, south may have a weak hand with four weak hearts.

Despite this possible weakness in south you should not bid three hearts; a jump in your second biddable suit. The meaning of it can be figured out by backtracking over the details you know.

Until heard from, a partner is assumed to have two tricks. If forced to bid he is still assumed to have two tricks. On this basis does a responding pair decide their future action.

The one heart response by your partner was forced. He may have no trick, but he has two tricks, three tricks, or four tricks. But until you know more, assume he has two.

If he has the two you assume, your eight will be enough for a try at game. So, your bid here is a jump to three hearts. You have every right to believe that partner knows of his two trick need.

With less than two, he may pass. With two or more he should go on. Simply a matter of simple mathematics.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Film producers who are working themselves into an early grave have decided the example of Albert E. Smith. He retired from movie-making 27 years ago and has been having a wonderful time ever since.

White-haired and peppery at 77, Smith is one of the remaining members of that band of breed of immigrant boys who struck it rich in the U.S.

It's a good idea not to ask him when he got into the movie business. He'll only say, "I don't want any movie business when I started making movies."

That was in 1896. Smith had come to Chicago from his native England in 1888 at the age of 13. He became interested in show business and hooked up with Stuart Blackton in a Lyceum circuit that sent out lecturers and entertainers.

They were attracted by Thomas Edison's new motion picture gadget. With Blackton as the artist and Smith as the mechanical mind, they formed the Vitagraph Company. It became one of the biggest names in the movie business.

In 1925, Smith sold Vitagraph to Warner Brothers and retired at the age of 50. Why did he sell out?

"The company was not doing well," he replied. "It was a enterprise with 20 offices in this country, 30 in England and others all over the world. All the worries was on my shoulders.

"Also, I had a consultation with several doctors, including one I had grown up with. He said if I quit work I might live as long as my father, who died at 96. But if I didn't, he wouldn't be responsible. I had been working since I was 11, so I decided to stop and enjoy life."

Unlike many men who have led strenuous lives, Smith had no trouble adjusting to retirement. The sale left him well-fixed.

"I've never been bored," he commented. "I've got so many hobbies that I don't have the time for all of them."

He remained out of the limelight until 1948, when the Motion Picture Academy honored him for his pioneer work in the industry.

Brig. Connelly, Calgary, Retired By Government

OTTAWA (CP)—The government said Wednesday night Brig. A. B. Connelly of Calgary was retired by the Army in the interests both of the public and the Army.

Acting Defence Minister Campney, reading a statement prepared by Defence Minister Claxton, said the retirement of the 44-year-old former head of Canada's military mission in Tokyo was recommended by Lt.-Gen G. G. Simonds, chief of the general staff. It was "purely a military matter."

Mr. Campney did not say why Brig. Connelly was retired other than that Gen. Simonds had recommended it and that Mr. Claxton, after discussing it with the general staff, agreed.

The statement was a reply to opposition charges that the brigadier, retired 14 years early, was fired as a scapegoat to cover up government embarrassment over a backfiring protest to Washington about dispatch of Canadian troops to guard Communist prisoners on Korea's Koje Island.

The Progressive Conservatives said they believe Brig. Connelly's one mistake in a brilliant career was writing instead of cabling the information that the use of the Canadians was under consideration in Tokyo.

Mr. Campney quoted Mr. Claxton, now overseas, as saying such matters as the retirement of officers are a confidential matter between himself and the head of the particular service. This was purely a military matter.

Gives Final Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. agriculture department, in its final report of the year Wednesday, estimated this year's corn crop at 3,306,735,000 bushels and the wheat crop at 1,291,447,000 bushels.

This is 3,850,000 bushels more than the 3,302,875,000 forecast for corn a month ago. It also is 7,470,000 bushels less than the 1,298,921,000 forecast for wheat last month.

The corn figure compares with a revised production report of 2,-880,180,000 bushels harvested last year and with 3,011,852,000 for the 10-year (1941-1950) average. The wheat estimate compares with a revised 1951 figure of 980,510,000 bushels and the 10-year average of 1,084,668,000.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 19, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Friendly day for most part, especially for artistic professions, domestic affairs, delicate matters. Money transactions ask special caution, checking.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Your Venus and the Moon augur for a happy, successful period if you are careful in finances, other investments.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Very encouraging for you, too, with Mercury also in splendid aspect. Finesse, artistry, good workmanship boosted. Aim first to finish urgent items.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Have hopes, purposeful ambition for this Friday. Personal achievement favored and you should be able to add to previous gains, benefits, increase advantages.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Your planet the Sun oil in tendency but rays are helpful for all endeavor if you manage your affairs skillfully, at least thoughtfully. Have care in expenditures.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo) — Professional fields, journalists, authors, secretaries, bookkeepers, physicians, chemists among top honored this splendid planetary day. Aim high.

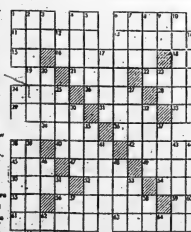
September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Similar indications as Taurus now. Don't be extravagant with energies nor careless in investments. With sensible handling of schedule you can gain.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—No delay getting started this fine day! An evenly allocated program, plus concentrated effort, will give you sound returns.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Your Jupiter position stresses need for patience and extra care in personal conduct, management of transactions. But day is benefic, on whole.

December 22 to January 21 (Capricorn) — More favorable where skill is used. Day especially favors debtors, cleverness, in thought, no matter your tasks.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Bright prospects for you who will attend important matters first, and not be sidetracked by pointless little things or non-useful details.



February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Similar to Aquarius (Sagittarius) — Your Jupiter aspect favors cautious, thoughtful, conservative handling. Be ambitious, cheerful. You can either finish incompleted matters or start new undertakings; perhaps both, depending upon your schedule.

YOU BORN TODAY: Direct, cheerful, enterprising, very intuitive and are reasonable, intelligent kindly, religious. Inclined to be too impatient with those who are undetermined. Could succeed in profession or trade. Don't overdo in anything. Care needed for health. Birthdate: Albert A. Michelson, noted scientist; Edw. M. Stanton, statesman.

Nootka Returns Home After Second Tour

HALIFAX (CP) — The destroyer Nootka came home from her second tour of Korean duty Wednesday with her skipper, Cmdr. Richard Steele, of Rothesay, N.B., said most of the more exciting exploits are still cloaked in naval secrecy.

The two harbor entries and a tug, the only craft active in the harbor at the time, gave the warship an overhead gave a welcome as the destroyer steamed into port. She had been on a reserve fleet and an overhaul.

The Nootka sailed from Halifax December 30 last year, came home by way of the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean, more than 400 miles shorter than the route via the Panama Canal.

The destroyer sailed 48,700 miles in Korean waters during the tour and sent 6,000 rounds of ammunition into enemy targets. On 17 occasions she fought and silenced batteries of guns and on 20 other occasions she countered attacked gun which were firing at Chosan, on the United Nations east coast.

Both destroyers were caught close to shore and subjected to heavy enemy fire but escaped damage in a hasty retreat.

Plan Backfires

TORONTO (CP) — When Toronto's board of control approved a plan in early 1951 for the government property, it expected the province would pay $150,000 from the Ontario government. But the plan backfired Wednesday.

Suburban Scarborough township decided it would not buy or sells through Scarborough mains and the Toronto-owned R. L. Harris water purification plant just inside township boundaries, was refused a hearing and permitted a bill for $161,381 in taxes.

The city decided it had to pay the bill—under protest. It still isn't sure it will collect the $750,000 from the province.

FORTUNE IN HOUSE?

TORONTO (CP)—Reports that a woman killed in a traffic accident Tuesday night had between $10,000 and $50,000 hidden in her tiny home have led to the placing of a "round-the-clock police guard at the dwelling in suburban Lakeview. Mrs. Julia Curnew, 63, was fatally injured when struck by a car. Reports got around that the woman a recluse, had a huge amount of cash hidden in her cottage. Neighbors said she lived frugally and didn't believe in banks.

BUILD BAILEY BRIDGE

TORONTO (CP)—A walk-out on a road crusader's job in a Toronto nursery, Oronto, provided army engineers with some bridge-building practice recently. Floods had taken out a portion of the approach to the dam and attached bridge on this road which crosses lands and forests department property at Oronto, 30 miles east of Toronto. The engineers from Toronto and Hamilton erected a Bailey bridge to restore local traffic.

Kennel Club Starts Drive To End Shooting War

OSHAWA (CP) — Ontario County Kennel Club Wednesday night launched a drive to end this city's shooting war on dogs.

Branches of the club across the country will be asked to help in protesting what it terms extreme cruelty to animals.

Club members were told that city council, in spite of a by-law prohibiting the firing of weapons within city limits, had authorized farmers to shoot dogs that are seen running with herds. The action was taken after a farmer claimed dogs had killed a cow and a sheep on his land.

No Over-Production

TORONTO (CP) — The director of the Ontario hog marketing board said Wednesday he does not think producers need to be too concerned about the threat of over-production.

Clayton Perry of Sarnia told the Elgin Hog Producers' Association that the Canadian appetite for pork has increased since the Second World War and Canadians are consuming about 900,000,000 pounds a year.

He said the producers' chief concern is to produce at costs which would enable them to stay solvent at the depressed price of pork.

Driver Also Smokes

OAKVILLE (CP) — Members of the high school board in this town midway between Toronto and Hamilton have all heated up — but it's the pupils that are smoking.

Board officials complained to the high school students smoking on the school bus. The principal ordered the bus driver to put off any student who smoked.

Christmas Concert

ALLIANCE TABERNACLE

Tall evergreens, aglow with gleaming colored spheres; the Nativity scene in color, life size; and above, the huge Christmas star shedding its warm light below, formed an appropriate and lovely background for the second Sunday School program, at the Christian and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle.

Following the processional, "O Come All Ye Faithful", during which the various classes took their places on the platform, Eric Strain, pastor of the church, gave the invocation, and the superintendent, Mr. Gordon Brown, extended a cordial welcome to the fine assembly of parents, friends and guests.

Flannelgraph Portrayal

The program, one of the finest given by the Sunday School, consisted of two parts: the first portrayed by choruses by the school, sings by classes, and pupils, recitations and flannelgraph, the second, an exceptionally lovely flannelgraph portrayal of the Nativity, including the events leading up to, and following it. Miss Ruth Strain, Miss Wilson, leader of Child Evangelism, in Kingston, who included the spiritual aspects in her impressive narrative as she carried her audience from scene to scene.

Among the several numbers on the program, those that held the audience most, were the songs, the recitations of the tiny tots, who, with their sweet simplicity, touched all hearts.

Prize Distributed

Following the program, the distribution of prizes for perfect attendance; for those missing but one Sunday and for those missing two Sundays, because of illness, were presented by the secretary, Mrs. Lorne Savage, in the following: Perfect attendance: Eleanor Mitchell, Verne Millard, Catherine Millard, Paul Masse, Paul Brown and Raymond Masse. Absent one Sunday: Carol Brown and Mary Whitaker. Absent two Sundays: Murray Dixon, Lenore Dixon, Joyce Ketcheson, Rev. Ketcheson, Randall Wickett, Billie Wickett and David Senn.

Fine Program

The program was composed of the following numbers: Opening recitation, Joan Kirton, "An Important Announcement"; "Welcome", Peter Kelly; recitation, Heather Hawley, "Hello Everybody"; recitation, Gail and Gwen Ward, "Twin Wishes"; Beginners' class song, "The Baby King"; recitation, Sharon Kirkpatrick, "Happy Birthday", and "Happy Birthday Song" by the class; solo, Ruth Dixon, impromptu, "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan"; solo, Dennis Savage, "To a Little Town"; recitation, Bruce Christopher, "Light a Life"; recitation, Sandra Wright, "A Gift to Give"; skit, Mrs. Embury's class (primary girls).

Solo, Eleanor Millard, "No One Else But Jesus"; recitation, Verne Millard, "The Bedtime Story"; beginners' class song, "Angels Sang the Story"; recitation, Billy Irwin, "Christmas Arithmetic"; solo, Carol Brown, "Tell the Old Sweet Story"; recitation, "Gifts for Jesus"; Michael Strain; primary girls' class song, "Jesus We Love Thee"; skit, primary boys, class, "Christmas"; solo, Dwight Strain, "All Hallelujah"; recitation, Billy Whitley, "Recipe for Christmas"; primary boys' class song, "Christmas Day".

Recitation, Lenore Dixon "Christmas Wondering"; solo, Paul Brown, "Wonderful Night"; skit, intermediate girls (J. Hollin), "In Days Long Ago"; carol, "Angels from the Realms of Glory"; intermediate boys' class song, (E. Hawley), "The Beautiful Hills of Judea"; recitation, Linda Wright, "His Name at the Top"; skit, intermediate boys, "Lights All Over the World"; intermediate girls class song, "Safely Sleep Little Babe."

Miss Grace Valey presided at the piano for the program, and during the offertory favored with a lovely rendition of "Christmas Eve"—a medley of Christmas carols.

The flannelgraph messages, and "Closing Wish" by Murray Dixon, was followed by the carol "O Little Town of Bethlehem" which brought the evening to a close.

Steam Engine Used

When the steam generator at a central Toronto dairy broke down Wednesday it appeared as if the plant would have to close.

However a telephone call brought a locomotive to the plant siding. With an engineer and a fireman keeping up a full steam, pasteurization and other processes went on as usual.

Shirley Temple Takes Daughter From School

WASHINGTON (AP)—Shirley Temple angrily withdrew her daughter from a private school Wednesday, saying it had tried to "communicate on the child's performance in a Christmas play."

What irked her mother, now Mrs. Charles Black, was a newspaper story that this was Susan's stage debut and that she would repeat her performance tonight at the American University gymnasium. Shirley said she had been told the Thursday show would be a benefit, with admissions charged.

Susan is just one year older than her mother was when she began her famous career as a child star. She is the daughter of John Agar, Shirley's first husband.

15 Convicted On Two Counts In Visa Rings

DETROIT (CP)—The first of 18 United States immigrants who pleaded innocent to charges laid following investigation last summer of a visa ring operating in nearby Windsor, Ont., was convicted Wednesday on two counts. He will be sentenced later.

Joseph Maria Grech, 41, a native of Malta, was convicted of presenting false documents to obtain a visa and of using a visa he knew to be fraudulently obtained to enter the U.S. from Canada.

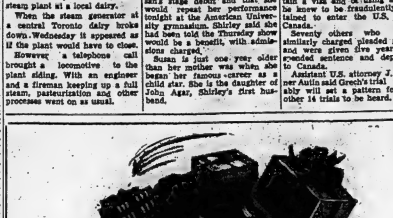
Seventy others who were similarly charged pleaded guilty and were given five years suspended sentence and deported to Canada.

Assistant U.S. attorney J. Conner Autlin said Grech's trial probably will set a pattern for the other 14 trials to be heard.

Young Americans Must Serve In French Army

PARIS (Reuters)—The French National Assembly Wednesday night passed a law requiring young Americans living in France for a year or more to serve in the French Army for 18 months.

The law, described by one deputy as a "measure of retaliation," was passed without discussion by an overwhelming show of hands.



The law calls for conscription of foreigners between 18½ and 25 years old who come from a country which drafts Frenchmen residing there. This means that the law will apply to Americans, for the United States government ruled June 19, 1951, that foreigners staying in America for a year or more would be liable for military service, including overseas duty, in the U. S. Army.

Jean Triboulet, secretary of the assembly's defence commission, said the law is "the worst kind of retaliation." But it had to be passed; he said, because negotiations with the U. S. government over drafting of Frenchmen had failed.

CYANIDE THREAT

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—A railway carload of cyanide overturned here Tuesday night and threatened the lives of several hundred persons. Chemists from the North American Cyanamid Company said the gas released by the cyanide would bring instant death. Police cordoned the area and no one was affected.

Harry Meldrum Moore

"I'll try," Curly laughed, — "McKendry slipped on that, but you didn't score, and he was put out of the game."

"All correct, Curly, but for one thing. McKendry's brother was referee." He stopped and pointed at Curly's nose. "I see you've been around a bit yourself."

"A little."

"And you flattened the man who broke your nose?"

"On the contrary, Percy," Curly said, "I didn't know at the time it was broken. It happened in Boston, Mass. I was fighting Tiger Smith, New England heavyweight champion. I had him down for an eight count in the second, for a nine count in the seventh, and believing that I was well out in front on points, I started to coast. But, mates of mine, I saw nothing but Smith."

"Some town stuff" Percy observed, "and your son, Peter? I presume you've been teaching him a few tricks?"

"Yes, to my sorrow, Curly said. "I wish I hadn't. He's a quick to learn. Just before the summer holidays, Mr. Blackwood the eye of a much older, stronger boy and was expelled from school. And he hasn't gone back, even though the suspension has been lifted."

"You mean to say that Peter is out of school—at his age?"

"Yes, but that's not the way I want it. I would like to see him finish up at Bellerose, then proceed to become a doctor. But, do you know what happened? He said he didn't think that a father should compel his son to be something he didn't want to be."

"The lad has a mind of his own, hasn't he?"

"Yes, but far beyond his years. I wish you'd take him in hand and see what you can do with him."

"I'll do my best, Reeve Brown," Percy Wren said.

On Friday evening of that same week, the united townships council composed of Reeve Curly Brown and Councillors William Brown, Peter Dawson, George Riley and George Elliott, met in the township hall for its inaugural meeting.

Since the inaugural meeting of council was not one whit less important than the annual nominating meeting, all the officials and many of the ratepayers were in attendance that night. Jack Halder was also present to represent his newspaper.

In his address Reeve Brown didn't make statements which might be misconstrued later. He kept to facts. At the outset, he made it plain that he did not consider the vote he had received in the recent election sufficiently conclusive to warrant a raise in the tax rate, so the rate would stand as it was. He would be attending county council later in the month and he would be asking for a more substantial grant for road improvements for the township. And he left it at that.

He was going to county council for other concessions, too, but he was not going to make public at this time the nature of his demands. However, statute labor must go, so the clerk must advertise for a road foreman and council set a rate of pay for men and for teams, "Contrasts" and he said from then on he would crack the whip if necessary —were the building of the jail and the return to the residents of the Depot and district the money they had raised for sidewalks. After all, it was high time that the villagers were getting something in return for taxes paid into the township, and he was here to say that the villagers would be re-imbursed whether the other parts of the township liked it or not.

"But Curly's keen interest in council matters didn't deter the fact that he had a business to look after. And there were times when his business needed him. For instance, he would never understand why so many of the villagers would see their woodpiles go down to the very last stick before ordering another supply. Nor why they asked him to do things in winter that could be done so much easier in summer. Winter was so trying. Winter brought snow storms and snow storms meant plowing, took a lot of time and was hard on his horses.

In his preparations to invade Bellevue and county council at the end of the month, Curly sat down and studied farm papers chiefly the Municipal World which was and still is, the bible of municipal matters. And since he would be in Bellevue for the better part of a week, he hired Harry Foster, one of the Foster brothers, to look after his business during his absence.

Meanwhile the Depot Echo had taken his election to the township as no mean moral victory. In a front page story, Editor Halder predicted that "we now stand on the threshold of a new era; an era of great advancement. The choice of Curly Brown, a young man of much pronounced ability, was about the wisest move the united townships had ever made." So the Depot Echo said.

But in some quarters, there were those who dared to disagree with the editor of the Echo. One day Curly was in the newspaper office and Editor Halder was showing him an editorial in the Bellevue News.

"The boys in the News office are really laying it on, Curly," Halder said. "Listen to this: 'The new reeve of the united townships is a teamster by occupation. He is said to possess the vocabulary of a Missouri mule skinner at his best.'"

"He is said to be a rough and tumble fighter, an ex-prize fighter in fact, and he would gain his ends by force, if that were necessary.— Jack Halder stopped reading, his face hardened, he observed hotly, "That's libellous, Curly. Fanny you a rough and tumble fighter—a man of foul language. If I were you, I'd make 'em eat them libels words. Did drat 'em! They'll hear from me."

"It sounds like a good joke to me," Curly grinned, "don't say a word in your paper. Let it go. I can take it and I'll bet before I'm through with them, I'll have 'em eating out of my hand."

But from another quarter—an unexpected quarter—there came a blast that set Curly Brown back on his heels and showed him that now that he had raised his head above the crowd he was considered a fair target for the mud-slingers.

Late one afternoon Bill McTaggert called him into his office to show him a letter he had just received from Lee Barrand, the man who represented the riding in the legislature at Toronto. Barrand had held the riding against all comers for as long as Curly could remember. And for as long as he could remember, too, Barrand's every effort to have Don Caswell made a justice of the peace and a division court clerk was the sum total of his interest in the northern townships.

Curly sat down and read Barrand's letter. It had been written in Bellevue.

Dear Bill:-

I was amazed to learn from the Bellevue News that you had been defeated in the recent election by a comparatively unknown man by the name of Curly Brown, a mere teamster, I believe.

From what I can learn about this man Brown, he is a dangerous character, and therefore should be stopped before he gets too much start. Needless to say you know what I mean.

Please write me, Bill, and tell me what you think we better do about it.

Yours truly,

Lee Barrand

"That's pretty good, Curly. Don't you think?" Bill laughed. But Curly shook his head.

"I'm not so sure," he said.

"But, wait until you read this," Bill McTaggert said, as he handed Curly another letter. "This is my reply to Mr. Barrand."

And once again Curly settled himself to read.

Dear Barrand:-

Yes, it's true, I was beaten fairly and squarely by that man, Curly Brown, that you have written about. The contest was keen, the result a anticipated, since it was what I deserved for not being more active in the interests of those who put me into office and kept me there all these years.

You suggest in your letter that I know what you mean, I don't get it, but it is possible I do. Speaking candidly I would say that you are afraid that Brown will get up in public meeting sometime and he will tell the folks up here that they are being "misrepresented" at Toronto by a man who never shows his face in the northern part of the riding except at election time.

Stop him—stop Curly Brown! That would be a big order, and I'd hate to be the man who was delegated to carry it out. Curly Brown is both able and fearless. He is a clean-living, God-fearing man, an excellent speaker. A mere teamster you say, and yet you are wrong, Curly Brown is perhaps the only teamster you will ever meet who holds a certificate to teach school.

Up here, where he was born, Curly Brown has become "the true voice of the north"—as Father Finucane, our beloved priest, puts it so neatly. Up here, Curly Brown represents a most important part of this banner county, a part of the county that has been neglected too long.

What I could say some nice things about you, I remain,

Bill McTaggert."

That letter still in his hands, Curly Brown sat for the next few minutes and stared hard at the floor. Then he stood up and looked Bill McTaggert squarely in the eyes.

"Bill," he said crisply, "you must never mail that letter!"

Rescue Three Men Marooned On Ice Floe

EDMONTON (CP)—Three fishermen marooned on an ice floe on Great Slave Lake, 450 miles north of Edmonton, have been rescued by a pilot who put his air-equipped aircraft down on a five-inch-thick ice surface.

Associated Airways Ltd. reported Wednesday night that pilot R. A. Gray of Edmonton had spotted the three fishermen Wednesday setting their nets. The fishermen were marooned when a chunk of ice about 600 yards long and 300 yards wide cracked off and drifted out into the lake.

Gray put his plane down on the ice floe but because of the danger of crashing through, he kept the plane in motion while the fishermen scrambled aboard.

Associated Airways reported it was believed the fishermen were flown to Hay River, N.W.T., 50 miles away.

Cabinet Shuffle May be Outcome Of Currie Report

OTTAWA (CP)—The Ottawa Evening Citizen said Wednesday that Prime Minister St. Laurent is expected to make a "spectacular cabinet shuffle" as a first move "to recoup some of the loss of public prestige" from the Currie report on the Army works services.

It predicted the transfer of Defence Minister Claxton to another department and his replacement by either Production Minister Howe or Hon. C. G. Power, former air minister. Other shifts would follow.

"The change may also involve a change in the defence deputy ministership" the paper said. The deputy now is C. M. Drury, a wartime army brigadier.

Gas, Cramps, Indigestion Relieved: Praises Syntona

Eat Better; Sleep Better, Nerves Calmed Down, Feel Like a Different Person Says This Man After Using Short Treatment of Famed Herbal Compound.

MR. J. BENNETT

"I wouldn't take anything for the good results I got by taking Syntona Herbal Compound and I am glad to tell for the benefit of other sufferers just how this medicine helped me," said Mr. J. Bennett, 49 Hughson Street North, Hamilton, Ontario, in a recent report.

"During the past few months I was having an awful time with indigestion, gas cramps, sick headaches and dizziness after meals. Everything I ate seemed to disagree with me, filling me with gas and distress. I felt so tired I couldn't eat my meals, couldn't get my proper sleep at night, and felt all tired, nervous and run-down. Having heard about Syntona and what it was doing for other people I thought I would give it a trial and it is a very short time this medicine has given me great relief. The cramps in my stomach, heartburn, and a sour, bloated feeling after meals are gone, my nerves are calmed down, and the dizziness and headaches do not trouble me and I feel better than I did for many months."

Here is good advice for all sufferers from common disorders of stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and specialized nervousness, backache, and run-down condition. Begin taking a treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound today. Find out for yourself how this great medicine can help you.

Canadian Freighter With Crew Of 50 Helpless In Pacific

Aid Cannot Reach Disabled Ship Until Monday Night

VANCOUVER (CP)—The elements assaulted the Canadian freighter Maplecove today as she rolled helplessly in mid-Pacific with a useless rudder.

The Vancouver tug Island Sovereign was racing to her aid, but it would be Monday night at the earliest before she could reach the crippled 10,000-ton merchantman. The Maplecove is carrying a crew of 50.

The Canadian weather ships St. Catharines and Stonetown, in the process of changing guard at station "Papa," 1,000 miles west of here, reported gales of 50 miles an hour and more.

Bound To Vancouver

The Maplecove, bound for Vancouver from Yokahama, was some 1,000 miles west of here, Heaviest ship to her—about 200 miles northwest of the Tacoma, Wash., freighter Charles E. Dant, an 8,000-tonner. The Dant also reported a shrieking, snow-filled gale.

The Maplecove radioed for a tow late Thursday after her rudder was damaged. Capt. R. A. Leicester of the freighter signalled a long time that his ship was "lying comfortably" and he did not request aid from any of the vessels standing by.

The weather bureau here said four or five ships were in the vicinity. They could be diverted to the Maplecove if her position became critical.

Cannot Control Ship

Capt. Leicester did not say how the rudder was damaged. He radioed that the crew could not control the ship, but that she was in no immediate danger.

The St. Catharines arrived at the weather station to relieve the Stonetown after her six-week tour of duty. Heavy seas carried away the sounding machine, damaged a lifeboat and sprung the bulkheads of the Stonetown during her patrol.

The Maplecove is in trouble in roughly the same area that the American liberty ship Pennsylvania and her 45-man crew disappeared without trace last January.

Ben-Gurion Hands In Resignation Of Government

TEL AVIV, Israel (Reuters) — Premier David Ben-Gurion handed in the resignation of his government today and set about forming a new one based on a new line-up of the two major parties.

Inclusion of several right wing General Zionist party members is considered a certainty and will probably result in a big change in government policy. The major force will remain the premier's moderate Labor party Mapai.

Ben-Gurion's move was taken to strengthen his hand in the 120-seat Knesset which, it is felt, had to rely on a majority of two votes since September. The extreme religious parties withdrew their support then because the government refused to exempt women religious workers from compulsory military service.

The Zionists have until midnight on second largest opposition party in the Knesset. The Herut party will give Ben-Gurion a majority of 26.

BIG RAILWAY ROBBERY

DAWSON CREEK, B.C. (CP)—Radio station CJDC reported in a news broadcast Thursday that the office of the White Pass and Yukon Railway at Whitehorse had been robbed of $100,000 in cheques, bonds and cash. The White Pass and Yukon operates from Whitehorse to Alaska. Whitehorse is on the Alaska Highway, 450 miles northwest of Dawson Creek.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis—Overnight temperatures throughout southern Ontario were somewhat higher than expected as cloud moved in. Lake Huron and blanketed these sections. Most of this cloud will soon break up today but cloud will once more move in late tonight early Saturday as it spreads out a disturbance currently situated over Arkansas and will be expected to move south of the Great Lakes Saturday.

There is a strong likelihood that most of the precipitation associated with this storm will remain south of Lake Erie, but along the north shore of the lake one to two inches of snow may be deposited overnight, with a snowfall less amount along Lake Ontario Saturday.

U.S. Shoppers Eager to Buy $50 Neckties

NEW YORK (AP)—Christmas business is so good, says a Charlotte, N.C., merchant, that he has a three-hour demand for $50 neckties. They are made of velvet, woven with pure gold.

Denver's three biggest department stores agree that Yule business is "substantially heavier" than last year and will set records.

In Chicago, President Joel Goldblatt of Goldblatt Bros., Inc., reports:

"We're running 10 per cent ahead right now. If it keeps up it will be the biggest Christmas business in our history."

These enthusiastic comments on behalf of others obtained in an Associated Press survey of Christmas shopping trends in the U.S.

Woman Sent To Mental Hospital For Kidnapping

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. Thomas Blower, a 24-year-old Toronto mother charged with kidnapping her seven-weeks-old baby was committed today to a mental hospital. A similar charge against her husband, Thomas Blower, 32, was dropped.

Mrs. Blower was certified mentally ill by two psychiatrists.

The baby, Thomas Bernadine Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boyd, was taken from her carriage outside a chain store in suburban Toronto Dec. 11 while her mother was shopping.

Police recovered the infant soon after.

Police said Blower and his wife, Beatrice, have a daughter, Marilyn, in the Children's Aid shelter, and wanted a second child.

Marilyn Monroe Says She'll Sue If Bar Trays Show Her in Nude

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If a plaster manufacturer ever gets a plan to market bar trays showing actress Marilyn Monroe in the altogether, the young movie actress swears she'll sue him.

The trays would bear the nude picture, Miss Monroe's lawyer says she posed when she was hungry and behind in her rent. Miss Monroe's attorney is asking a full consent for use of her name, pictures and likeness "for advertising and trade purposes."

He says he would sell the trays for about $15 each, thus restricting them to places "with a lot of class and dignity... such as bars for bachelors and lovers of art." He'd also use the photos on bar glasses, he says.

Marilyn's studio said Thursday its lawyers are planning to institute strike actions against companies and individuals engaged in unauthorized commercial exploitation of the Marilyn Monroe photographs."

The suit would be based on the contention that reproductions of the photographs are being used for commercial purposes in an unethical and indiscriminate manner."

The manufacturer prefers to remain anonymous but says his firm is "on the up and up." According to him it's only coincidental the trays are made in Miss Marilyn's and they actually stand for Monkovitch and Murphy, partners of his.

He says he has an agreement with the photographer who took the Monroe pictures and a release signed by the [illegible] at the time she posed. He quoted it as saying: "I consent to the use of my name, portraits and pictures . . . for advertising and trade purposes. . ."

TOM KENNEDY DENIES REPORT HE IS TO RETIRE

Says Day Not Far Off When He Will Resign

TORONTO (CP) — Agriculture Minister Kennedy today denied a report that he is going to resign.

The 73-year-old veteran of Ontario politics said his retiring "obit" was premature and he could not have been more surprised to hear it.

"They've been saying I'm going to resign my job for the past 10 years and I'm not. But I've yet to tell the prime minister that I'm going to resign."

Premier Frost commented: "I can only say I have not received any resignation from Tom Kennedy and he has given me any indication he intends to resign as of January, as the newspaper report says."

However, Mr. Kennedy himself said the day is not far off when he will hand over the reigns of office to a younger man.

It was reported Thursday night that Mr. Kennedy will resign in January and be replaced by Works Minister Thomas. Mr. Kennedy was first elected to the provincial minister in 1930. He went out of office during the Liberal regime of Mitchell Hepburn, a regime the portfolio in 1943 when George Drew became premier.

Ontario Court Turns Down Lee's Appeal

HAMILTON (CP) — The appeal of Harry Lee, scheduled to be hanged Dec. 30 for murder, was turned down today by the Ontario court of appeals.

The 37-year-old carclaker was convicted Oct. 5 of the rifle slaying last summer of Mrs. Mary Rosenblatt, 37, of Hamilton.

The murder was discovered when Lee drove up to a garage at Jordan, near the end of the Hamilton-Rosenblatt dead in the front seat. She had been shot twice. Lee was found in the car.

The last hanging in Hamilton took place 22 years ago when Michael Smith, 20, of Hamilton, went to the gallows for shooting a Windsor taxi driver, a holdup.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The American dollar was at a discount of 3⅛ per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Thursday's noon rate was at par with the pound sterling was $2.71½, against $2.72 Thursday.

Devises New Wife Torture

CINCINNATI (AP)—William Welsh, 33, crashed his automobile on to railroad tracks here, parked it and calmly chalked away at a train smashed into the vehicle.

Police said Welsh's only comment was, "now I don't have to drive my wife to work." Welsh was cited for ignoring a red light.

Two Naval Officers, Rating Win Decorations for Service On Destroyer Nootka in Korea

OTTAWA (CP)—Two naval officers and a chief petty officer have won decorations for leadership and outstanding service on the destroyer Nootka during a year in Korean waters, naval headquarters announced today.

Cmdr. Richard M. Steele, 37, of Rothesay, N.B., and Lt.-Cmdr. Donald R. Saxon, 32, of Yorkton, Saskatoon and Victoria, won the fifth and sixth Distinguished Service Crosses awarded naval personnel during the Korean war. Chief Petty Officer Albert L. Bonner, 35, of Saint John, N.B., won the first Distinguished Service Medal awarded a navy man for Korean service.

Seven Mentioned

The Navy also announced that mentions in dispatches, marked by a bronze oak leaf of the campaign ribbon, were won by seven others for Korean operations. They were:

Lieut. Paul L. S. McCulloch, 25, Victoria; Lt.-Cmdr. Frank F. R. Saunders, 32, Saskatoon; CPO Harry B. Brown, Kingscote, Ont. and Victoria, CPO William D. Morris, 39, Penticton, Alta., and Digby, N. S.; CPO Joseph E. Leary, 34, Abbotsford, B. C., and Halifax; CPO Peter C. Morgan, 32, Vancouver and Victoria; and CPO George R. Pritchard, 34, Outlook, Sask., and Victoria.

Since the Korean war started in 1950, naval personnel have won one DSO, one award 'of officer of the Order of the British Empire, a bar to a DSC, four DSCs, three British Empire Medals and 13 mentions in dispatches in addition to the awards announced today.

Three Lost In Korea

The Navy has suffered casualties of three dead and three missing.

President Studdy Defends Foreign Policy of Last 7 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman stoutly defended today the foreign policies of his seven years in the White House and said they have served the nation well which it should be clear to the Soviet leaders that they cannot gain their objectives "by force or force."

"We have demonstrated to the Communists that their expansionist efforts will be checked," the President said.

"They know this nation is becoming daily stronger in moral strength and unity of the free nations is mounting. They can gain nothing from a war of aggression."

Truman conceded there have been in the administration some mistakes and a few failures in international relations, but he said those who make mistakes are those in the fall of China to the Reds clearly look at the whole balance sheet.

This appraisal of foreign accomplishments, since 1945 was in a speech prepared for ceremonies at the National War College graduation school for U. S. armed services staff officers.

Truman acknowledged that many serious perils lie ahead, but said these should not be exaggerated any more than they should be underestimated.

"We need not be panicky today about the state of the world," he said. "We are not on the losing side. The world is not about to collapse around us."

HAMILTON LAWYER DIES

HAMILTON (CP) — John A. Munro, 53, prominent Hamilton lawyer and former member of the West Hamilton Liberal Association was killed Thursday night when his car crashed into the rear end of a truck. Police said the truck driver, a Mr. Rezin of Castleville, was unhurt. It was Hamilton's 26th traffic fatality this year.

600 U.K. Troops Called Out For Emergency Duty

TOKYO (AP) — More than 600 British Commonwealth troops were called for emergency duty today as about 13,000 Japanese workers went on a 72-hour strike at Commonwealth bases in Japan.

British, Canadian and Australian units were called.

The strike halted administration, construction, repair and transportation services at naval and military bases in Kure, Iwakuni and Tokyo.

The strikers are demanding an increase of 12,000 yen (about $33) a month and a year-end bonus of two months' pay at the new rate.

Present pay of Japanese workers at Commonwealth bases averages 12,000 yen (about $33) a month.

Wage Ad Issued

Most of the striking workers are at Kure, the headquarters for Commonwealth forces in Korea. About 11,000 workers went on strike there. Another 1,000 were out in Iwakuni, southwestern Honshu, and 900 at Ebisu camp in Tokyo.

Kure is headquarters of the 25th Canadian reinforcement group. About 600 Canadians are stationed there and others pass through while travelling to and from the Korean front.

Canadian units at Kure are the No. 2 administration unit, a hospital, line-of-communications and base troops and No. 1 postal wing.

IMMIGRANT GIVES SELF UP IN TRAFFIC DEATH

Zdravko Vrzal Held For Manslaughter

TORONTO (CP) — A 23-year-old immigrant mechanic early today ended a three-month search by giving himself up in connection with the traffic death of a Toronto woman.

Police said Zdravko Vrzal, from Yugoslavia was footsore and near exhaustion after walking the streets for 12 hours. He was charged with manslaughter and failing to remain at the scene of an accident after the death of Mrs. Annie Ostapiuk, 54. Vrzal was remanded to Dec. 24 with bail set at $2,000 when he appeared in court today.

The woman's body was tossed 20 feet in the air by a speeding motorist early Thursday, Vrzal gave himself up to police after police seized a cream-colored convertible found on a suburban parking lot with a dented hood and grill.

While Vrzal was walking the streets police had a guard posted at his rooming house awaiting his return. He lives with his parents at a cement plant.

Donald Fegan, one of the few witnesses to the accident, said the car that struck Mrs. Ostapiuk appeared to be out of control in traffic light.

Chief Constable John Chisholm announced Thursday a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the driver.

DSM Awarded

The DSM was awarded to CPO Diemer for consistent leadership and initiative.

Perform Notable Feats

The two officers awarded mentions in dispatches performed notable feats. Lieut. McCulloch of the destroyer Athabaskan navigated his ship during 10 months' operations in the Korean theatre although he was not a qualified navigating officer.

"His skilful application of the techniques of blind pilotage and his sound judgment on the many occasions when he was called on night operations in narrow and poorly charted waters undoubtedly has enabled the ship to achieve her object in every instance."

Lt.-Cmdr. Saunders of the Nootka led a number of inshore operations in ship's boats. On one occasion when over 100 mines helped the enemy front line he pressed to within 25 yards of the waterfront of an enemy town in order to take soundings for intelligence purposes."

FBI Tags Boston Gunman As One Of Brink's Robbers

Affidavit Says Specs O'Keefe Received $60,000 of Loot

BOSTON (AP) — Specs O'Keefe, (Specs) O'Keefe, 44-year-old Boston gunman, is named by the federal bureau of investigation as one of the masked men who robbed the Brink's Boston headquarters of $1,219,000 on the night of Jan. 17, 1950.

O'Keefe was named in affidavits filed by the FBI with the Federal Court in Boston.

The affidavits became available to reporters Thursday as O'Keefe fought a contempt-of-court charge resulting from his refusal to answer pertinent questions before a grand jury hearing evidence in the fabulous stickup.

One of the affidavits, signed by John B. Greene, a special agent of the FBI who heads the Brink's investigation, says that he "has reason to believe that Joseph J. O'Keefe was one of the participants in the robbery at Brink's, Inc., 165 Prince St., Boston."

Hidden In House

A second affidavit says that $60,000 in Brink's loot was hidden on April 21, 1950 in a house at 771 Veterans of Foreign Wars Parkway, Boston, then occupied by O'Keefe's sister-in-law Mary C. Hooley, 37.

A third affidavit sets forth that July 19, 1950, the $60,000 had been transferred to the home of a Mary O'Keefe, at 1211 E. 4th street, South Boston.

A fourth affidavit tells of an alleged telephone conversation between O'Keefe, Joseph Sullivan and Mary J. and Mary O'Keefe.

Agent Greene says in the paper: "He (O'Keefe) asked his wife whether or not she had been interviewed by federal enforcement officials and she said she had.

"He asked whether or not anything was found and she answered: 'No,' and later he told her: 'Just keep quiet and take care of the baby. You know what I mean.'"

Federal authorities said there is no O'Keefe baby.

President-Elect Names Civilians To Armed Services

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Eisenhower today announced his selections for the men who will head the armed services under Charles E. Wilson, secretary of defence-designate.

They are:

Deputy secretary of defence — Roger M. Kyes, 46, of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., vice president of General Motors.

Secretary of the army — Robert Tex Lanham Stevens, 53, of South Plainfield, N. J., a director of the Raytheon Electric Corp., General Foods and Jackson Mills, and president of J. P. Stevens and Co.; textile manufacturers.

Secretary of the air force—Harold E. Talbott, 52, of Dayton, O., chairman of the board of the North American Aviation Inc., and a director of the Chrysler Corp. finance committee.

Talbott will serve as an adviser and fund-raiser during Eisenhower's presidential campaign. The others selected today will not figured in the campaign limelight on a national scale, it was declared. Selections must be approved by the Senate.

Boys Still Prefer Trains, Girls Dolls For Christmas Toys Survey Shows

It's still trains for the boys and dolls for the girls when it comes to buying this year's Christmas toys.

A Canadian Press survey amid the hectic bustle of toy counters across the land today shows those two old stand-bys leading their own personal among shoppers for the 4,300,000 Canadians under 14 years of age, despite the many new fangled playthings of the atomic age.

Old type or new, toys are plentiful. But meeting all the demands of the toy-buying public comes at a strain on the pocketbook of even a well-heeled grocery. Some of the prices seem to have beaten the model space ships to the take-off.

It's hard to buy a doll that would cost a dime a few years ago for less than about $3.98. For $3 you can take home a fair size fluffy poodle, a skating doll, a walking doll, a baby doll, a deb doll or a mammy doll.

A glamor doll in black negligee will make the cold waist $25 lighter. A fancy doll from France, lavishly dressed and with real hair and miniature drop earrings, is priced at $65.

A $20 doll available in Edmonton and elsewhere talks, sings, laughs and recites "Mary had a Little Lamb."

Electric train prices run from about $15 to $50 and up. A doll can stand without mortgaging the homestead, depending on how elaborate the fashions, styles and other accessories are included.

Some toys are timeless. The train enthusiasts is a plastic railway station that shouts out train departure and arrival points from Montreal to Vancouver.

Another space ship! For $8.98 there's a miniature rocket ship complete with little men, a laboratory and an observatory and the space ship itself ready to take off for the moon. For young would-be space explorers the stores offer goggle sets, space guns with rockets of simulated glass, space guns that shoot fire and rocket ships that spit out smoke.

Edmonton stores are featuring a toy fair this week in what they say is all boom. It is a $14.50 rolling rig that pumps real oil.

Some toys are tied in with preparations for the Coronation next June. Coronation dolls in royal robes have been selling fast in Vancouver. Toronto store counters display the 1952 version of the old-time lead toy soldiers, the Coronation procession depicted in miniature couches, horses and costumed marchers in red and gold.

Poltergeist Put to Rout, It Says Here

IPSWICH, Eng. (Reuters)—The ghost has finally vacated Cecil Wilson's home.

Exorcism by Vicar F. Tucker-Harvey seemed to have turned the trick.

Mr. Tucker - Harvey was called in Monday night when the Wilsons claimed a poltergeist had been throwing things around their rooms and producing weird noises and lights.

The Church of England vicar prayed Monday night and again Tuesday in an effort to get rid of the "evil spirit."

Wednesday night he said the ghost was weakening and so he stayed the night to finish the job.

Spiritualists held a midnight seance and said Thursday the ghost had been "laid."

Mr. Wilson's house feels quite different and we sleep soundly."

Chief Assistant To P.M. Claims $98.84 Expenses

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament learned Thursday that Jack Pickersgill, former chief assistant to two prime ministers, claimed only $98.84 this year in expenses to the government on trips with Prime Minister St. Laurent to Quebec, the West, coast and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Pickersgill, 47, has been the $15,000-a-year clerk of the Privy Council and cabinet since last June 1. Opposition members have voiced suspicion that he was 'fixing' the previous civil service and political activities.

He was chief secretary and adviser to former Prime Minister Mackenzie King during the war years and after.

Mr. Pickersgill's expenses, detailed in a return printed in Thursday's Commons record: $29.10 for a visit to the Lake St. John district of Quebec; $30.34 for a visit to British Columbia, and $39.30 for a visit to Britain.

SAVED HIS FAMILY

TORONTO (CP)—Jimmy Birch, 7, Thursday saved the lives of his mother, brother and sister when fire was unable to get in when he came home for lunch. He smelled gas, discovered the door-door and found Larry, 2, sprawled on the floor; Jimmy dragged him to safety and then who works nights, asleep upstairs. Firemen revived Larry and Doris.

Mother on 'Sit-Down' To Aid 'Cussing' Son

DETROIT (CP) — The 24-hour "sit-down strike" staged by a 42-year-old mother in a Detroit-area Oakland county children's home ended Thursday night when her son was released.

The boy, Richard, Crowley, 16, had been arrested in Pontiac by policeman Dolphus Christenbey for "cussing" him during a telephone conversation.

Mrs. Maxine Crowly took up her self-imposed lobby soon after her son was detained. She refused food or drink.

Police said the "cussing" was in violation of the parole on which Richard had been placed in 1949 for stealing a car.

RCAF Wing Holds Annual Christmas Party

It was "ladies' night" at 418 Wing, Royal Canadian Air Force Association, in the club rooms last night. Members and their wives enjoyed another jolly annual Christmas party with "all the trimmings".

Approximately sixty members and their ladies were present and were formally welcomed by president Herb. Middleton.

Three draws were held with W. E. Jarvah, 73 Catherine St., winning the major award. Second prize, a handsome turkey, was won by Mrs. Bowden, 378 Sidney Street, who has been a patient in the Belleville General Hospital for the past few days. Donald Bush, 43 Dunbar Street, was the winner of the third prize.

Dancing and social amenities rounded out an enjoyable evening.

RUBBISH FIRE EASILY EXTINGUISHED

A rubbish fire at the rear of the Gould Restaurant on Front Street caused a brief run for firemen Thursday afternoon. The blaze was quickly put out with water from a booster hose on one of the pumper trucks and no damage of any nature was reported.

Parking Lot Muddy When Weather Mild

Christmas shoppers leaving their cars in the large parking lot which runs along the east bank of the Moira River behind Front Street stores from just north of the lower bridge to the foot bridge are complaining of muddy conditions in the area.

The lot is under the jurisdiction of the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce on the west side of that sector of Front Street. The merchants have given city council a certain amount of money to have the grounds put in good condition. Alderman Don Thomas on Thursday visited the lot with a view of seeking means to ease conditions for Christmas shoppers in the area.

Investigation by the Ontario Intelligencer on Thursday revealed that the lot was in a muddy condition. Large, shallow water holes dotted the premises. The mud, although not deep, clings to shoe wear and women shoppers had little chance to emerge from the lot without having their shoes badly dirtied.

Only hope of improvement lies in continued sunshine which will dry up present conditions, or a fairly heavy snowfall which will obliterate the mud or depose of the crushed rock.

Meanwhile, prospective shoppers intending to park in the lot would be well advised to wear rubbers or overshoes.

Tatham Firm Awarded Contract To Build New Separate School

The Tatham Company Ltd., of this city have been awarded the general contract for the construction of the new 6-roomed St. Joseph's Separate School to be built just outside the city on East Bridge Street, near Herchimer Avenue.

Announcement of the contract award was made today by T. J. Furey, secretary of St. Michael's School Board, the contract calls for completion of the new school in time for the opening of the fall school term in September.

Of the popular one-storey type plans for the new school call for construction all on the same level; without basement. The main part of the school will have four classrooms with principal's office, teachers' room and health room for the school nurse. Kitchen facilities for use of the teachers will be provided. Two additional classrooms will form a wing to the main building.

Brick Construction

Of brick construction, the new school will have a new type artificial lighting system and an intercommunication system serving all classrooms, and many other new features.

One particular feature of the school will be a disappearing partition between the two classrooms forming the west end of the school. The partition may be lowered into the floor allowing the two class rooms to be used as a single playroom or auditorium.

Mr. Furey pointed out that present pupil requirements call for four class rooms. The two other classrooms with the disappearing partition will be used as a playroom or auditorium until their use is required for classes.

The school is being built on a two and a half acre site just west of Herchimer on the south side of Bridge Street. The site is just outside the city limits.

Canopies to Cover Entrances

Outdoor canopies will cover both the boys' and girls' entrances at the rear of the school, thus affording protection for the children when lining up outside during inclement weather.

The floor of the school will be kept sufficiently high to allow for grading of the front yard to the school at same width the grade level of Bridge Street. The back part of the lot will remain at its present level and will be used as a playground.

B.C.I. Students Present Pageant At Assembly

Amid all the joyous exuberance over the approaching holiday a solemn note was struck in the assembly hall of Belleville Collegiate this Friday morning as, under the capable direction of Mr. Clifford Templer and Mr. Linton Read, the students of B.C.I. presented their annual Christmas assembly.

The program began with carol singing in which all the students participated. Following this a special chorus of sixteen girls gave a number of vocal selections. Greig and Cara Butler played two piano duets, "The Aquarium" and the "March of the Royal Lions"; Marilyn Barber sang "It Was On the Eve of Christmas," and Peter Smith played a piano solo, Rachmaninoff's "Prelude". The Little Gray Lamb" and this part of the program closed with more carols.

The highlight of the assembly was the presentation of a pageant portraying the Nativity scene. It took the form of a Miracle Play, like those presented during the Middle Ages, with the play on the stage being set entirely in pantomime and a choir, consisting of the Glee Club singing various carols which told the story, in the gallery above the stage. Mary and Joseph were played by June Bowerman and Sidney Alcorn and Douglas Trumble was the narrator.

Soccer Champs Get Trophy

Proudest boy in the city the other day was Gary Lewis, captain of the Wanderers bantam soccer team. Gary was presented with the Sammone Bill Harvey Trophy emblematic of the bantam soccer championship of the city.

The presentation was made by ex-alderman Harvey, donor of the cup.

Members of the championship team were presented with symbolic crests by Tod Greenfield, manager of the club. The crests were donated by the Bay of Quinte Football Association. President Les Digby was present and added the association's congratulations.

Obituary

MISS C. LAURA SHERRY
(Plainfield)

After an illness of two years, Miss Caroline Laura Sherry, of Plainfield, died at the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday afternoon. She was born in Tyendinaga township, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Sherry, and had resided in the Plainfield district all her life.

The late Miss Sherry was an active member of Roslin Anglican Church and took a great interest in the work of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Surviving are three brothers, G. C. W. Sherry, of Plainfield; W. H. Sherry, of Saskatoon, Sask., and C. F. Sherry, of Wilton, Ont.

Resting at the Grant Funeral Home, North Front Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. MARJORY ANN BATES
(Trent Road)

Following an illness of some duration, Mrs. Marjory Ann Bates, an aged and highly respected resident of this district for many years, died at the Belleview Nursing Home, early this morning.

She was born at Brighton, Ont., 83 years ago, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Almond Foley and had resided here after her marriage, resided in Saskatchewan but for the last few years had resided in the Trent Road, where she was well known and highly respected. She was also a member of Holloway St. United Church and took an active interest in the Sunday School, as well as the work of the W.M.S. She was a life member of the latter society.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Ross (Lena) McNary, of the Trent Road and one son, Otho Bates of Abernethy, Sask.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

ROBERT HIRAM DAFOE
(R.R. 2, Harold)

Ill for the past year and one-half, Robert Hiram Dafoe, lifelong and highly respected resident of Huntingdon township, died at his home R.R. 2, Harold, on Thursday afternoon. He was born in Huntingdon Township 82 years ago and had resided in that community all his life. He carried on farming operations for many years but at the time of his death was living retired.

He was the son of the late Gilbert Dafoe and Agnes McCullem and during his life took an active interest in the church, Salem United Church and fraternal societies. He was a member of Stirling Lodge, A.F. & A.M., No. 69, and Keystone Chapter, R.A.M., of Stirling, No. 72, Tanner's Lodge, L.O.L., No. 509, and the Royal Black Preceptory, No. 747 of Wellman's Corners.

Surviving are his wife, the former Addie Bell Sharp, three sisters, Mrs. John Ash, of Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Mrs. Milford Thompson, of Niagara Falls, Ont.; Mrs. Ray Kerrington, of Crookston, and one brother, William R. Dafoe, of Crookston.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

FREDERICK V. FEENEY
(Brantford — Madoc Twp.)

Following an illness of six weeks, Frederick Vincent Feeney, a former resident of Madoc township and now of Brantford, died in the Toronto General Hospital on Thursday morning. He was born in Madoc 41 years ago, being the son of the late Frederick Feeney and Margaret Callery and had resided in Brantford, where he was employed on construction work for the past eight months. He previously had resided in Madoc township where he was well known and highly respected.

He was a member of St. Mary's Church in Brantford, and surviving are his wife, the former Josephine Barry; two daughters, Rosemary and Rita, and one son, Fred, all at home; four sisters, Mrs. Ludeline Meraw, of Toronto; Mrs. E. J. (Marguerite) Meraw, of Sudbury; Mrs. C. J. (Mary) Rooney and Mrs. James (Jean) Collins, of Brantford, and two brothers, Joseph Feeney, of this city, and Francis Feeney, of Madoc.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MATTHEW J. McGAVEXY
(Madoc)

The funeral of Matthew J. McGarvey took place on Wednesday afternoon from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Wesley Cuddy, to St. Andrew's Church, where service was conducted by Rev. W. C. Stevenson of Renfrew, assisted by Rev. Father Cooper. Reverend Father Cooper, of the Pentecostal Assembly, Madoc, also read and was a member. St. Andrew's choir led in the singing of two hymns, "The Church's One Foundation," and "Abide With Me," and Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Gardiner rendered "The City Four Square." The service was preached by Rev. W. C. Stevenson. "It is not unlikely that the visit will take place very soon," it added.

CARDS OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sheffield and family wish to express sincere thanks and appreciation to their many friends, neighbours and relatives for their kind expressions of sympathy and floral tributes extended during their recent bereavement in the loss of a loving mother. D19

IN MEMORIAM

THORN. — In ever loving memory of our dear father, who passed away December 19, 1950.

Sadly missed by daughter Ruth.

Death tries to break, but all in vain. You are not here, and then no part is the greatest sorrow of one's heart. The years may help us but many things

But they never wipe out never.

—Always remembering happy days When we were all together.

—Ever remembered by wife Agnes. D19

THORN. — In ever loving memory of our dear father, who passed away December 19, 1950.

We are lonely here without you dad, And the world is very sad,

Life has not been the same to me, Since you were called away.

God bless you, dad, I miss you.

Those words I'd miss you.

Those words have proved true true, I lost my best, my dearest friend, Dead dad, I lost you.

—Always to be remembered by son Frank, Clarence.

THORN. — In memory of our loving father, Thomas William Thorn, who passed away December 19, 1950.

We are lonely here without you dad, We miss you more each day.

Memories of you we treasure, Since you were called away.

God bless you, dad, I miss you.

Those words have proved true true, I lost my best, my dearest friend, Dead dad, I lost you.

—Always to be remembered by son Frank, Clarence.

THORN. — In loving memory of our dear father, James Albert Thorn, who passed away December 19, 1936.

Your last parting with

We would like to have heard.

And breathed in your ear

The word farewell.

Only those who have lost

Are able to tell

The pain in the heart

At not saying farewell.

—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by daughter and daughter-in-law, Mary and Percy. D19

DOXTATOR. — In loving memory of our dear father, who passed away December 19, 1945.

Our lips could tell how we miss her Our eyes could show how we grieve But never can we express how we love her In a home that's darkened by sorrow.

—Sadly missed by daughter Rose D19

FRY. — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Henry Fry, who passed away December 19, 1938, in his 24th year; also his infant son W. L. Fry, born July 4, 1938, died August 22, 1939.

They are gone but not forgotten, In our hearts they'll never die.

As long as memory lingers

Thoughts of them are ever near.

—Fondly remembered by Mom, Dad, brothers and sisters. D19

Christmas Trade In Certain Lines Is Satisfactory

TRENTON (Special) — Christmas trade, so the businessmen say, is good but lack of snow has caused lack of interest in certain lines, especially the footwear line figuring on heavy sale of rubbers around this time of year.

On the other hand shoppers have turned to buying slippers and luggage so that overall sales remain comparable with receipts taken in at Christmastime last year.

Naturally the fuel business has suffered with the exceptionally mild season. One household user reports that his oil bill is 75 per cent lower with the prospect of a very low fuel consumption. "I'm not complaining about the saving. I'm overjoyed with the thought of cutting down on the high cost of living."

A veteran haberdasher reports business very good. "I found business lagging on Wednesday afternoon and blamed the unseasonable conditions," he said.

Hardwares claim trade is brisk as usual. A King Street merchant notices a big increase on the general volume. He credits the government lifting of credit restrictions. A local photographer finds many giving portraits as presents.

While business seems slow at times, the majority of storeowners anticipate and have prepared for the last-minute buying rush. All of them have a great deal of praise for the Chamber of Commerce's contribution towards decorating the main thoroughfare and full support of the annual Santa Claus Parade which attracted hundreds and hundreds of adults and children.

Public School Budget Will Show Considerable Increase Over One Presented Last Year

Although certain repair items planned for the older school buildings in the city will not be proceeded with this year, the 1953 public school budget will show a considerable increase over that for 1952, it was stated today by L. A. Kells, public schools administrator.

The city's share of the 1953 public schools budget will be $252,000, an increase of approximately $30,000 over that for this year. The 1952 budget for public school purposes was $249,500 of which $31,500 was debenutured.

In the event that the city health department takes over the dental services in the schools, the 1953 public schools budget will be reduced by an amount of $2,500, Mr. Kells said it was expected the health department would take over this work.

Budget Reduced $7,500

At their final meeting of the year held this week, board members heard a request from Alderman C. L. Hyde asking that the board make an endeavor to reduce its budget for next year. In view of Mr. Hyde's statement that the slight tax rate was due to rise, the board decided to limit some plans for repairs and improvements to the older school buildings and their budget for next year was reduced by $7,500.

The board received a letter from the teachers' council asking the board make a definite statement regarding the cost of living allowance for which their agreement with the city runs out this year. A special committee of board members Wilkins, Hewson, Mrs. McCabe and Godwin was appointed to meet with the teachers to discuss the matter.

Three Resignations

Resignations from three teachers were received. These were from Mrs. Dorothy Cage and Miss Mabel Chapman, teachers at Queen Elizabeth school and from Mrs. N. M. Anderson, teacher at Queen Victoria School.

The resignation of Charles Carter, caretaker at Belleville school for the past 30 years, was also received. Mr. Carter is now acting as assistant caretaker at Queen Alexandra school.

Civil defence training has been organized in all the city public schools, board members were informed. In this matter school principals are following a program suggested by the department of national defence and approved by the Ontario department of education.

Board member Frank Grandame reported satisfactory progress was being made with minor construction repair at the new Queen Elizabeth school.

pointed as board representative to the Bay of Quinte High School District board for a period of one year. Mrs. Irene Raney was re-appointed as attendance officer.

Mrs. Audrey Graham, stenographer at the school board office has resigned her position and the schools' administrator was authorized to hire a part-time assistant.

President Congratulated

Congratulations to board president Fred T. Symons for the very capable manner in which he had conducted the meetings during the past year were extended by Charles Hewson. In turn Mr. Symons expressed his appreciation for the co-operation of board members during a term when 14 of the board members were new to civic office.

Ten board members, President Fred Symons and members Mrs. McCabe, Godwin, Hewson, Wilkins, Lennox, Robb, VanTassel, Grandame and House attended the meeting at which the newly-acclaimed members for next year, Mac Smith, James Ward and Gordon Trill were welcomed.

The inaugural meeting of the public school board for 1953 will be held at the board office on January 14 at 8 p.m.

Charles A. Moore Retires After 40 Years of Service

After 40 years as a mail clerk on the Belleville-Peterborough-Lindsay-Toronto run, Charles A. Moore, Moira Street, East, has retired from the service and now can catch up on the sleep which he has lost in the past four decades.

Working every other day on the above mail run, Mr. Moore has gone to bed an hour before midnight every night since he was 25 and promptly arises a few minutes before three. "That's all the sleep I ever got, even when I'm not working," he says.

Regarded as a most efficient mail clerk, Mr. Moore says he has sorted approximately 40 million letters, parcels and cards during his career. His boss, R. T. Sangster, district post office inspector at Toronto, says "They just don't make them like Charlie any more."

Mr. Moore started as a railway clerk in 1912 and during the 156 mile run sorted an average of just under 1,000 letters a day. In recent years the average has increased to between 5,000 and 10,000 pieces of mail on each run.

Mr. Moore's hobby is growing roses and the 175 rose bushes at his home on Moira Street are his pride.

MAKING A MONKEY OUT OF MARX

When standards of living are such that things regarded as unattainable luxuries a generation or so ago have become commonplace possessions of the average wage-earning family, the much prated theories of socialism take on quite a bearing.

The Marxian thesis, to which both Communists and Socialists still subscribe in their thinking and preaching on all economic problems, is set out in terms which are obviously absurd in the light of conditions enjoyed by Canadians and Americans today. When Karl Marx and Frederick Engels wrote the Communist Manifesto in 1848 they argued that "the average price of wage-labor is the minimum wage, i.e., that the quantum of the means of subsistence which is absolutely requisite to keep the laborer in bare existence as a laborer. What, therefore, the wage laborer appropriates by means of his labor, merely suffices to prolong and reproduce a bare existence."

That this was a fairly true statement of conditions 100 years ago is borne out by the fact that Marx and Engels centred their assumption that it was inherent in the picture of economics that the worker would never escape from this minimum wage bondage until, of course, the masses rose up to overthrow the bosses and destroy the system of capitalism under which they were enslaved.

Never have two prophets had such an influence upon the destinies of mankind in a single century and yet been proven to be so wholly wrong in their theories. Yet even in the face of their glaring miscalculations their disciples have unwaveringly proclaimed the dawning of a new and ever brighter Utopia awaiting them under state socialism, either in its paternal pattern designed by the "socialist" of today or in the rigid regimentation of modern "Communism".

But whether turning upon either of these two roads to the left, the worker has found that the freedom which has been a heritage in the New World has become a thing of the past. The glowing promises never seemed to catch up with and overcome the grimmer realities when theories had to be translated into effective results.

The awakening to this realization is now apparent in almost every country which had moved well to the left in the wake of Marxism. Where the system of production still prevailed the people have turned away from the socialist experiments. Only in those unhappy nations where the Russian pattern of communism has been established "paradise" the people remained in submission to the state. From the Procrustean bed of Communism the only escape is to flee the land of enslavement, and that avenue is open to only the few.

Nevertheless the fallacy of the socialist-communist concept of life is being borne home by the example which enlightened capitalism is demonstrating on this continent today. That many Canadian and American workers have yet to realize what it holds out to them was stressed recently by Benjamin Fairless, head of the United States Steel Corporation.

Mr. Fairless remarked: "Marx overlooked completely the only economic system which has proved that it is possible for the workers themselves to own, to control and manage directly the facilities of production. Shocking as the news may be to the disciples of Karl Marx, that system is capitalism."

He proceeded to point out that U.S. Steel's 300,000 employees could buy every share of the outstanding common stock of U.S. Steel just as easily as they can purchase a moderately good automobile.

"By investing $10 a week apiece," he said, "they could purchase a new car spiffed and fake up like the outstanding common stock in less than seven years. Even 62 shares of common stock each would give the employees a voting majority by the proxies they hold. They could elect their own board of directors, fire the present management and run the business to suit themselves."

The wage-earner is very slowly beginning to realize that he can become an important partner in the capitalist system beyond the range of his productive capacity. Workers in most of the large industrial corporations in both the U.S. and Canada have the same opportunity of that pointed out by Mr. Fairless. It is a fact that in a great many of the biggest businesses in Canada and the U.S. a great bulk of the stock is held by small shareholders.

Mr. Fairless summed it up when he remarked: "Clearly, Marx didn't know all the Engels."

LET THE CRITICS BEWARE

There is a limit to everything. We offer this reminder to that increasing army of Canadians who might be banded under a banner entitled "Abbott's Adversaries." Seldom has such a motley crew of Canadians so concentrated their fire on a single cabinet minister.

The Finance Minister is becoming the target of more caustic comments and quibbling queries almost any week than a panel of quiz kids could cope with in a full season. Advice and admonitions assail him from all directions. And as well he has been the victim of the sort of corn-husking wisecracking that passes for humor in the House of Commons.

Last week a Progressive Conservative member, belaboring Mr. Abbott for overtaxing the public, remarked: "During wartime, one of the greatest dangers we have to fear is sabotage. In peacetime it seems that one of the greatest dangers is 'abbotage'."

Now fun is fun, and to be sure Mr. Abbott's penchant for putting the bite on the Canadian taxpayer is painfully un-funny, but there is a time to be carried too far. If this up-and-at-Abbott campaign goes on apace until next fall there is just a possibility that it can be over done.

Canadians, by and large, are a compassionate people. Let the Abbott tormentors be warned. Much more of this harassing and embarrassing, and a lot of people will begin to feel sorry enough for the Finance Minister to extend him a vote of confidence out of sheer sympathy.

LEGEND OF ST. FILLIAN'S STONES

At Killin, Perthshire, Scotland, the villagers pull rushes each Christmas from a nearby stream to make a resting place for a number of stones taken from the bed of an ancient river-course. They are not ordinary stones. For the villagers believe that they were used centuries ago by their patron saint, St. Fillian, to cure ague, sprains and other ailments and injuries.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

25 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 19, 1925

Robert Bell, son of the Rev. Dr. Bell, rector of Bridge St. Church, has been notified that he has been elected to the Twelve Older Boys' Parliament of the Province of Ontario by acclamation. He will represent Belleville at the meeting at McMaster University in Hamilton which meets Dec. 27th, to 31st.

Sportsmen fishermen are fishing through openings which have been made in the ice on the bay and are catching large quantities of smelts, eels and other small varieties of fish. When peddled about the streets they find a ready sale.

Coal men, milk men and bakers are finding their motorized vehicles today as a bright sun beaming down from clear skies, the mercury registering again to summer levels and turned sidewards and roads into slush coated thoroughfares. It was a welcome relief from the sub-zero weather which gripped the city and district for the past week.

30 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 19, 1922

The Children's Aid Society is appealing to the public for toys and clothing, the which to carry on its work next year.

Mr. W. B. Riggs, who has just completed building one of the most up-to-date garages in the province, is today installing an oil burner in the furnace which heats the garage and he states that he can heat the big building as well with oil as with coal at about the same cost, if not cheaper. Many people in Toronto, he states, are installing oil burners and claim to be more than pleased with them. The experiment being made by Mr. Riggs will be followed with much interest by the people of Belleville and no doubt many will follow suit if it proves a success, in view of the uncertainty of the coal supply.

Tests Prove Chains Best

(U.S. News and World Report)

After 11 years of tests and research, the National Safety Council comes up with some advice on driving in bad weather.

Tire chains are your best protection. Special tires are good, but they are not a real substitute for chains. The Council says reinforced chains reduce braking distances on both snow and ice by about half and increase safety traction on ice about seven times.

Ordinary tires are not as safe today as they were a few years back. That's because they are made largely of synthetic rubber. Synthetic tires wear better and have other advantages, but on snow and ice they are found to skid farther and provide poorer traction than pre-war tires.

So, concludes the Council: You have got to be more cautious than ever.

Case in Reverse

(Oshawa Times-Gazette)

Here is a story from England that is unusual. A man was charged with driving while drunk but was acquitted when he was able to prove that the doctor who examined him was under the influence of liquor. We wonder if that doctor drove to the scene of the examination.

THE TELEGRAMMAR

My heartfelt thanks I rise to utter
For Western Union's
Telegrammar,
Which tells succinctly what to say
For birth or feast or wedding day,
With hints like this reprinted here:
'May Easter fill your cup with cheer
And keep it brimful all the year.'
I hope some good friend will remember
To send me this one for December.
I'd say beyond the slightest question
It is a wonderful suggestion.
This Christmas wire would thrill me through:
"With my best wishes, all for you.
A check for fifty dollars, too."
Henceforth when lost for words with glamor
I'll use the handy Telegrammar.
Morning and evening I'll peruse it,
Find the right sentiment and use it—
At what it costs per word — I'll quote it.

Humanity To Man

(Windsor Star)

A man behind the hoarding around a construction job acts as a gift shop outside a closed door. He just has to see what's on the other side.

This form of hoarding, therefore, is more than a protective barrier. It's practically censorship.

Well placed knotholes are a help, and considerate is the landlord. Some construction companies obligingly put windows in that enter large cities as a concession to sidewalk superintendents. Officials of the Montreal General Hospital seem to have hit on the best arrangement.

They are providing a covered platform overlooking their big excavation project. Not only is this an all-weather observation post for the curious, it will be omitting a fine panorama of pictures of the work being done.

A standard entrance for this vantage point is assured. Men of high and low estate, along with the intermediates, may be expected to pause there in perfect unison, each contributing a soul in the months ahead.

Build it and it is superintendents everywhere will have the idea spreads. A man trying to peer through a hole in a hoarding or knothole is not a happy man, although an interesting study. The common denominator of the human condition.

Brave Mother Shepherds Three Small Children from Burning Home; Upper Part Damaged

TRENTON, (Special) — A family of seven people fled from a burning house in freezing temperatures last night while the fire raged unchecked by the freight train running between the junction and the downtown station. The firemen saved the house however after the driver of the rescue permaded the engineer to move his train so that the pumper could pass over the railroad right-away and continue to the fire.

Meanwhile a brave 35-year-old mother led the three youngest of her five children from smoke-filled bedroom to safety. She raced up a flight of stairs to the second floor and awakened her three small children unaware that the house was burning down around them. She made them hold hands and grabbing the front end of the chain gooped her way along a smoke-blocked hallway to the flight of stairs leading down to the ground floor. She kept encouraging her children as they followed her out into the fresh air.

The father Joseph Cannon, a carpenter, who has not worked lately, had fixed the fire in the coal stove for the night when he smelled smoke resembling burning rags. He called to his wife and asked her if she was smoking a cigarette. He sent his oldest daughter Sheiba, 13, upstairs to see if the pipes were in place.

Filled With Smoke

The young woman found the second floor filled with smoke and ran back to tell her father. The mother acted without thought for her own safety climbing the stairs and fighting her way through dense smoke to the room where the three children were sleeping.

By the time firemen arrived the Cannon family with the aid of neighbors had moved some of the furnishings from the downstairs apartment. They had just finished putting up the Christmas decorations and were waiting to set up the Christmas tree on the week-end. "I'm afraid it won't be much of a Christmas for the family", Mrs. Cannon said afterwards. Her husband has been drawing unemployment insurance since he's been out of work. He's afraid we'll be dripping through the downstairs part will cause the family's supply of potatoes and spples to freeze in the cellar.

Around midnight the Cannon family including Mr. and Mrs. Cannon, Michael, five; John, seven; Jacqueline, 15; Wilfred, 16; and Sheiba, 16, were given shelter by Mr. Cannon's mother, Mrs. F. J. Cannon, 14 Spring Street.

The fire had been confined to the upstairs part of the house but it will be days before the house dries out enough to live in again. A fireman remarked while the pumper forced water into the danger spot. "Another few minutes' delay by the train and the house would have gone up in flames for sure."

Three Canadians Indicted For Hold-up Murder

BUFALO, N.Y. (AP)—A grand jury Thursday returned an indictment charging three Canadians with the holdup-murder of jeweller Donald F. Hurd.

The assistant Erie county district attorney, John F. Dwyer, said the indictment was technically secret because none of the persons named in it is in the custody of New York state authorities.

The indictment charged first-degree murder and first-degree robbery, Dwyer said.

Two of the men accused of taking part in the Dec. 8 slaying in Hurd's downtown Buffalo store are in custody in Hamilton, awaiting extradition proceedings. A third still is at large.

Held in Hamilton are Maurice (Digger) O'Dell, 27, and Walter F. Griffen, 36, both of Hamilton. Police in 13 states and Ontario are seeking Ralph J. Grubisch, 36, of Kitchener, Ont.

Hurd, 45, was shot and killed as holdup men robbed his store of jewelry and gems valued at $41,000.

TRUSH HAND BACK LOOT

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Two bandits kidnapped at gunpoint an American Airlines messenger who was on his way to make a $100,000 bank deposit but handed the money bag back when they discovered it contained only cheques.

"PEDESTRICIDE" DEFINED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Warning came today against a frequently fatal seasonal disease — "pedestricide." The Auto Club of Southern California defines it as a disease confined almost entirely to jaywalkers and folks who cross the street against red lights.

Beauty Party

A near capacity crowd gathered at the Knights of Columbus Hall, on Saturday evening for a successful euchre party held under the auspices of the Holy Rosary High School Parent Teacher Association, at which the drawing for the turkeys took place.

The card winners were, ladies, Miss Doris Kay, Mrs. Helen Reynolds and consolation, Mrs. D. R. Hay; men, W. Lucas, J. W. Beaver, and consolation, R. Kay.

These winners in turn drew the lucky winning tickets for the turkeys as follows: Mrs. William Lynch, Miss June Lynch, Mrs. Mort. Mrs. Conlby, P. O'Neill and Leo Purdy.

The door prize was won by Mrs. F. M. Hawley.

IDLENESS BRIEF

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP)—Jim Mills of Little Pond, P.E.I., who recently celebrated his 100th birthday, said his only complaint is that he hasn't enough work to do. "I have worked hard all my life," he said, "but my hardest life is now doing nothing."

Batwing Sweater

Made in black and white cashmere this fully-fashioned model sweater has wide batwing sleeves and rollette collar. Popular in London this season the sweater comes in many different shades. Colors in the sweater are followed the North American desire for knitted fashions and business is brisk in London shops. — (CP Photo.)

British Women Follow Craze By Buying Knitted Fashions

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—In shop windows beckoning with the most lavish Christmas displays in recent years, cupids and cherubs point to fascinating presents in dress for women.

In the forefront is a wide selection of woollies making news in fashion articles this winter. British women are following the North American craze for knitted fashions, and as men feel reasonably safe buying pretty jumpers, lacy scarves and knitted accessories, business is brisk.

A Scottish firm famed for cashmere sweaters has manufactured 10 dressmaker styles for early spring in shades of crab-apple green, petal pink, pistache and topaz. The new designs will also be sold on Canadian and United States markets.

Warm and Elegant

Smart for dinner-at-home is the high-necked batwing cashmere in white, or a turtle-necked design with deep turnover collar. Both come in many shades. Teamed with long woollen or velvet skirts over rustling petticoats, or worn with tapered ocicot slacks, they combine warmth with elegance.

In Paris and London, jewelled styles are creeping upwards to the ears with victorian modesty. Gone are the plunge necklines that gave rise to specially - designed bras. Fashionable women expose only a modest oval of shoulderline in evening sweaters, elaborately embroidered.

Drawing the eyes of Christmas shoppers are lacy knitted stoles sparkling with sequins for evening wear. For daytime are heavily-fringed jersey numbers, with jumpers or "separates" to match.

Wide Variety

The knitted influence in this year's fashions can be seen in many ways. Jester, jellybag, pigtail and pirate hats in hand-knit and jersey wools are displayed in every department store. Suede jackets in gleaming reds and emerald greens have rib-knit sleeves.

Even jersey dresses from leading knit-wear firms have ribbed sleeves and waistlines that give a hand-knit touch to factory-made designs. The knitted touch stretches to rainwear—coats are collared and cuffed in wool.

Women's Activities

MOIRA W.A.

Mrs. Ross Ketcheson was hostess to Moira W.A., on Thursday evening with a large attendance of members present. The president, Mrs. Farrel, opened the meeting with a Christmas theme.

The first Scripture reading was given by Mrs. Ewald, the second by Mrs. Thompson and the third by Mrs. Blake Ketcheson with several Christmas carols interspersed.

A candlelight service was held with Mrs. Ross Ketcheson, Mrs. Ewald, Mrs. Donald Holbert, Mrs. Angus Mumby, Mrs. Donald Mcinroy lighting the candles and reciting a verse and putting the candles in form of a star which made a pretty setting. The Rev. J. Norman gave a story "Where Love is, God is There Always". The convener, Mrs. Fox, took charge with children taking part: duet by Judy and Gerald Fox, "O Little Town of Bethlehem" with Doug. Farrel at the piano; recitation by Linda Ketcheson, "The Broken Doll"; reading by Billie Miller, Owen Ketcheson, Dennis Stitt, Cecil Fox and David Ewald; solo by Barbara Holbert, "Away in a Manger"; duet by Doug. and Donnie Farrel "Silent Night", piano solo by Carol Welsh, "Gypsy Dance"; solo by Janie Floquin, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear", piano duet Carol Welsh took the collection for evening. Refreshments were served.

Quintena Rebekahs Hold Yuletide Party

Quintena Rebekah Lodge 128, held their annual Christmas party on Tuesday night in the form of a pageant of the Nativity. The careful detail of the stage showed thoughtful planning for each changing scene.

Sister Georgina Charlton's clear and descriptive narrative was well acted by the sisters and brothers taking part. Sister Verna Summers acted Mother Mary, Bro. A. Mitchell as Joseph, and Bro. L. Pellits was the innkeeper who lived to lament that he had turned the Holy Family to sleep in his stable.

The Wisemen were ably portrayed by Brothers Charles McDonald, Clayton Gilroy and Gordon Millen. Shepherds who followed the Star in awe and came to kneel at the stable door were Sisters M. Mervinal, L. McMillan, L. Belnap, H. Miller, J. Carruthers, V. Oliphant and the rejoicing angels were Sisters C. Ironside, A. Webb, M. Large, A. Adams, I. Oddy.

A background choral of carols was provided by Sisters L. Darwell, E. O'Neill, D. Ellsworth, F. Pollitt, J. Bushell, M. Parks, V. Adams, H. Shorey directed by Sister Webber, with piano accompaniment by Sister Harwood.

After the pageant, all the members joined in carol-singing until 10th Bi. Nicholl, well represented by Mr. Pete Belnap, arrived to distribute the gifts from the well-laden and beautiful tree.

Refreshments were served in the upper hall and much praise must go to Sisters Rhea Mitchell and Beada Baldrick for the excellent convening of a successful evening, and to all those helpers for their untiring efforts.

SECOND TUB VICTIM

TORONTO (CP)—The second death of a woman in a bathtub in two days was reported here Wednesday. Police said both victims died from heart attacks as they prepared to bathe. Wednesday Mrs. Elizabeth McKellar, 78, was found dead by her daughter, Tuesday afternoon bent down a bathroom door to reach Mrs. Irene Mitchell, 43.

GUILTY OF FORGERY

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—An 18-year-old youth Wednesday pleaded guilty to cashing under an assumed name four cheques from a firm operated by his brothers. Lyle Bradshaw was sentenced to two years less a day on four charges of forgery and uttering and one of theft. The amount of the cheques involved was $424.

Women's Institute

BETHEL-EDON W.I.

The festivities of the Yuletide season highlighted a delightful meeting of the Institute held at the home of Mrs. Earle Sayers.

A glowing, gleaming Christmas tree, lighted tapers and flaming poinsettia throughout the rooms imbued all with the charm of Christmas. Twenty-three adults and eight children attended the meeting.

During the business period, $25 was voted to the Christmas Cheer fund of the Salvation Army. A Christmas basket of fruit is to be sent to an elderly shut-in member, Mrs. E. Kennedy.

It was decided that in the future fruit or flowers will be sent to any person in the community who is hospitalized or in bed under the doctor's care; a stated sum being set for the same. The committee in charge is Mrs. Carleton Cronkrite, Mrs. Clarence Ketcheson and Mrs. Morden Brough.

The topic "The Beauty of Christmas" was well presented by Mrs. A. Sine.

Carols were sung with Mrs. Floyd Ray as pianist and Mrs. Gordon Foster and Mrs. R. Cranston as song leaders.

The recreation period was in charge of Mrs. Don Sills.

Mrs. Ray told Christmas story, "Johnny and The Silver Bell," was given by Mrs. Richard Cranston. A fine display of leathercraft and needlepoint work by the ladies who had attended the government course in Foxboro, was next interesting.

Those who profited by the course were Mrs. Gordon Ray, Mrs. R. Cranston, Mrs. Clifford Ray, Mrs. Delbert Rowe and Mrs. Percy Ray.

An exchange of Christmas gifts and the presentation of a "white gift" of candy for the home for the Aged were other interesting features of the meeting.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

QUINTE W.I.

The Christmas meeting of Quinte Women's Institute was held at the spacious home of Mrs. Clifford Reid, with 23 members and three visitors present.

Mrs. Grills, the president, presided with Mrs. Jack Parrott, as leader.

Mrs. Bradshaw thanked the Institute members for $5 received for the use of church hall, and for the Institute pot luck supper, which was a big success

Mrs. Jack Parrott led the singing or Christmas carols.

Mrs. Farnsworth gave a fine talk on the motto, "The dark night waketh, the glory breaks, and Christmas comes once more", which was greatly appreciated.

The story of "The Small One" was then played by recording as told by Bing Crosby.

Mrs. Montgomery gave a reading on the Christmas Story, called "Hanging Trees with Memories", which also was much enjoyed. This was followed by another recording entitled "While the Chimes Rang Out."

Mrs. Grills invited all to the evening meeting in January at the home of Mrs. Arnold Mitchell, when the husbands will be guests.

The roll call was exchange of gifts. Refreshments were served by the committee, Mrs. Clifford Reid, Mrs. Macquire, Mrs. J. Parrott, and Mrs. Nobie Bevers.

Thanks were tendered Mrs. Clifford Reid for her kind hospitality and for an enjoyable time together.

Canadian Women Step Into Limelight Individually and In Group During Past Year

By KAY REX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian women stepped into the limelight individually and in groups in 1952, winning national and international recognition in many activities from welfare work and politics to art.

In the background devoted groups worked tirelessly to better social conditions and advance the country's cultural programs. Efforts of behind-the-scenes workers played no small part in the success of national welfare drives.

Lois Marshall, Toronto soprano, won the wholehearted praise of critics when she made her debut at New York's Town Hall. At year's end the dark-haired singer signed a three-year contract to take her on a concert tour of Canada, the United States and South America.

Rising Star

Meanwhile Ottawa-born Suzanne Cloutier was becoming internationally known as a stage and screen star while Canada's two professional ballet troupes, the National Ballet and the Winnipeg Ballet, undertook extensive tours in Eastern and Western Canada.

In September the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation took further note of its vast daytime listening audience. Time for women's afternoon programs was tripled and a series started known as trans-Canada matinee. On the 45-minute program, produced five days a week, homemaking ideas and music are presented.

A Toronto lawyer, Margaret Hyndman, was named woman of the year by the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs about the same time as Kate Aitken announced her retirement after 29 years as director of women's activities for the Canadian National Exhibition. The new director, Elsa Jenkins, was first woman television announcer for the CBC and a one-time newspaper reporter.

On the political scene Ottawa's Charlotte Whitton, having made good as acting mayor, successfully campaigned once more for the two-year term as mayor of the Canadian capital.

B.C. Milestone

Another political milestone was chalked up in British Columbia when the Social Credit party took 45-year-old Mrs. Tilly Rolston as provincial minister of education. She became Canada's first woman cabinet minister to hold a portfolio.

Among those making their welfare on the international level was Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, hardworking director of the Unitarian service committee of Canada. Sponsored by the United Nations Dr. Hitschmanova visited Korea, saw the need of civilians. Back in Canada she organized a milk drive which resulted in shipments of thousands of pounds of powdered milk to undernourished Korean children.

On the lighter side Marilyn Raddick, 18-year-old Toronto blonde, was crowned Miss Canada at Bur-lington, Ont., and a couple of Ontario mines returned from a trip around the world.

The girls, Lenny Burton of Burgessville and Johnny Cochrane, of Midland, both 21, came home after a hitch-hiking jaunt which lasted 20 months and took them 21,000 miles. In that time they visited 19 countries.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She says she wants to do the right thing—why doesn't she do it?

I must confess I get very tired of having people tell me they want to do the right thing" but for one reason or another, find it impossible.

The following letter is a very good example of what I mean:

"I am a married married woman of 25 and have two children.

"There is a girl with whom I have been friends for about five years, and now I find that I am deeply in love with her husband and he says he loves me, too. We tried staying away from one another for a month, but find it impossible. We want to do the right thing, but our love is too strong.

"Please tell us what to do. We are patiently waiting your answer."

Situation Need Not Arise

In my opinion, this kind of situation need never arise if two people honestly want "to do the right thing." This woman insists that she and the man in the case do want to. But, obviously, that is not at all what they want most. If it were, they would do it. There is something they want much more than they "want to do the right thing," and that is to continue their romance.

A married man and a married woman don't fall in love with each other unless they have allowed themselves opportunities to be together by themselves or to indulge in moments of personal byplay which can wrap an intangible veil of privacy around the two or them even when others are present. Somebody's wife and somebody else's husband who really want to keep out of trouble can do so. If one of them is conscious of special attraction for the other, or if there seems to be mutual attraction, it can be handled and kept in its place. It is only when such special attraction is encouraged, daydreamed about and deliberately given free rein that it leads to the kind of situation in which my correspondent now finds herself.

Apparently, she and this man have been meeting secretly, since she says they have "tried staying away from one another for a month, but find it impossible."

Admittedly, if the two of them have made a habit of their secret meetings, it would be hard to put a stop to the practice, but it definitely is not impossible. And why give up at the end of a month? Why not try—and really try—to make it a permanent break?

Look Will Power

What she really means, of course, is that neither of them has the necessary amount of will power to make a decision or do something they know is right and says. them stick to it. So they submit their consciences by whining that they "want to do the right thing," while at the same time excusing their failure to do it on the ground that their "love is too strong."

As the mother of two children, how would this woman feel if, some day in the years to come, one or her children were to do what she is now doing? Wouldn't it make her pretty unhappy to see a child of hers having no more integrity than to break up some one else's home, especially if that child made out a case for his own conduct on the ground that his mother had set him the example for it? She might think this over for awhile, and see if it doesn't help her stiffen that backbone of hers until she can stand straight enough to take some decisive step in the right direction.

That direction might be either one of two conditions, depending on what kind of husband she has.

Work Out Plan

If she has a husband who really loves her, and who has character enough to be able to hear the story from her and take it with understanding, tolerance and forebearance, then I suggest that she "give him the facts honestly," tell him that she wants to break this thing up and does not harrass other way. At any rate, by talking it over between them, they probably could work out a plan through which the necessary distance could be put between her and the man.

If, on the other hand, her husband is not likely to accept the situation and co-operate with her in working it out, but, instead, would probably react violently against both herself and the man, then her only alternative, unless she is willing to let the thing go on until it destroys two homes, is to tell the other man that whatever is between them must end, and then make good on what she says. If she refuses ever to meet him secretly again, and holds fast to that refusal, meticulously avoiding any sort of contact that would keep the relationship alive— even to the point of giving up both friendship with the man's wife, if it had to be—and if she then puts the whole situation on her family responsibilities, the chances are excellent that in time the episode could be left completely behind her.

But she cannot expect her feelings to change unless she does something about it herself. Only something what the right thing is and claims she wants to do it. I have given her two suggestions on how it might be done. Now it is up to her to demonstrate whether or not she is really sincere in what she says.

Readers' Friday Column

By Mary Moore

QUESTION:

. . . my husband has developed a diverticulis (small blister on intestine) and has been put on a diet free of all raw fruit and vegetables, pickles, no peas, corn, cabbage or brussels sprouts. In other words nothing rough . . . have you any suggestions to make meals more interesting? He is fond of vegetables but is cut down to mashed squash, carrots, parsnips, turnips. . .he is to eat lightly on his weight too. . . Mrs. B. C.

ANSWER:

You did not mention potatoes or sweet potatoes, but since they are root vegetables I believe they would be included in what he can have. None of these are weight-reducing vegetables so his meals will have to be made interesting by the meat you serve and the way you serve vegetables.

Try serving him perfectly broiled steaks (slightly rare), lamb chops, chicken liver omelettes, baked chicken, broiled lake trout and salmon fillets, lobster, etc., in which interest whetted. I am giving you vegetable recipes that are quite unusual and that I think he may have.

BAKED LIMA BEANS IN SOUR CREAM

These quantities make 6 to 8 servings but this improves when served a second time. You will like it too.

Twelve oz. dried limas, 1 teaspoon each dry mustard and soda, salt to taste, 1 tablespoon dark molasses, 1 pint sour cream. Wash beans, cover with cold water and soak overnight. Add mustard, salt and soda and boil 30 minutes gently, in water in which beans were soaked. Add molasses and sour cream. Mix, then pour into buttered baking dish. Bake at 350 deg. for 1-3 hours or until beans are tender. Stir down top crust as it forms, but do not stir during last 45 minutes of baking.

CARROTS—JAZZED UP

Grate or shred or grind carrots until you have three cups. Place in saucepan with tight cover with 1-4 cup hot water, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon grated onion, 2 teaspoons sugar and 2-4 to 1 teaspoon salt. Cover tightly and cook 3 to 5 minutes, stirring once or twice. For your husband's condition maybe these should be cooked 12 minutes.

CHICKEN AND SQUASH CASSEROLE

To serve four people order four pieces of chicken or broiling quality (or split a broiler in four), season pieces well with salt and pepper and dip in half-and-half mixture of flour and grated Parmesan cheese. Brown chicken in just enough shortening to prevent sticking. Cut 1 small yellow crookneck squash into thick chunks. Place chicken and squash in casserole, tucking squash in and around chicken. Sprinkle extremely finely chopped garlic over 1-2 clove of garlic salt. Sprinkle squash with salt and pepper. Add 1-3 cup heavy cream to pan in which chicken was browned, stir around to mix in brown bits and heat. Pour it over squash and chicken. Sprinkle with a little more grated Parmesan. Cover and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. until chicken and squash are tender—about 30 to 45 minutes.

QUESTION:

I find your recipes both tantalizing and delicious. I tried your brine cucumber for pickling. Well they were quite firm and crisp this brown, however when I processed them into "Sweet Cucumber Pickles" they are not firm though. What have I done wrong. How can I remove the salt? Can they be put in a freshly spiced syrup?—A. Faithful Reader.

ANSWER:

• At this distance I cannot understand why the pickles are not sweet unless there are too many pickles for the amount of syrup you made. In any event I find it far too salty, remove them from the syrup and soak them in cold clear water for 24 hours. Dry them. Cover with a syrup made of 6 cups vinegar, 2 cups sugar and 1 tablespoon each whole mace, cloves, stick cinnamon, boiled 15 minutes. Pour over just enough dried pickles to cover. Next day drain off syrup, boil for 10 minutes, and again pour over pickles. Let stand two hours. Boil the pickles in the syrup for ten minutes until they become clear. Cool quickly, covered, pack in sterile jars, cover with spiced syrup, seal. Ready in four weeks.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

Keep your Christmas good will alert—and keep it brightly shining

In these days before Christmas, keep your stock of good will particularly active and shining. Your world needs it. . . . your friends need it. . . . your co-workers need it. . . those who serve you in any capacity need it . . . and how your family needs its comforting grace. So don't rest your good will in a box marked "Not to be opened till Christmas!"

Return addresses on Christmas cards. . .proper, practical . . . make sense

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Is it proper to write one's return address on Christmas cards?—Faithful Reader.

Yes! It's proper. . . It's practical. . .it's sensible. . .and it's mighty good insurance for the safe arrival of your cards. The return address may be written in the upper-left corner of the front of the envelope, or on the flap. Or it's a good idea to use stickers printed with the name and address.

Christmas-time is the time when most of us get our address-book up-to-date and, for this pleasant pursuit, written or printed return addresses are of timely service.

"For every friend must have a name
And live upon a street
And it will often help you much
To have your list complete."

Fall Plowing Is Continuing In Many Areas

TORONTO (CP)—Frost has not yet entered the ground in a number of southern Ontario counties and fall plowing is continuing, the Ontario department of agriculture said Thursday in its weekly crop report.

Peterborough county reports farmers are pessimistic about the outlook for prices of farm products.

In Norfolk county Christmas trees are the big crop. Trees are bringing farmers from 25 to 70 cents each.

Wells and ponds in most parts of the province are back to normal after a prolonged dry spell in the fall.

In Huron county the news that the United States embargo on cattle will be lifted March 1 has caused little excitement. Farmers don't believe it will strengthen beef prices to any great extent.

Nootka Sailors Receive Welcome at Halifax

While bands played, sirens sounded and planes roared in welcome overhead, sailors of the Nootka surged off their ship at Halifax into the arms of their waiting families. For John McGregor of St. Thomas, Ont., the public demonstration was forgotten when he saw his wife, Roma and his daughter Valerie awaiting him on the dock. The Nootka had completed her second tour of duty in Korean waters, had voyaged 50,000 miles and fired more than 13,000 shells in 132 bombardments.—Central Press Canadian.

Doctor Keeps Patient Alive By Squeezing Heart

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto doctor whose hand ached for a week afterward told Thursday how he kept a patient alive by squeezing the heart when it stopped during an operation.

For 40 minutes Dr. David Pratt used his hand for a heart, the blood continued circulating and 74-year-old James Taylor remained alive.

Mr. Taylor, a retired lawyer, was injured in an automobile accident in October. A clot formed on his brain Dec. 6 and Dr. Pratt ordered an emergency operation.

While attendants were administering the anaesthetic Mr. Taylor's heart stopped beating.

"The patient is dead," the anaesthetist, Dr. Joseph Jackson, told Dr. Pratt.

"I slashed open his chest between the fourth and fifth ribs and shoved my hand in," Dr. Pratt said. "I took hold of the heart and began squeezing. For 40 minutes my hand was his heart."

Dr. Pratt said the patient's heart actually stopped for 1¼ minutes but it was 40 minutes before the normal beat was restored.

MARMORA

St. Andrew's W. M. S. Elects 1953 Officers

MARMORA — The December meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society was held in the church parlor on Tuesday afternoon with a fair attendance of members. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. E. C. Prentice.

The Christmas service was used the theme of which was "Christmas the Season of Birth and Rebirth."

Participating in this were: Mrs. W. F. Tupper, who gave the call and Mrs. J. Appleton and Mrs. Vaughan Glover (of the Mission Circle), who read the Scripture portions with hymns intermitting.

Lighted candles were on the table while the service was in progress.

The slate of new officers for 1953 was presented by Mrs. J. Sproul. They are: president, Mrs. W. F. Tupper; 1st vice-president, Mrs. T. J. Bateman; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. K. J. Crawford; recording and press secretary, Mrs. E. C. Prentice; treasurer, Mrs. W. J. Pack; Christian Stewardship secretary, Mrs. W. J. Jarvis; supply secretary, Mrs. R. Post; temperance secretary, Mrs. J. Appleton; Missionary Monthly, and World Friends secretary, Mrs. J. Sproul; pianist, Mrs. H. C. Barlow.

The meeting was closed by the new president, after which refreshments were served.

COLLISION PROBE ENDS

DETROIT (CP)—An investigation into the two-ship collision on nearby Rouge River last Saturday, which spilled 84,000 gallons of gasoline over the river and threatened shipping, ended Wednesday. Judgment as to cause of the collision between the tanker Blue Comet and the freighter Carl W. Myers will be handed down later. No one was injured in the collision but both ships were damaged.

Globe and Mail Says Kennedy Will Resign Post

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says today Agriculture Minister Kennedy will resign in January and will be replaced by Works Minister Thomas.

Col. Kennedy was not available for comment. Premier Frost said he had no comment on the story.

The newspaper says that Mr. Thomas may keep his present portfolio as well as assume responsibility for the agriculture department.

Mr. Kennedy, 73, often referred to as "Mr. Ontario," was first appointed agriculture minister in 1930. He left the post four years later when the Liberals under Mitchell Hepburn defeated the Henry government. He was appointed to the agriculture portfolio again in 1943 by George Drew and has held the post since.

Mr. Thomas was an agricultural representative for 23 years before entering politics. He represents Elgin.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Redner entertained the Farm Forum Group for their Christmas meeting on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Mikel, Consecon spent Monday with their daughter, Mrs. Mac Hubbs and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Green and children, Rawdon, were recent guests of his brother, Mr. Kenneth Green and family.

Former neighbors here were interested in the Brickman-Clarke wedding in Toronto on Friday. Carl, the groom, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brickman, now of Belleville, formerly resided here.

MOIRA

MOIRA—Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Howes, Roslin, and Mr. Fred Ketcheson were supper guests on Friday evening of Mr. and Mrs. James Vandewater.

Mr. Herman Holden spent the week-end in Brockville attending the youth rally.

Mrs. Lottie Vandewater has returned home to spend the holidays here.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kellar on the birth of a daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. John and family were tea hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walton Reid, Ivanhoe, on Tuesday.

Court Rules Man Predeceased Wife In Double Death

TORONTO (CP)—The estate of Mrs. Malcolm Felker became heir to the effects of the late Malcolm Felker of Hamilton Thursday when the Ontario Supreme Court ruled that Felker predeceased his wife.

Both were drowned in 1949 with their four-year-old nephew Murray Weekly when they were thrown from a boat which struck a submerged rock in Kenogamisis Lake, 125 miles northeast of Port Arthur.

Justice Rodolphe Chevrier said he was satisfied Mrs. Felker lived for some time after her husband died.

STRANGE BIRD

CARROT CREEK, Sask. (CP)—A queer bird was found in this northern Saskatchewan district. It measures two feet in length, has a four-foot wingspread and a narrow, four-inch beak. Blue in color and weighing approximately eight pounds, the bird has webbed feet.

prizewinning raisin pie — winner of 1st prize for raisin pie at this year's C.N.E. tells how she won with— VELVET pastry FLOUR
Mrs. Casper Mellinsky of Yonge hurst, Ontario, winner of 1st prize for raisin pie at Canadian National Exhibition.
Mrs. Mellinsky's prizewinning Recipe complete details — tips — secrets
"It was a great thrill to win the first prize for raisin pie at the 'Ex' last September. And now it's just as much of a thrill to share the secret of my success with you.
"For I know how much Velvet Pastry Flour helped me to win. In all my years of pie baking I've never found a flour so equal it. It handles so beautifully, gives my pastry just the right tenderness and flakiness.
"Of course, like all women who love to bake, I have my own little tricks. Here's how I make my pastry.
"The night before I make up this recipe:
2½ cups Velvet Pastry Flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ lb. lard (or vegetable shortening)
cold water (about ½ cup)
Sift Velvet Pastry Flour and salt together. Cut half the shortening into the flour until fine and mealy, using a pastry blender or two knives. Cut in remaining shortening until mixture is about the size of small peas.
Add cold water very gradually and mix pastry lightly until it can be pressed together.
"Then I let my pastry 'rest' — that is I put it in a cool place (not in the refrigerator) and leave it overnight.
"Next morning I prepare the filling:
2 lbs. raisins
2 cups water
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon Velvet Pastry Flour
½ cup corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon butter
Heat water to boiling point, add raisins and boil 10 minutes. Combine sugar and flour and add to hot mixture. Add corn syrup and allow to simmer 10 minutes or until mixture thickens. Remove from heat, add vanilla and butter. Cool.
"While filling cools I roll out my pastry and line a 9-inch pie plate. Then I pour in the filling and cover it with a lattice top.
"I bake this pie in a hot oven (about 450°F.) for 10 minutes, reduce the heat to moderate (about 375°F.) and bake for about 30 minutes longer, or until pastry is just slightly browned."
For flakier, tenderer pies and pastries, always use VELVET — the prize winning flour

A Child's Life of Jesus

"Jesus did not seem worried. He took the five loaves and the two fat fishes and He thanked God in Heaven for them."

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the last books written by the late Fulton Oursler, noted author of such volumes as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Neil O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER VIII

Soon Jesus added new friends to His band: one of these two men, named James, and his brothers, Jude and Simon; another named Thomas, and Judas, the twelfth and last. He was the weakest of them all.

So now there were the twelve men who lived and traveled with Jesus and heard and saw all the miracles. There was a new miracle almost every day.

Once when Jesus was preaching to five thousand people, He learned that they were all hungry. Many of them had come from far away just to hear Him. But they had brought no food along.

Andrew said: There is a boy here with five loaves of bread and two small fishes. That is all we have, dear Master."

Jesus did not seem worried. He told everybody to sit down on the hillside. And He took the five fresh loaves of good-tasting bread and two fat shiny fishes and He thanked God in Heaven for them. And He began to break the bread into pieces and told His helpers to pass them around. And somehow — no one knew except Jesus — there was enough bread and fish for all five thousand. Everybody had enough to eat. All they wanted.

When they were fed, and no one was hungry any more, Jesus told His friends to gather up the crumbs. God will give us plenty but we must never, never waste anything.

So they picked up the crumbs and the leftovers from those five loaves of bread and there were twelve baskets full.

Even more wonderful was the time Jesus walked on water. Some friends of His were riding in a boat on the lake. A terrific cloud came across the sky and a cold wind began to blow. The ship began to shake and to fill with water. It looked as if the ship was going to sink down to the bottom of the lake, and everybody aboard would be drowned.

Jesus was walking on the shore. He saw His friends in danger. So He started to walk out to them. He walked right out on the water. He stood on the stormy lake as if it were the land. The people in the boat saw someone coming but could not see who he was.

"It is I," said Jesus. "Be not afraid."

At His word, the storm went away and all were saved.

He even let Peter get out of the boat and come to Him. As long as Peter had faith he could walk on the water too. But he got scared, so of course, he began to sink down. But Jesus took his hand and kept him safe.

Because Jesus walked on the water and kept on healing the sick and told the people such kind and wonderful things the whole country was talking about Him. Nearly everybody loved Him. But a few did not. They were cowards, like Herod. They were afraid if they stopped doing wrong things as He asked them to do they could not be happy.

Everywhere He went, Jesus told people how to be good and happy. It is not enough just to be sorry for mistakes. We must try to make wrong things right.

A boy who steals his friend's marbles must give them back. If he loses the marbles, he must buy his friend some new ones. If you hurt yourself, maybe by eating too much you must not eat so much for a while.

Tomorrow: The story of the prodigal son.

Prime Minister Churchill's Government Improves Position

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Two developments dominated the British political year in 1953—continuing conflict within the opposition Labor party and an improvement in the position of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's Conservative government.

What may prove to be a landmark occurred in November, when the Conservatives won a by-election in the Wycombe division of Buckinghamshire. This was a tricky marginal seat, sought by a strong Labor candidate. The government victory, in a riding which the young Conservative Disraeli three times failed to capture in Queen Victoria's day, was the first clear sign of a growing Conservative popularity.

Legislatively, the year was almost featureless. Parliament ground out 68 acts on matters ranging from increased housing subsidies to a bill to revive the wartime home guard, but none was of major political significance.

Protracted Debate

Among the more interesting was a bill to revise and clarify the British law of libel and slander, previously considered one of the world's toughest. The bill, once within four minutes of being "talked out," went on the statute books after a bitter struggle.

Of three major measures promised by the Conservatives when they took office after the autumn election of 1951, none was near fulfilment at the end of 1953. A proposal to strengthen restraints on monopolies appeared to have been shelved. The other two proposals, involving denationalization of the iron and steel industry and of road transport, aroused powerful opposition and will likely face a battle before becoming law.

It was on balance a good year for the ruling party. In mid-1951, political prophets loudly forecast that Labor would be swept back to power in any new election. But the Conservatives apparently overcame an early unpopularity, perhaps caused by disappointment that the promised land had not been reached, and by the end of the year some optimistic supporters talked of staying in the saddle for a decade.

Majority Adequate

Although their majority in the House of Commons wavered between 10 and 30, depending on illness and other factors, the Conservatives easily won all parliamentary tests of strength. Talk of a financial crisis, brought to a head by summoning of Commonwealth finance ministers to a London conference in January, faded to a whisper in early autumn as import restrictions by sterling-area countries improved the balance-of-payments position.

Another factor in the improved Conservative position may have been the open warfare among the government's opponents. A long-developing conflict between a so-called right wing of the Labor party, led by former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, and a group led by left-winger Aneurin (Nye) Bevan, reached a new pitch of bitterness at the party's annual conference at Morecambe, Lancashire, in October.

In elections to the national executive, two supporters of Bevan, Harold Wilson and Richard Crossman, were chosen to the exclusion of Herbert Morrison and Hugh Dalton. Finally, the Attlee group temporarily gained the upper hand by forcing a majority vote for what amounted to a ban on the Bevanite "party within a party." This forced Bevan and his followers to stop holding organized private meetings as a group.

Rebuff for Bevan

In November balloting for places on the parliamentary Labor party committee, all Bevan supporters were defeated and Bevan himself barely squeezed into 12th and last place. This gave him a place in the opposition's "shadow cabinet" and probably set the stage for a truce in party warfare.

An important event in November was the state opening of the new Parliament by the Queen. In a brilliant setting of pageantry, the Queen drove to the Ho...e of Lords and read the speech from the throne to her assembled peers and commoners, diplomats and officers of state. It was the first time Parliament had been formally addressed by an uncrowned Queen since Victoria did so in 1837.

Cobalt Bombs To be Installed At Two Centres

TORONTO (CP)—Immediate installation of cobalt bombs at Port Arthur and Toronto was announced Thursday at a meeting of the Ontario Cancer Foundation.

The bomb, a new weapon against cancer, uses cobalt 60, the "poor man's radium," which is ordinary cobalt made radioactive. The cobalt remains a year in the "pile" at Chalk River until it becomes completely radioactive. It then is ready for its tissue-killing job.

The bomb to be installed at Port Arthur is the gift of Senator Norman Paterson of Fort William who offered approximately $55,000 toward the project.

The foundation decided that five or six bombs eventually will cover the province. Three of these will be at London, Port Arthur and Toronto. Sites for the others will be chosen from Ottawa, Kingston, Hamilton and Windsor. Each bomb costs $50,000 plus $20,000 installation costs. Each should serve a minimum of 100,000 persons.

Canada Produced More Food In 1952 But Virus Threatened To Ruin Economic Basis

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada produced more food in 1952 than at any time in her history, but a tiny virus threatened to topple that food mountain across Canada's economic back.

It was a good year and a bad year for Canadian farmers; a year of crisis and prosperity; of peak wheat production and the foot-and mouth plague; of near record incomes and declining prices.

But at the end most farmers were able to squeeze through on the upper side, with total cash income for the year slightly below the peak $2,300,000,000 reached in 1951.

Gross Value High

And despite declining food prices caused by the closure of traditional markets and increased world production, the gross value of Canadian farm production 1952 almost duplicated the record 1951 total of $3,500,000,000.

Farm operating costs climbed slightly, but volume of production reached a peak, with the index based on 1935-39 equalling 100, rising to about 187, up from 177.1 in 1951 and the previous high of 184.2 in 1942.

Canadian farmers turned out a peak 688,000,000-bushel wheat crop, created records in other field crop production, increased production of pork, milk, butter and eggs.

The thing appeared ripe for a big billing in food sales at high prices when foot-and-mouth disease struck in south Saskatchewan. Canada's biggest meat market—the United States—promptly shut its doors last February.

Provincial Embargoes

Provincial governments, fearing spread of the disease, declared provincial embargoes which threatened to cripple livestock production in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Meat prices dropped and threatened to pull other agricultural prices down. A big political and economic storm swept right to the feet of the federal government.

Federal price props were hastily erected. A big pork canning program received federal support, and an extraordinary barter deal was concluded to ship surplus beef to Britain.

The loss was heavy. Price support for beef and pork was expected to cost the federal treasury about $30,000,000—about doubling the total cost of all federal farm support programs since they were first started six years ago.

Rapid Cleanup

The disease was eradicated in record time. As the year ended the U.S. announced it would reopen the market March 1, 1953. The big crisis appeared to be at an end with most of the credit for averting economic disaster belonging to the farmers themselves.

They had lots of cattle to sell. But they held back sales on the advice of federal officials. The 23-cent-a-pound cattle price support will end when the U.S. market reopens, but the 22-cent-a-pound pork support will continue.

The U.S. market, however, was no longer as attractive as it had been in the past. It likely would absorb all of Canada's beef surplus, but prices were down from the peak levels of 1951.

With one bottle-over, the farmer faced others. His income has been relatively high all through most post-war years, but 1953 could be a turning point.

A lot will depend on what happens when representatives from 46 countries meet in Washington Jan. 20 in a final attempt to negotiate a new international wheat agreement.

Pact Ends in July

The current four-year pact ends July 31, 1953. Federal officials say if the countries don't come to an agreement in Washington then Canada will have to find other channels for selling her wheat.

Canada and other exporters want more for their wheat—more than the maximum $1.80 (U.S.) per bushel they received in 1952, and the importing countries are resisting every price advance.

There is even some doubt whether the U.S. congress would ratify any new agreement, if one is negotiated. There are tremendous wheat surpluses both in Canada and the U.S.

ON SPENDING SPREE

LONDON (AP)—Britons now are on their biggest Christmas spending spree in history, Bank of England figures showed Thursday. The bank's weekly statement said bank-notes in public circulation have hit a record high, of £1,530,246,663. Financial circles said the big Christmas spree is on despite the government's save, not spend policy.

Goods Stolen From Ordnance Depot Recovered

OTTAWA (CP)—A new case of pilfering from army stores was disclosed by the RCMP Thursday.

It involved the huge Flouffe Park ordnance depot in Ottawa which was cited by Acting Defence Minister Campney Wednesday night in the government's main defence against opposition attacks as result of the Currie report.

The RCMP said approximately $250 worth of clothing stolen during a period of a year by a civilian employee of the depot has been recovered. The man has made a statement but has not yet been detained, the police said, because the matter still is under investigation.

In the Commons Wednesday night Mr. Campney accused the opposition of trying to throw the shadow arising from the Camp Petawawa thefts over the whole army. He cited Flouffe Park as a place which contains stock worth nearly $100,000,000.

Someone Failed Says Magistrate In Court Case

GODERICH (CP)—"It is almost incredible to me that a boy in first form collegiate has no idea what it means to take an oath in court," Magistrate C. E. Holmes said Thursday when Lloyd Fuller, 14, said he did not know what an oath meant.

"When I think of all the money that has been spent on Goderich Collegiate some inquiry should be made of the teaching fraternity. Someone has failed in the educational system lamentably if the boy's story is to be believed."

The boy was a witness in a charge against his father, Austen Fuller, Goderich township, of allowing a person under 18 to operate a tractor which was involved in an accident with a car. Fuller was convicted and fined $5 and costs.

Checks on Santa

Doukhobors Halt Train

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—Doukhobors halted a train near the settlement of Gilpin to warn the crew of a plot to bomb the Great Northern Railway line, it was reported here Thursday.

The Doukhobors, members of the radical Sons of Freedom blamed for many acts of terrorism in the Kootenays, stood on the track waving flags and banners.

When engineer Harry Simpson of Spokane, Wash., stopped the train a spokesman told him of a planned bombing raid by another Doukhobor group. However, no reports of bombing were received here.

SEE SAUCERS ALOFT

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)—Hundreds of persons here gawked skyward Thursday and many claimed afterwards they had seen four to 16 "flying saucers" flying in formation. The objects were reported extremely high and moving in a northeasterly direction.

U.S. Officials Would Like To See Canada Contribute More Manpower, Money, Arms

Two United States senators have recently been critical of Canada's contribution to the Korean fighting. In this story, John Scull of The Associated Press presents the views of U.S. officials on Canada's contribution to the struggle against communism.

By JOHN SCALI

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States officials said Thursday they would like to see Canada contribute more manpower, money and arms to back up the West's fight against communism in Korea and Western Europe.

In the view of these officials, who cannot be quoted by names, wealthy Canada is one of the few Western countries which can afford to do this without straining its financial resources.

They made it plain they are no more critical of Canada in respect of sending more troops to Korea than they are of Australia, New Zealand and the Netherlands. The U.S. believes, they said, that all can send more troops to Korea to aid the United Nations' fight against Communist aggression.

These officials, who follow Canadian affairs closely, emphasized they fully appreciate all Canada has contributed thus far, both militarily and economically, to bolster the Western democracies.

But, they also made it clear that they agree with criticism of Canada's role in Korea voiced recently by two American senators.

Senators Richard Russell (Dem.-Ga.) and Paul Douglas (Dem.-Ill.), speaking separately, called on Canada, Australia and New Zealand to send more troops to Korea.

At a press conference at Sea Island, Ga., Russell said:

"On the basis of wealth and population, I don't think Canada is contributing as much as we are."

Canada has sent a brigade group of about 6,000 men to Korea, they said, and has assigned three destroyers and an air transport squadron to the United Nations command.

Speaking specifically of Canada, informed U.S. officials expressed the opinion privately that the Canadian government can increase the size of this contingent without jeopardizing Canada's home defences.

Further, they told a reporter, many American officials believe Canada can easily afford to increase military and economic aid to Atlantic Pact countries without upsetting its economy.

The Canadian government has appropriated about $325,000,000 during this fiscal year for military and economic aid to the North Atlantic nations, they said.

Talking about Canada's role in Western Europe, these officials said many American defence strategists believe Canada should think about increasing the number of troops it now has stationed in Western Germany.

Army's Radiation Detection Team Finds Location

OTTAWA (CP)—The Army's 12-man radiation detection team has found the exact location and intensity of radiation contamination at the atomic energy plant at Chalk River, Army headquarters announced Thursday.

The team, only one of its kind in Canada, Britain or the United States, has been working since Monday at the Chalk River plant where a burst of radiation occurred a week ago. Most of the plant was evacuated for a short time as a precaution.

Capt. R. H. Neame of Timmins, officer commanding the team which is based at Barriefield, said monitoring instruments used to protect the plant are so sensitive the luminous dial of a wrist watch is sufficient to set off an alarm.

Capt. Neame and his men, wearing special protective clothes and over-garments and rubber footwear, are working in the snow-covered area outside the plant.

The team was called in to map radiation in an area from 1,000 to 2,000 feet long and averaging 200 feet wide, covering the main stack of the reactor, where the radiation occurred last Friday from a pin-sized hole within the pile.

Members of the unit at Chalk River included Capt. Neame; Lieut. H. E. Rankin, Ottawa; Lieut. R. Ashton, Toronto; Lieut. A. M. Gilbert, Kingston; and Spr. D. A. Miller, Cornwall.

Landlord Locks Door, Three Spend 36 Hours in Cafe

WOODSTOCK (CP)—A squabble over a loan and a landlord who locked the front door caused three restaurateurs to spend 36 hours in their restaurant this week.

The men didn't go hungry, though. There was plenty of food in the restaurant and two of them were cooks.

"The only trouble was we had to sleep on the counter and we were afraid of rolling off," said Henry John O'Neill.

Mr. O'Neill, his partner, William A. Fodey, and a helper, Harry Gould, decided to "stick it out" in the restaurant when the landlord locked the front door. The back door was open but the men said they were afraid to leave until Thursday when Mr. O'Neill's lawyer phoned him. After checking terms of the lease he agreed that the lock at the front door could be sawed off.

Landlord W. F. Craig claims the men broke their lease when the previous holder, the lease sold business and lease to the two partners without his knowledge.

He said he is taking court action to have them evicted.

Victoria College English Head Dies in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — John D. Robins, head of the department of English at Victoria College for 15 years, died in Toronto Friday from a heart attack.

He was author of "The Incomplete Anglers," a humorous book which was the Governor-General's annual award for creative nonfiction in 1943. He also wrote "Collage Cheese" and edited "A pocketful of Canada."

Born in Windsor, Ont., he attended Albert College at Belleville and the Universities of Toronto, Marburg and Chicago.

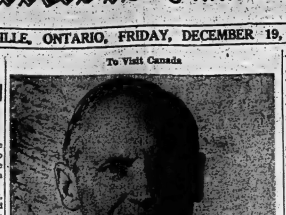
Surviving besides his widow, the former Leila Douglas of Strathroy, Ont., are four sisters and a brother.

Chief Given Custody

VANCOUVER (CP)—A 700-mile, $285 taxi ride paid off Thursday for Chief Daniel Leon.

When the chief was ordered to produce his three grandchildren in court here in a custody suit, he brought them in Vancouver in a taxi from Topley Landing, 700 miles north of here.

The children's white father had sought custody of the children by his Indian wife.



Mr. Justice H. S. Wood in a judgment awarded the children to the grandfather.

FIREMEN ASK RAISE

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto firemen have asked city council for wage increases ranging from $5.50 to $22 a week. The claims have been filed by the Toronto Firefighters' Association. Total wage increase for its 890 members would be $296,000. The association seeks $5.50 for about 700 firemen, $9.50 for 160 captains, $16.50 for 24 district chiefs and $22 a week more for the two platoon captains.

Siamese Twins Cling to Life By Slenderest of Threads

CHICAGO (AP)—The tiny Brodie Siamese twins, medical history's first survivors of a head-to-head surgical separation, clung to life today by the slenderest of threads.

Condition of one of the infant boys was reported "very precarious."

His brother has shown some improvement since completion of the day - long historic operation Wednesday night.

Doctors said the 15 - month - old twins will remain on the critical list for five or seven days, if they survive. The fate of one, they said, may be decided within hours.

"No change for the better or worse," was the report late Thursday night from pediatricians on duty at the bedside of the twins, Rodney Dee and Roger Lee Brodie.

Both children are in oxygen tents in the University of Illinois neuropsychiatric institute.

Roger is in serious condition. His brain circulation was impaired by the 13-hour and 40-minute operation. He still was unconscious late Thursday night and was receiving intravenous feedings and blood transfusions.

Rodney regained consciousness Thursday alternately crying and smiling.

Dr. Eric Oldberg, head of the university's department of neurology, said surgeons discovered there was only one sagittal sinus, the main passageway or vein draining blood back from both brains.

The surgeons had to make a swift decision to give one twin or the other the vital vein.

In describing details of the operation, Dr. Oldberg said the choice was made on the basis of which child did well and which didn't.

"Roger didn't do well."

So the vein went to Rodney.

Dr. Oldberg said chances are "almost nil" that new collateral veins will grow in Roger to help carry the burden now handled by smaller veins.

Brand Removed As Governor Of Don Jail

TORONTO (CP)—Removal of Thomas W. Brand from governorship of Toronto's Don Jail was announced Thursday by Reforms Minister Foote.

Brand, blamed by a royal commission for the escape of the Boyd beer bank robbery gang from the jail's death row cellblock last Sept. 8, was suspended after the break.

He will become assistant superintendent at Burwash prison farm near Sudbury.

The present Burwash superintendent, R. H. Paterson, will be the new governor of the jail.

Charles Sanderson moves up from assistant superintendent to superintendent at Burwash.

The minister said no deputy governors will be appointed at the jail.

Alexander Noble, former deputy governor, has been offered a job at the reformatory in suburban Mimico. The other deputy, George Jacobs, has been offered an important job in the inspection staff dealing with jails, Maj. Foote said.

Maj. Foote announced a special committee of the Ontario cabinet has been set up to deal with other recommendations of the royal commission report, prepared by Judge Jan Macdonnel of Toronto and made public last week.

Report May Break Dream of Giant Irrigation Dam

OTTAWA (CP)—A royal commission report may break the dream of seeing one of the world's biggest dams springing out of the dust bowls of Saskatchewan.

Reports are current that the commission, which sat for about a year, may advise the federal government against proceeding with construction of the South Saskatchewan irrigation and power project.

The commission, expected to make its findings public next week, is believed to be particularly critical of the project because of its expense—probably about $250,000,000—and its location—about 18 miles upriver from Outlook, Sask. Farms For Saskatchewan

For years Saskatchewan has been pressing for the development which would create an artificial lake about 135 miles long, holding enough of the big South Saskatchewan to cover almost 7,000,000 acres of farmland with a foot of water.

Proponents considered that it would provide sufficient irrigation for some 500,000 acres of good land and open up about another 3,000 farms in southern Saskatchewan. Fears of drought in that area would be at an end.

It also would provide about 435,000 kilowatt hours of hydro power a year—about 1½ times the power Mr. St. Laurent's motion, now on the order paper, to establish the defence expenditures committee.

Mr. St. Laurent said he "of course" did not accept Mr. Drew's interpretation of the report.

Mr. Drew asked that Mr. Currie be assigned to conduct a general inquiry.

Mr. St. Laurent said he had no intention of following Mr. Drew's example of transferring to the columns of the newspapers, where orderly debate is impossible, the discussion and disposition of this very important matter without further reference to Parliament."

In his second letter, Mr. Drew replied that the government had "very much in mind" the interest of the press when the statement of acting Defence Minister Campney was prepared.

Mr. Campney outlined the government stand-on the Currie report during the closing stages of the debate Wednesday night.

Running Argument

The three letters also carried on a running argument on whether the Progressive Conservative leader could have spoken, under House rules, in reply to Mr. Campney.

Mr. Drew said he had exhausted his allotted time in speaking on the last motion before the House prior to Mr. Campney's speech.

Mr. St. Laurent said he could have spoken again simply by asking a Progressive Conservative member to move another motion in the debate.

Mr. Drew replied sharply that such a motion was "out of the question." The motion would have been an amendment to the Progressive Conservatives' own motion and Mr. St. Laurent was "well aware" of the fact.

TO STAND TRIAL

TILLSONBURG (CP)—Fred C. Clarke of Tillsonburg district Thursday was committed to stand trial on a charge of manslaughter after a preliminary hearing before Magistrate H. G. Urquhart. Clarke was arrested and charged Oct. 25 two days after 10-year-old Horst Holler was killed on a bicycle by a car that failed to stop.

Although Commons Adjourned Currie Controversy Continues In Letters Between Drew, P.M.

OTTAWA (CP)—The heated debate over the Currie report on the Army works services continued Wednesday night in an exchange of letters between George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, and Prime Minister St. Laurent.

The exchange—two letters by Mr. Drew and one by Mr. St. Laurent—picked up where the Commons left off Wednesday night when it adjourned until Jan. 12. All letters were issued to the press.

St. Laurent Replies

In a 1,200-word letter, Mr. Drew reiterated a request for a general investigation into the "almost unbelievable inefficiency" in the defence department. He said was disclosed in the report by George S. Currie, Montreal chartered accountant and wartime deputy minister of national defence.

It was "neither necessary nor desirable" for the report to be dealt with by the Commons defence expenditures committee.

In a 200-word reply, Mr. St. Laurent said the report will be "the first item of government business" when the House reconvenes.

A spokesman in the prime minister's office said this referred to Mr. St. Laurent's motion, now on the order paper, to establish the defence expenditures committee.

Mr. St. Laurent said he "of course" did not accept Mr. Drew's interpretation of the report.

Mr. Drew asked that Mr. Currie be assigned to conduct a general inquiry.

Mr. St. Laurent said he had no intention of following Mr. Drew's example of transferring to the columns of the newspapers, where orderly debate is impossible, the United Nations Concede Japs Right to Hold Commonwealth Troops but Not to Punish

The Japanese press recently printed exaggerated reports of a "reign of terror" by Commonwealth troops in Korea, Japan. The reports may have been in retaliation for Canada's efforts to obtain jurisdiction over all Commonwealth service troops in the country. In this story, last of a series, Bill Boss, Canadian Press Staff Writer who has Canadian forces, describes the international negotiations.

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

KURE, Japan (CP)—The conduct of Canadian and other Commonwealth troops in Korea is providing efforts to retain the same privileges in Japan as U.S. service men.

U.S. troops who break Japanese law have the right to be tried and punished by American military authorities instead of Japanese civil courts.

Right on Trial

The United Nations, whose sprucing is being done by Commonwealth diplomats, recognized that jurisdiction must be with the offending soldier's army. They conceded the right of arrest but not of trial and punishment.

The Japanese reply that the UN will use ideal severity enough with wrong-doers and that the situation in Korea proved it. Most Commonwealth troops in Japan are stationed there as result of occupation and base installations of British Commonwealth forces in Korea.

Commonwealth authorities have said they agree with the Japanese that the military crime rate is high and have promised to bear down on prevention. Recently there has been a sharp decline in the military crime rate.

However, a study by The Canadian Press discloses that Japanese, not Commonwealth troops, are responsible for the Kure "reign of terror" reported in the Japanese press. Between April 28 when Japan's sovereignty was restored and Nov. 15, Commonwealth offences in the Japanese official records accounted for only 7.81 per cent of Kure's 3,061 serious offences.

While Commonwealth crime is embarrassingly high—and for several months Canadians were involved in more offences than all other Commonwealth troops combined—it now is a minute fraction of Kure's crime.

Japanese View

Five factors are evident in the Japanese position:

1. They are jealous of their sovereignty and want no return of 19th century extraterritorial privileges for foreigners.

2. They are smarting from offences committed by occupation troops before last April 28—many of them unreported and unpunished.

3. They have noted that UN countries have agreed tentatively to surrender jurisdiction over NATO troops in Europe.

4. They say Japanese crime is influenced by Commonwealth misconduct.

5. Japanese officials and the press are annoyed at poor liaison with, and public relations facilities in, the Commonwealth set-up.

The Commonwealth counter-arguments voiced in Tokyo are:

1. Under a separate agreement, the United States has been granted jurisdiction over U.S. troops in Japan. The UN wants all its forces in the theatre on the same footing.

2. Extra-territorial privileges is not involved. Japan has jurisdiction over civilians from UN countries, but not over troops.

3. The NATO agreement is not yet in force. When it is, the same formula will be applied in Japan.

4. The Commonwealth crime record is better now.

Diplomatic Efforts

An effort is being made by Commonwealth diplomatic missions to win the confidence of the Japanese. Arthur Menzies, Canadian charge d'affaires in Tokyo, is in daily touch with Japanese officials. Canada enjoys perhaps the best relations of any Commonwealth country, despite the high crime figures for her troops in Kure.

A result is that without exception Canadian soldiers arrested by Japanese police have been turned over to Canadian authorities for trial in Canadian Army courts.

"But we are holding this position by a thread in the spirit of an agreement," one Canadian official said.

Japanese law enforcement officers in Kure accuse Commonwealth officers of failure to tell them what happens to troops accused of offences. Police Chief Matsuo Kirihara told me the Canadian Army has reported disposition of only one case since last May. I heard similar complaints from the chief prosecutor and the public prosecutor.

Chief Kirihara said he knows Canadian Army courts-martial are public but that he has never been told when or where they are to be held.

Military Difficulties

Maj. Roy Brown of Moncton, N.B., Canada's assistant judge-advocate-general in Kure, says the Japanese authorities will not accept written statements in English. He says he has her a staff to make translations and so he tells the Japanese officials orally. Apparently this has been satisfactory.

The Canadian Army has no public relations officer in Kure and I found no evidence of any effort to win support of the Japanese press or keep it informed.

A more delicate problem in public relations is that the Japanese people are excluded from army messes. No Canadian officer may introduce a Japanese into his own mess or the Kure Officers' Club. The same rule applies to Commonwealth officers generally. There are no such restrictions in U.S. army units.

The ban on Japanese restricts the Commonwealth troops' entree into Japanese circles. Good families will not welcome men who cannot treat them as equals.

As a result, only fly-by-night personal relationships are formed between Canadians and Japanese. The only women most soldiers meet, for instance, are waitresses, professional hostesses, some saleswomen and prostitutes.

Massey Suggests Festival of Arts For Dominion

OTTAWA (CP) — An international festival of the arts, to be held in Ottawa, was suggested on Thursday by Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canada's governor-general.

The festival might be attempted —at least once as an experiment— "to stimulate and encourage that active participation in music and drama and the other arts which are becoming increasingly characteristic of life in this city and in Canada as a whole," he said.

The proposal by Mr. Massey who headed the royal commission which produced a monumental report on Canadian culture in 1951, was made in a speech prepared for the Canadian Club here.

Mr. Massey said the festival could find a pattern in the annual festival of music and arts held in Edinburgh.

"There would be all sorts of difficulties in the way, of course," he said. But throughout this country's history unimaginable things have been done."

"They still can be done," he added.

It would be foolish to attempt a close imitation of any other celebration — "we must always do things in our own way."

"Such an occasion, I would suggest, should be international, but with a special emphasis on Canadian cultural achievement, which is not as well known as it ought to be — to ourselves or to those from abroad."

Mr. Massey said the festival would encourage active participation in the arts and "suggest to visitors from abroad that Canada is not just a dollar country."

The festival would need a "pez"

Blakelee Honored

WASHINGTON (AP)—Alton L. Blakeslee, a science reporter for The Associated Press, and Morton M. Hunt, a free-lance writer, won $1,000 awards Wednesday for science writing.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science named the writers, both New Yorkers, to receive the annual AAS — George Westinghouse awards.

Blakeslee, son of the late Howard W. Blakeslee, long-time science editor of The AP, was the winner in the field of newspaper science writing. His prize-winning project was a series of four articles based on a visit to the Jackson Memorial laboratory at Bar Harbor, Me.

Hunt won his prize for an article "Neurosis Factory," in the July issue of Esquire Magazine.

Sunday School Lesson:

Christmas Is So Simple

By ROY L. SMITH

It is said that St. Francis of Assisi is responsible for a great deal of beauty and loveliness with which we associate the name and the Christmas season.

He was something of an artist, but he was also much more of a saint, with a real understanding of the hearts of the plain people. There lay upon his spirit a great burden; he had the feeling that the world was losing, or had lost, its sense of the magnificence of the coming of the Christ Child.

With a fine understanding of the simple spirits of the plain people he asked the pastor of a little village church to let him use the church on Christmas Eve, and when he had been given the consent he filled the church with hay, pulled an ox and an ass into the sanctuary, and persuaded a young mother to sit beside them with her baby in her arms. Then he sat down and wrote simple little carols—homey and sweet, such as little children love—and taught the people to sing them.

The clergy were outraged. They said he had desecrated the holy place, but the plain people were overjoyed. "We understand," they said, and broke into singing the songs that Francis had taught them. From that simple service so much of reverence and beauty has come!

As Simple as That

The true Christmas is as simple as that. God comes down into life in the commonplace and beautiful things, as surely as in the magnificent and the mysterious.

The wise and the learned—the scholarly—have tried to explain away the Virgin birth, as though it were a violation of some natural law. They have ruled out miracles as though they were impossible. But where, if you please, can you hope to find anything more miraculous than any birth?

> The Uniform Sunday School Lesson for December 21 is "Emmanuel—God With Us", Matthew 1.

Johann Sebastian Bach sat down to a plain meal of plain food, and a few hours later—made strong by the simple fare—he sat down at the great organ and composed music that will never die. What can be more miraculous than that!—boiled potatoes transformed into great chorales!

Each In Its Place

There is a place for the magnificent in religion, and in life. The great cathedral serves one purpose, and the humble manger another. The majestic organ played upon by a great master peals forth its mighty volume of praise, and the little children beside the fireplace lisp their childish voices in singing Christmas carols. Neither could ever hope to substitute for the other.

There is a place in good religion for the intricate logic of the theologians and the complicated doctrines of the doctors of the law, but there is also a place in good religion for the simple sense of a manger, an ox, an ass, and a mother watching reverently over the manger in which there lies her first born. But at Christmas time, let's go to the manger and see this great thing that God has done for all the world.

God Is With Us

The sacred name Immanuel was an ancient treasure among the Jews. In the hour of the nations' greatest peril Isaiah, the prophet, had promised that a child should be born to a young woman who would give him the name "Immanuel" meaning by that to proclaim to the people the fact that God is with us. What glorious news that must have been to the hard-pressed nation, surrounded by avaricious foes intent upon its destruction. And this in turn, is the message of Jesus to the world unto this day. God is with us; even in this year of 1952. Mankind is not an orphan race let loose in this vast and incredible universe. We have a heavenly Father who is standing by. Some day we will come through.

Public Power And Water Corp. Wants to Join

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public Power and Water Corp., Trenton, N.J., urged the power commission today to license it to join with Canada in building a big St. Lawrence river project.

The private concern's counsel, Frederick P. Benedict, explained at a commission hearing the company's proposal is similar to that of the power authority of New York state, a public agency.

The commission now has the New York proposal under advisement.

Public Power's proposal differs, Benedict said, in that the company would build a toll-free seaway on the American side of the river. Canada has announced plans to build one on its side of the river despite repeated refusals by the U. S. Congress to vote its approval of the project as one to be undertaken jointly by the two countries.

Offers Navy Rides

The lawyer said Public Power also offers to construct a dike and intake works to permit the Aluminum Company of America to generate St. Lawrence power during the period of project construction.

The New York application contains neither of these features.

Despite public power's offer to construct the dike and intake works, Randall J. Leboeuf Jr., Alcoa counsel said his company opposes the application of Public Power.

Benedict said Public Power would finance the project, which it estimates would cost $385,021,300, through public sale of securities.

Public Power proposes to sell its share of the energy generated to private utilities.

Takes No Stand

Benedict, in his opening statement, told examiner Gleb R. Law the Public Power intends to show it would be a "better instrumentality" to engage in the project than New York's public agency.

Willard Gaichell, counsel for the commission, said the commission's legal staff takes no stand at present on Public Power's application. He added, however, that the application contains "serious deficiencies."

Benedict called as his first witness, Hugo A. Spallinzi, president of Public Power.

You can't go ALL-OUT If you feel "ALL-IN"

These days most people work under pressure—worry, stress, short tempers. The strain on body and brain makes physical demands on the kidneys harder to meet. Today's many things, burning midnight oil, overwork, hurry-scurry, all add up to backache, headache, dizziness. When kidneys get out of order, nature asks you to help them. Drink lots of water. Then, for backaches, disturbed rest, that "tired-out" feeling, troubled bodily action, due to kidney disorders, ask for Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. Then you feel better—sleep better—work better. Ask for Doan's Kidney Pills at any drug counter.

All Madrilenos Must Summon Serenas to Open Doors at Night

By EMILIO MOYA

MADRID (AP) — If you live in Madrid and want to get into your house after the theatre, you'll need help.

From 11 p.m. until dawn, the city's night watchmen, called "serenos," are tools. They have the keys to all front doors.

They come on duty, all 1,500 of them, at 10:30 p.m. and make the rounds of the houses in their district, telling the janitors to shut the front door. The sereno is in charge until the janitor gets up to sweep off the sidewalk in front of the building.

And every night, all over Madrid you can hear housewives screaming "sereno" and clapping their hands to urge him to come more quickly, especially if it's a raw, winter night.

In most cases, the job is passed down from father to son. Sometimes a post is sold, bringing $500 and even $600.

The serenos live exclusively from the tips they get for opening doors or guarding shops. In some aristocratic sectors, a sereno may make as much as 8,000 or 9,000 pesetas a month, as much as the director-general of a government department. The lowliest of serenos still make 2,000 pesetas —more than an army major.

According to unofficial estimates, 950,000 Madrilenos live in apartments, the remaining 350,000 in private homes or hotels. But it doesn't make any difference; all doors must be closed and the sereno is there to take his toll.

Gut Dam Being Removed From St. Lawrence R.

PRESCOTT (CP) — Great Lakes water has been flowing through the St. Lawrence river channel once plugged by Gut Dam, the superintendent of the company removing the dam said Wednesday.

The flow began with the partial removal of an earth dam thrown across the river before Gut Dam, said Aubrey McMaster of Toronto Dredge and Dock Ltd. The earth dam was installed to insure what McMaster called "quiet water" for his firm's operations.

McMaster said the next step would be to finish removing the earth dam. Then, he said, a short remaining section of Gut Dam will be knocked out.

Gut dam, itself an earthen structure, was installed 50 years ago by Canada to divert water into the Galoop Canal, which enables river shipping to pass the international rapids.

Lake Ontario shore residents had claimed it was a partial cause of high water in the lake.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

PETES TONIGHT!

The lead in this senior "B" loop is changing faster than Tommy Manville's wives. An evening ago the Kingston Goodyears were on top of the heap. Then came Oshawa's potent Truckers and they not only grab themselves a couple of points at the expense of the Orillia Terriers (note, the Orillians are known as the Pentiacs, not the Terriers. After all you've gotta give some kicks up there a publicity broke), then banged it they don't turn around and hand the ground Clippers from Stouffville a 7-6 setback. And that's double win puts the Truckers comfortably in the lead with 15 points, two ahead of Reddenville's Combs.

However, the Glens are not worrying, too much, that is. They can't be pushed from fourth spot although the Petes who are here tonight can creep up within two points if they win. As matters stand now Oshawa is out in front with 18 points, Kingston in second with 16, Stouffville is breathing down the Goodies' necks with 15, while the Glens have twelve, four ahead of the Petes. Orillia trails with six.

And tonight's game should be a typical Peterborough-Belleville battle: The Petes haven't suffered any ice-lame members from an overdose of Lady Luck's warm smiles, and they'll be out for Metro core this evening. The Glens are just as anxious to stay up there in the first division and haven't the slightest intention of being yanked back on their haunches by the saucy blokes from Fordonville. It should be a tidy till.

MAKING THE ROUNDS

Gaye Stewart has one more to go. One more team that is, and he will have played for every one of the six National Hockey League clubs. Mr. Speed-Demon recently purchased from the New York Rangers by the Montreal Canadiens has now played for five different N.H.L. teams. He broke into the National League with Toronto Maple Leafs. He went from the Leafs to Chicago in the match publicized five-for-two trade. He was traded to Detroit prior to the start of the 1950-51 campaign, and after one season with the Red Wings was swapped to New York for Tony Leswick. This was his second year with New York. Ever since he turned professional Stewart has wanted to play with Canadiens, and at long last he gets his wish.

RETRACTIVE DISPLAY

Hockey fans entering the Montreal Forum this season are in-between with the attractive window display in the Forum lobby. Frank Selke, managing director of the Forum, is the possessor of many of hockey's most prized sticks—sticks that once flashed lightning goals for some of the greatest players in the history of hockey, and the window display was his idea. Among the sticks to be seen in the lobby display are the ones with which Maurice Richard scored his 200th and 300th N.H.L. goals; the stick that propelled Charlie Conacher's 225th N.H.L. goal into an opposing team's net; the last stick used by Ace Bailey in that unforgettable game in Boston on December 12, 1933. Other sticks in the display are the ones used by the following players in scoring the following N.H.L. goals: Tim Hicks, 234th; Lorne "Gabby" Chabot, 100th; Harvey Schriner, 201st.; Syl Apps, 290th.; Harvey Jackson, 290th.; Bill Mosienko, 299th.; Woody Dumart, 299th.; Milt Schmidt, 300th., and Max Bentley, 300th.

WHERE THE GOALS ARE SCORED

There were 10 players in the National Hockey League on the morning of December 10, with 10 or more goals this season. Only one of the 10 players scored more goals playing away from home. The exception was the controversial and colorful Maurice Richard. The fiery French Canadian tallied seven of his 10 goals up to December 10 before out of town arrivals. Scoring only three of his 10-goal output in Montreal, the Rocket certainly disproved any theory that he may have been a "homer."

Detroit's pair of All-Star wingers, Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay, have each scored considerably more goals at home than on the road. Howe, top marksman in the League with 14 counters, notched 10 of these at the Detroit Olympia. Lindsay, All-Star left winger two of the last five years, scored six of his 12 goals at home. Johnny Wilson, outstanding second-year player with Detroit and the third member of the Wings in the 10 goals or more category, notched seven of his 10 goals while playing in the Auto City.

Tiny Wally Hergesheimer, New York Rangers' sensational right winger and second highest goal-getter after Howe, scored 10 of his 12 goals this season before New York fandom. Doctor Ivan Irwin's sole representative in the 10-goal class is Flaming Fleming Mackell, and the effervescent centre has scored seven of his 10 goals playing at the Boston Gardens.

BIGGEST CROWD IN THREE YEARS

The 16,197 fans who witnessed the Toronto-Chicago game on Sunday, December 7, in the Windy City, was the largest crowd to see a hockey game in Chicago in three years. The fighting never-say-die spirit that the Black Hawks have displayed so abundantly this season is evidently catching on with the Chicago public.

Bobo Olsen Verdicts Hayes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Carl (Bo-Bo) Olson of San Francisco punched out a unanimous 10-round decision over Norman Hayes of Boston Thursday night. Olson weighed 163, Hayes 163½.

The two high-scoring middleweight contenders staged a savage battle, swinging punches almost from the bell to bell in every round.

Olson, U. S. No. 1 challenger for the championship, effectively banged Hayes with rights to the jaw and to the body.

Teams With 'Boom' Geoffrion To Score Sensational 'Triple'; Leafs Hold Wings to 1-1 Tie

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two hard-fought tie games in one of the closest races the National Hockey League has seen became routine Thursday night when a sensational double hat-trick was pulled at Montreal and the most sought-after rookie of all time helped himself to one of the triples.

Jean Beliveau, towering young scoring whiz with Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League on up by the Montreal Canadiens a bit. He did, and he lifted 14,641 Montreal fans right out of their seats with his spectacular three-goal display.

It was almost an anti-climax when Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, NHL rookie of the year last season, came roaring along with his own triple. The two 21-year-olds accounted for all of Canadiens goals in the 6-1 victory over New York Rangers.

The record-searchers were still thumbing through the books to find out when one team has scored two hat tricks for all the winning team's goals.

Leafs—Wings Tie

On another NHL front Metro Prystai scored for Detroit Red Wings in the final period to gain a tie with Toronto Maple Leafs, matching the goal Harry Watson had scored in the middle period.

The tie left the Red Wings on top in the staid race, three points head of the Canadiens, who broke a second-place tie with Chicago Black Hawks.

At Chicago Real Chevrefils and Pentti Lund gave Boston Bruins a lead in the opening period before George Gee halved it. The teams saved off in the second period on goals by Jack McIntyre of Boston and lanky George Gee of the Hawks.

With little more than five minutes left, veteran Sid Abel, Hawk coach, teamed with Gee to bring about the tie and keep the Hawks one point ahead of the pressing Boston Bruins.

The Leafs remained in fifth place, two points behind the Bruins while the lowly Rangers were still buried in the cellar.

The hapless Rangers battled furiously enough in Montreal, but their defence couldn't cope with Beliveau, Geoffrion and company. Nick Mickoski scored the Rangers' first goal and in the second period Paul Ronty's goal gave the Rangers a short-lived 2-2 tie.

Maurice (Rocket) Richard had a hand in all three goals by Beliveau. Billy Reay and Eric Nesterenko assisted Geoffrion on each of his goals.

Beliveau supporters flocked to the Canadiens' dressing room after the game.

"It wasn't so much different from the Quebec Senior League," said big Jean, six-feet-two tall and 210 pounds minus uniform.

"Of course I had no idea before the game I'd get three goals."

Then he added:

"Yes, it was a little strange at first working on the line with Richard. It will be different Saturday night."

All the Rocket did was feed him those passes for three goals.

Beliveau is up with the Canadiens for a three-game trial-issue stretch. For two seasons the Canadiens have tried to sign him. He has consistently refused, preferring to stay in Quebec where his friends and a fat salary and suddenly-acquired business interests—are.

No games are scheduled for tonight.

Myron Wilson Heads Tribe; Ryan Quits

CLEVELAND (AP)—Myron H. Wilson, an "average fan" with a few shares of baseball stock but no management experience in professional sports, took over today as president of Cleveland Indians.

Ellis Ryan quit the job under fire Thursday and Wilson's first act as new chief was to strengthen the hand of Hank Greenberg, team general manager.

Wilson, saying he would continue his insurance business, indicated a freer hand for Greenberg by pointing out he would not make the presidency a full-time job.

"I don't know much about picking ball players or even trading them," he added, "that's Hank's department."

Greenberg's differences with Ryan on operational policies had been a factor in the dispute leading to Ryan's departure, although the former home run slugger never took part in the front-office squabble.

Although among the anti-Ryan group in the present controversy, Wilson, 63, was a friend of Ryan and was in the syndicate formed by Ryan which bought the club from Bill Veeck three years ago.

Ryan's leading to Wilson's election broke into the open two weeks ago at the league meeting at Phoenix, Ariz. Details never have been made public, but Ryan was criticized for advocating purchase of the Indianapolis team in the American Association. Indianapolis lost money last year.

Ryan issued a statement saying "an understanding was reached calling for the purchase by six principal stockholders of the stock (about 1,300 shares) owned by the so-called Ryan group."

It was estimated Ryan would gain about $250,000 by selling.

Race Fix Figure Deported by USA

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Harry Swarts, 36, of Toronto, who figured in the imposition of race fixes at the Fort Erie, Ont., track in 1951, was deported Thursday.

Immigration officials here ordered the deportation after Swarts had appeared in Federal Court and pleaded innocent to failing to disclose a criminal record when he entered the United States from Canada Nov. 12. He then posted bail.

Swarts was convicted in Welland, Ont., in 1947 and sentenced to three months in a reformatory. The conviction grew out of the race-fix investigation.

Seixas, Trabert Trim Italian Tennis Stars

By GAYLE TALBOT

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Playing together for the first time, Vic Seixas of Philadelphia and Tony Trabert of Cincinnati today crushed the veteran Italian pair of Gianni Cucelli and Marcello Del Bello in Davis Cup action at the United States in the Davis Cup interzone tennis finals.

As the scores of 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 indicate, the green American team got progressively sharper as the match went on.

Such a knowing Australian critic as Jack Crawford, once one of the world's greatest doubles stars, commented afterwards that the new American combination looked good enough to give the Australians plenty of trouble in the challenge round at Adelaide 10 days hence.

Seixas played on a sore, slightly swollen right ankle which he hurt when he fell in Thursday's singles match against Fausto Gardini.

The two Italians, who proved themselves mighty trencherman during their visit to Australia, put considerable fire into their play in the first set and had the crowd cheering as they applauded Seixas' delivery to square it at 4-4.

But at that point they began to run out of gas whereas this tall, young rivals stepped up the pace and it rapidly became no contest.

With the interzone final already in Seixas, the U.S. team captain, said he would stay out of Saturday's doubles contest and let Ham Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., take his place against Del Bello, who will substitute for Cucelli.

Flingin' Frankie Filchock Flips Completed Pass at Eskimo Moguls

By DON MATHESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—Question: Is the Western Conference coaches' line-up final?

Edmonton Eskimos, the Western Interprovincial Football Union championship Grey Cup finalists, Thursday offered flingin' Frank Filchock all comers for the 1953 season that starts "around" $13,000 and can reach $18,000.

But Flingin' Frank threw it right back, saying the Eskimos had changed the terms agreed upon before Filchock took his team to the Grey Cup game in Toronto.

Filchock's present contract expires Dec. 31. If a new contract is not signed, Filchock becomes the third western coach in three years to have his team after winning the conference title and then losing the Grey Cup final.

Frank Larscel of Winnipeg Blue Bombers was bounced for George Trafton after the 1950 Grey Cup final and Harry Smith was cut loose by Regina Roughriders in favor of Jim Dobbs after the 1951 Grey Cup.

Of course, Filchock, if he leaves on his own hook. But the three-year-long jinx that the new coach comes along when you lose the Grey Cup seems to be working.

Filchock says he and team President Ken Montgomery "agreed on the money" before the Eskimos' Grey Cup trip, "but when I got back Doug drew up a draft and presented it to me. My objects in a clause that says "any money I make from radio jobs, newspapers, magazine articles, and any other revenue has to be turned back to the club."

The "two-year" contract also contained a clause that "whether you like it or not" if the Eskimos fail to make the conference playoffs next year, a clause to which Filchock says he doesn't object too strongly.

An official source who declined to be named explained club feelings about the contract.

Sugar Ray Robinson Has Retired; Was One of Ring's Alltime 'Greats'

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—Middleweight champion Sugar Ray Robinson positively retired from the ring Thursday to devote his time to his business and dancing career. He made the announcements through Abe Greene, commissioner of the National Boxing Association in a beckhanded punch at the New York state athletic commission.

As New York stripped Robinson of his title Dec. 4 for not defending within six months, the 32-year-old Harlem dandy made his formal retirement through Greene in a mimeographed release.

Sugar Ray, one of boxing's all time greats with only three defeats in a brilliant career of 137 pro fights, said he picked the NBA because it represented the majority of the boxing commissions of the world and because it had been extremely helpful to him.

Pressure Was On

"At this stage of my career I don't get a cent else my followers the best I have," said Robinson to a telephone interviewer. "I don't want to let them down.

"But a lot of very big people, and I mean very big people, is boxing got a lot of pressure on me to go through with a Randy Turpin match.

"But I felt I should have made this announcement long before so I made up my mind. It's a cinch.

"I don't want to be like a lot of others who, didn't retire in time."

Robinson won't have to worry. He has a bar and grill, a beer and ale distributing agency, a lingerie shop, a Detroit hotel, a dining establishment and a real estate office in Harlem. He started a new career as a night club entertainer Nov. 5 and is booked for a long tour.

The Robinson announcement hardly was a bombshell. There had been rumors of his retirement ever since his collapse in the intense heat after 13 rounds with Joey Maxim last June 25.

Robinson won his first 40 fights as a pro after a sensational start as an amateur. His first loss was to Jake La Motta in 1943. Drawn with Jose Basora in 1943 and Henry Brimm in 1949 were the only other blots until he was beaten by Turpin in a tremendous upset at London in July, 1951. Robinson evened the matter with a 10th round TKO over the British champion to recapture his title in September, 1951.

He was winning easily from Maxim in June when he collapsed from the heat and was unable to come out for the 14th.

Britain's Boxing Board of Control Wants 'Randy' In LONDON (AP) — The chairman of the British Boxing Board of Control said Thursday night Britain would not recognize any bout for the world's middleweight championship unless England's Randy Turpin takes part.

"The news of Sugar Ray Robinson's retirement comes as no surprise," said J. Onslow Fane, who added:

"I speak personally, but I'm sure my colleagues on the board will support me when I say we will not recognize any world middleweight title fight as such unless Turpin is in one corner."

Well, Lookit! Educationists Rap Minor Sport

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Education Association Thursday struck out at what it called high-pressure sports competition among youngsters of elementary or junior high-school age.

A committee completing a three-year study condemned such things as little league baseball, "little" bowl games, midget football and "diddy" basketball for youngsters 12 years old or younger. (For real sullen, by the way, there's even "diddy biddy" basketball).

The committee said highly-organized competition gives youngsters an exaggerated idea of the importance of sports and may even be harmful to them.

The views of the committee were summed up in a 46-page booklet entitled, "Desirable Athletic Competition for Children."

Canuck Golf Team Wins Round In International

MIAMI-BEACH, Fla. (CP)—The oldest golfer in the international four-ball tournament, Willie Klein, 51, teamed with Al Brosch Thursday to oust Sam Snead and Jim Ferrier, 3 and 2, in a first-round surprise.

The only Canadian team entered —Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon—defeated Art Doering of Cincinnati and Bob Gajda of Birmingham, Mich., 4 and 3.

The defending champions, Pete Cooper, White Plains, N. Y., and Claude Harmon, Mamaroneck, N.Y., were eliminated in the day's first match over the scenic 6,837-yard Normandy Isle course, Herman Barron, White Plains, and Glen Teal, Buffalo, downed them one-up.

Citadelles Whip Generals 5-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa Generals are finding their tour of interlocking schedule games with Quebec junior teams just as tough as other Ontario Hockey Association junior teams.

None of the OHA teams, with the exception of Toronto Marlboros who won three out of four, have found the Quebec boys to their liking.

Quebec Citadelles, currently running second in the Quebec series, downed the Generals 5-3 Thursday night. Michel Labadie notched three goals for the Cits.

Camille Henry and Jacques Plante scored the other Quebec goals as the home-towners took an early lead and never lost it. The victory moved the Citadelles within two points of Montreal Canadiens who now lead the league.

Harry Sinden, Fred Etcher and Roger Maisonneuve were Oshawa sharpshooters. The Generals are fourth in the OHA series.

The Marlboros travel to Barrie tonight for a game that could be a play-off preview. Marlies are in first place, six points ahead of Barrie. It will be the first meeting of the two clubs since Barrie acquired high-scoring Orv Tessier and goalie Bill Harrington from Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts. Kitchener visits Guelph in the other OHA game.

Aussies Spring Tennis Surprise

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Australia's Davis Cup selectors sprang a surprise today by naming 18-year-old Lew Hoad as the fourth member of their tennis team that will defend the Davis Cup against the United States at Adelaide 10 days from now.

The other three players are the same as last year, Frank Sedgman, Ken McGregor and Mervyn Rose.

Clawless Cats March On to Record Lose 22nd Straight to Brantford

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Johnny Horeck, fiery coach of Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians has released his last blast at the referees of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior southern group.

Horeck, who was a constant critic of the officials, has signed as playing coach with Sydney Millionaires of the Maritime Major Hockey League and will take over in a few days.

The other team that lost its coach this week dropped its second game in a row Thursday night and slipped out of first place. Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds, who fired Coach Don Grosso a few days ago, were defeated 6-3 by Sudbury Wolves who moved into first place.

Draw Closer

In the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series Brantford Redmen moved two steps up the ladder by defeating Hamilton Tigers 4-3. Brantford now is in fourth place, one point ahead of Sarnia Sailors and Chatham Maroons. It was Hamilton's 22nd loss.

Sudbury scoring was spread among Johnny Kampel, Teeder Flynn, Rolly McLenahan, Nick Tonituk, Johnny Mestan and Teeder McClellan. Johnny Offidani, Chuck Johnston and Joe Bumbacco scored for the Greyhounds.

Hamilton came close as they lost the decision on Bud Kemp's goal in the last two minutes of play while Tigers were a man short. Brantford goals were by Art Duggan, Jack Taylor and Don Oberholtzer. Hamilton scoring was by Don Peebles, Hugh Bolzoni and Pete Pidzodny.

Sarnia Sailors travel to Chatham tonight for a game with the newly-streamlined Maroons while Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen are in Stratford and Owen Sound Mercurys are at Brantford. North Bay Papers with Sudbury Wolves in the only NOHA game.

Canadiens Lead Quebec Juniors

MONTREAL (CP)— Montreal Canadiens lead the Quebec Junior Amateur Hockey Association today but are only two points ahead of Quebec Citadelles.

The Citadelles have 38 points and a game in hand over the league-leading Canadiens who have 40. Third are Three Rivers Reds with 21 while Montreal Royals languish in the cellar with only seven points in the 36 games they have played.

THE Ranger PROTECTS THE FORESTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF EVERYONE.

Be your own Fire Ranger this Christmas!

A whole forest of evergreens moves into homes and schools and churches at Christmas time! And while they contribute so much happiness and pleasure to our celebrations, they also become a fire hazard that should receive all normal precautions. Never decorate them with candles. Keep open flames and lamps away from them. And warn the children to be particularly careful. As a tree dries out its danger increases. If set in a bucket of coal and water, and kept watered, a Christmas tree will stay green and hold its needles longer, and be slightly less of a fire hazard.

U.N. SAFETY AWARDS

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie presented safety awards Thursday to 37 UN chauffeurs who operated their vehicles for more than 5,000 miles and transported more than 400,000 official passengers without injury.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

BY SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When partners understand each other they have a bridge system. Some systems are better than others. These exchange invitational bids are as accurate and precise as possible.

In most systems a forced partner is assumed to have two tricks. This is the basis for the next bid by the player across the table from him. Without some such basis they're guessing.

From one of the master matches is this deal:

NORTH
♠Q 7 6 5 4
♥A K Q 9
♦Q 8 5 2
♣A

WEST
♠A J 9 2
♥8
♦A K J 10 9 8
♣K 8

EAST
♠10 8 3
♥7 5 4
♦Q 10 2
♣

SOUTH
♠K
♥10 7 6 5
♦3
♣J 9 7 6 5 4 3

The bidding at many tables went like this:

West	North	East	South
1 D	Dbl	Pass	1 H
2 D	3 H	Pass	4 H

The one heart bid by south was forced by the north's double of the takeout. It promised nothing but four hearts of some kind. It may be in the hand that does not even hold a trick.

The north jump bid of three hearts was based on the assumption of two tricks for south. North realized that south may not have two tricks. He simply assumes south has two tricks or more.

If south had less than two tricks he would have passed three hearts. With more than two, south accepted the jump forces by going to four hearts. His contract is made with cross-ruffs.

At a number of tables west respected the south-north bidding. Assuming they could make such a contract some west stuck in five diamonds as a sacrifice bid. Those were defeated only two tricks.

The five diamond bidders gained by their defeat of two tricks. Because their loss at two tricks doubled was less than they would have lost to south at a made contract of four hearts.

Where expert bridge is played you never buy anything cheap. They take pot-luck unless you have them securely welded.

RAWDON

Mrs. James Linn Celebrates 80th Anniversary

Rawdon—On Wednesday afternoon 25 ladies and a few children gathered to honor Mrs. Jas. Linn who celebrated the anniversary of her 80th Birthday on Monday Dec. 22nd.

The party was sponsored by the members of Mount Pleasant Woman's Misdionary Society and was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Linn and Ruth. The home was decorated with colorful blanket on behalf of W.M.S. members and older friends and neighbors. Mrs. Linn also received costume jewelry, boxes of chocolates and an array of pretty cards from relatives and friends.

The guest of honor graciously thanked her friends for the lovely gifts and party and reminisced about by-gone days when she was born in the Minto district, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Patterson.

Rev. R. R. Bonsteel spoke briefly and offered prayer. Mrs. W. C. Pitman, Stirling, added her thanks and Miss Jean Sharpe sang "Lovely Night".

Refreshments consisting of assorted sandwiches, pickles, relishes, date bread, birthday cake, fruit cake, and a variety of candy were served by W.M.S. members, assisted by Miss Doris Sine and Mrs. Carleton Sine.

Miss Ruth Linn carried in the rose-decorated birthday cake, topped with lighted candles. The hoored guest blew out the tapers and then the be-ribboned knife in the cake. All sang "Happy Birthday" after which the cake was cut and served.

At the close of the afternoon Miss Ruth Linn voiced thanks to everyone on behalf of her parents and grandmother, for the delightful party, program and gifts. The guests departed wishing Mrs Linn continued health and birthday felicitations.

sang "God Hath Not Promised," with Mrs. D. Cook as accompanist.

Mrs. James Sharpe brought a special message to "Aunt Sabre" and said there was a real need of fellowship in these gatherings. She spoke of Mrs. Linn's lovely garden and flowers in the summer season and offered congratulations on this special occasion.

Address

Mrs. Will Potts read an address of appreciation on the occasion of our coming of age on December 22, of one of the most popular girls. This was signed by us community friendship secretary, Mrs. Frank Wells, as the collectors, Mrs. Blake Sharpe, Mrs. Clifford Linn, Mrs. Burton Sharpe and Mrs. Robert Merrith.

Mrs. George Weaver made the presentation of a lovely cerise wool blanket on behalf of W.M.S. members and older friends and neighbors. Mrs. Linn also received costume jewelry, boxes of chocolates and an array of pretty cards from relatives and friends.

Schwab's Win Second Quarter Major A League

Ted Schwab's trundlers didn't win the game but they tucked away two points in their 5-2 decision by Belleville Golf and "smuck" in to win the second quarter of the Major "A" Bowling League's four-season schedule last night. And they grabbed the title by rolling a quarter platter of 22714 as against 22517 racked up by Hardwick Printing who tied them for points in the quarter.

By coincidence the first-quarter tilt was decided the same way with Belleville Golf having the slimiest edge on the C. H. Wood's team, Schwab's and Hardwick Printing finished the quarter with 31 points each.

The Printers and Upper Canada News kept seven points from Moore's Cheklers and the Wood's team last night with Golf beating Schwab's 5-2 and Lawn Bowlers edging the CNE 4-3.

Special prizes were awarded last night with Jim McKenzie winning the high triple award; Bill Bateman the high single and Frank Bailey, Evan Pickrell and Ray Lundberg "hidden scores" prizes.

High scores were: J. McKenzie 784 M. Moreau 770; H. Ridley 754; J. Legault 736; A. Adams 733; R. Lundberg 714; W. Bateman 714; W. Dillon 702; W. Ravens 695; A. Cruil 688; E. Colebourne 687; L. Lucciola 683; S. Holmes 681; G. Leslie 679; A. McKenzie 671; E. Barlow 666; R. Sowell 667; F. Martin 663; T. Pointer 662.

Sport in Brief

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Billeella, a seven-year-old gelding which hadn't finished first since Sept. 5, and Diamond Moran, a three-year-old, combined to win a $1,217.80 daily double at the Fair Grounds race track Thursday. Each was ridden by Jockey H. Ford. Billeella paid $19.40, $12.40 and $10.40 in the first race. The 1½-mile first pace, Diamond Moran's return was $43, $16.20 and $10.40 in the fifth running second.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Police have charged two North Carolina Flame College football players with the theft of $77.50 worth of clothing from three Raleigh stores. They are Jim Langford, 19, star fullback of Lexington, Ky., and tackle Percy Harper Elder, 20, of Lewistown, Pa. They were released Wednesday under bonds of $200 each.

CALGARY (CP)—D. (Don) Mahaffy, prominent Calgary lawyer, Thursday night was elected president of the 1953 Calgary Stampeder football club of the Western Interprovincial Football Union. He succeeds C. B. (Cec) Gundy, who retired after a one-year term due to the pressure of business.

OTTAWA (CP)—Armand Savoie, Canadian welterweight champion, Thursday night defeated Clevon Thurman of McCray by unanimous decision, building up an early lead which withstood a closing rush by McCray in the last round.

Savoie, of Montreal, weighed 142 pounds and McCray 143.

Savoie used a two-fisted attack in the opening round but the second made little use of a right-hand punch until near the end of the 10-round match. There were no knockdowns.

Movie Column

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It's time to start ushering the old year out with a list'ed quotable quotes from Hollywood in 1952.

Some of the favorites: ! !

Roberto Rossellini, announcing that he and Ingrid Bergman were having their second family addition: "We feel that our marriage will now be taken for the sacred, serious thing it is."

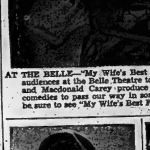
Sonja Henie, 39, singing about her engagement to a 48-year-old radio requirement: "I'm an old gold, but I'm so in love with him."

Arlene Dahl, testifying on one of the reasons why she was divorcing Lex Barker: "He called me a hick from Minnesota because I wouldn't drink a martini before dinner."

Vanessa Brown, former quiz kid: "Brains are no handicap to a girl — if she keeps them well hidden behind a plunging neckline."

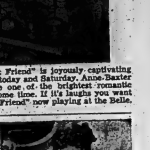
Jane Russell: "Sweaters are a lazy girl's way to romance."

Joan Fontaine: "I'll never marry again until I quit my acting career. You can't do both at once." (note: the married Collier Young a few months after this statement.)



Fred Astaire: "When I appear on TV, the audience rushes to the movies. When I'm in the movies, the audience rushes to TV. Next, the audience is perpetual motion."

Don Hartman, Paramount boss speaking of the film industry's troubles: "Why should people go out to see bad movies when they can stay home and see bad movies on TV?"



Terry Moore, divorcing Glenn Davis: "He made a wreck out of me. He asked my friends if they thought I could really act and when they said yes . . . he called them frauds."

Betty Grable, citing a trend: "The eyes of the film fan world have switched up the feminine line . . . and I just can't compete. I've always been able to stand on my own two feet. There are lots of women with bust lines Nature didn't provide."

AT THE BELLE—"My Wife's Best Friend" is joyously captivating audiences at the Belle Theatre today and Saturday. Anne Baxter and Macdonald Carey produce one of the brightest romantic comedies to pass our way in some time. If it's laughs you want be sure to see "My Wife's Best Friend" now playing at the Belle.

RAID XMAS TREE FLOY.

TILLSONBURG (CP) — Thieves invaded a Christmas-tree plantation five miles southeast of here Wednesday night and chopped or broke down between 200 and 400 trees. The plot, belonging to Joe Eppel, contained 3,000 evergreens which would have been ready for market next Christmas.

WILL NEVER GET GIFTS

HAMILTON (CP) — Christmas presents hidden away for four-year-old Carol Burnham will never be given to her, Wednesday she died from head injuries suffered when she was hit by an automobile near her home Monday. Carol's death was the 39th this year resulting from accidents on Hamilton streets.

City Girls Find Exciting Life at Outpost Hospital

Four weeks of outpost nursing before they obtain their R.N. degrees is the experience of girls at the Nipigon Memorial Hospital on Lake Superior. There the girls, mostly from cities, find they are called upon to perform duties they would probably never experience in city hospitals. In addition their off-duty hours are spent fishing and hunting—and that in itself is new to most of them. Here Evelyn Ashford of Hamilton and Ruth Watson of Toronto hoist the Red Cross flag in front of the Nipigon Hospital. — Central Press Canadian.

George S. Currie, Report Author, Accepts All Fuss As Matter of Circumstance

MONTREAL (CP) — The man whose name suddenly figures in headlines from one end of the country to the other apparently accepts it all as a matter of circumstance.

Since publication of the Currie report and the political storm it stirred up, George S. Currie, Montreal chartered accountant, has remained aloof from the fuss.

He listens personally to newspaper queries telephoned to his office in Montreal's financial district, but that's as far as it goes. He replies to all questions with a polite "no comment."

How long did his investigation of army stores handling last? Just how was it conducted? How long was his report in preparation?

The pleasant reply is still a definite "no comment."

Mr. Currie, described by close friends as a "quiet and friendly" man, has seen political trouble before, though never so close at hand.

Was Deputy Minister

He was deputy minister of defence for the Army at the time of the conscription crisis of late 1944 and the resignation of his chief, the late Hon. James Ralston.

Some say it was the Ralston resignation that led soon to his own after four years' service in the army department.

But today, aware that anything Mr. Currie might say or have said about him could get him into the boiling political kettle, friends are discreet.

One Montrealer declared Mr. Currie is a "man of the highest integrity," but only chuckled at further questions.

Mr. Currie, born in Glencoe, Ont., is 43. He was educated at Perth, Ont., before entering McGill University. He joined McGill officers training corps during the First World War and served overseas.

After he returned home to the accounting business, he served six years as alderman for the city of Westmount, Montreal suburb, where he still lives.

Was Called to Ottawa

When the Second World War broke out, Ralston called Mr. Currie to Ottawa as his executive assistant.

Mr. Currie was credited in the early months of the Second World War with doing a "great deal" to help overcome shortages in many military lines.

He was appointed deputy minister in 1942 and was described as a man who "worked like hell" but seldom was in the public eye.

Mr. Currie, back in chartered accounting since the war, was appointed earlier this year to carry out the army stores investigation.

With the job done, he once more is at work in his office.

Opposition Wants To Know if Horses Paid Income Tax

OTTAWA (CP)—The government will be asked by the opposition if horses on the payroll at the Toronto army camp paid income tax.

The Currie report, tabled Monday in the Commons, disclosed that horses got on the Army's payroll as "non-existent laborers."

Thursday, Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC—Hamilton West) sent seven questions about the horses to Leon Raymond, clerk of the Commons, for printing on the chamber's order paper when it resumes Jan. 12.

They were:

1. Were any names of persons listed on Petawawa payrolls which did not represent living human beings?
2. If so, how many?
3. At what rate of pay were they listed?
4. Was remuneration in cash or by cheque?
5. If the latter, who cashed the cheques?
6. Were deductions made for income tax purposes at source?
7. If so, what claims, if any, were made for exemptions because of (a) married status; (b) other dependents.

3 CHILDREN RESCUED

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Christine Helwig, three months, and Paul, 3, children of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Helwig, were rescued Thursday from a smoke-filled apartment on Barker Street. When fire broke out in the walls of the four-apartment building, James Sears ran up the outside stairs and carried the Helwig children to safety. Mrs. Sears, who cares for the Helwig pair during the day, rescued her daughter, Brenda, 2.

Drivers Lose $538

TORONTO (CP)—Two department store truck drivers, making Christmas deliveries, were robbed Thursday night of $538—bringing to five the number of store drivers held up recently.

It is believed the same three men took part in both the latest robberies.

A third driver grappled with two men who tried to rob him earlier in the evening.

RUSH LINE TO SANTA

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Telephone users in nearby Shedden and Southwold township have a direct line to Santa Claus' headquarters at the north pole. The wires were cleared of all other calls between 5 and 8 p.m. Thursday so children could carry on uninterrupted conversation with Santa. Business boomed and the performance is to be repeated today.

DIES AFTER FALL

CORNWALL (CP)—John Dewar, 55-year-old construction worker, died in hospital Thursday 34 hours after he fell 20 feet from a steel girder to the concrete floor of a factory under construction here. He suffered multiple fractures and did not regain consciousness.

"Nor" Bill questioned, "and—what's to stop me?"

"Well, Bill," it you must know, I'll tell you—" and as he spoke he quickly folded the letter the long way and held it out in front of him. Bill McTaggart sensed what Curly was about to do. He made a grab and missed. Then Curly stepped back, tore the letter into long narrow ribbons, and watched them spiral to the floor.

"Curly Brown!" Bill stormed, "you certainly have your nerve to do a thing like that, I—I—"

"No, you wouldn't, Bill." Curly read his thoughts, but stepped further back just in case he was mistaken. "Look, Bill," he said, "it's be sensible about this. Do you imagine that I'm going to stand aside and see my best friend ruin himself forever with the party he has always supported and believed in?"

"My party!" Bill snorted, "what the hell has my party ever done for me? And what answer will I give Barrand?"

"Since Barrand is after use, why not give me the opportunity to give him his answer?" Curly asked, "and, now, didn't I hear you say that Mrs. Williams was out of wood again?"

As Curly Brown turned to go, Bill McTaggart was muttering. He was saying over and over again, "what nerve, what nerve!" But Curly thought that Bill's tone indicated more relief than anger.

When Curly drove up to the corners, Peter and Percy Wren came running from the direction of the Echo office to leap on his sleigh.

"Do you know, dad," Peter was saying breathlessly, "Percy and I have been in the printing office and we were watching them setting type and—and Mr. Halder asked me if I'd like to learn the business—" He stopped. "Dad," he said at last, "you decided to learn the printing."

"The printing?" Curly questioned, turning his team from the street toward the snow-plowed lane that ran to a log house.

"He says he'll pay me a dollar a week and my dinner at the hotel to start," Peter continued, "I can come down to work with you in the morning and go back with you at night."

"So, that's what you want to be? A printer?"

"Yes, dad."

Curly reined his team a length past an open shed window.

"What do you think, Percy? Is printing a good trade for Peter?"

"Printing's a good trade for anybody," Percy said, "it's an education in itself, and I don't think anything could be more interesting than collecting and printing the news of a community."

"All right, Peter," Curly agreed, "you're going to be a printer, and a good one! And some day you're going to own the Echo all for yourself. That all right?"

As Peter threw his arms around his father's neck, he said: "Aw, holy pee, dad! You're the best ever. You always seem to understand."

When Ben Whitmore's stage, which in winter time was a three-seated sleigh, left the Depot on Monday morning, January 27th, Ben had for his sole passenger Curly Brown, newly-elected reeve of the township of Ameliasburg and Angor. Curly was going to Bellevue to represent his township at a county council. Percy Wren and Peter had climbed into his sleigh with Harry Foster to see him off, to wish him well. But before Curly had left Hard Acres, Hazel herself had brushed his clothes, straightened his tie, and had be was at his sartorial best.

The road as far as the Lookout was heavy, due to the light Sunday traffic, for even the freighting company's men and horses must have their day of rest. So by the time Ben's team reached their destination, the steam was rising from them and they were dirty, but they had made good time. Alighting, Ben and Curly stepped inside for a light lunch while Lafrenier prepared to change teams. A few minutes later they were out again. Ben to see that the stable boss wasn't wasting time, Curly to notice the many buildings that had been erected at the stopping place since he had last seen it. LaFrenier enquired about the Belangers and said that Jules would build his race track in the spring. He himself was sorry he had been unable to visit the Depot to see the little chestnut stallion.

As they drove on, Ben was calling Curly's attention to the many new buildings that were going up all along the road.

"That's the mine for you, Curly," Ben explained, "everybody trying to get in on the ground floor. The old story of a railway from Bellevue north has been resurrected, polished up. This time, however, a railway may well become a reality, for that's the only means of taking the ore from the mine to the new docks at Bellevue."

"Mind the railway would end at the Lookout!"

"It most certainly will, Curly," Ben said, "unless steps are taken at once to show the railway company that it would pay them in the long run to build it all the way through the Depot."

Curly thought a minute.

"As owner of the stage line am I to believe that you wouldn't care to see a railway linking the Depot and Bellevue?" Curly asked.

"Well, if you do, you're wrong, Curly," Ben laughed, "I want to see that railway built all the way through, and the sooner the better. There's no money in this stage business. As you can see, the passenger service in winter doesn't meet expenses. If it was not for the mail contract, and that I thought I was doing the people by that north a favor, I would have chucked the whole thing long ago. Bring on your railway, Curly! I'm ready to quit any time."

The stage was late in arriving at Bellevue that night, so Curly was late in reaching the home of the Walkers, Hazel's parents. Next morning he was at the county buildings long before the proceedings were to start. County Clerk Morven took him in hand, and introduced him to fellow members and then left him to himself.

As the councillors formed into small groups, Curly sensed by the slurring of their shoulders and their furtive glances in his direction, that the Bellevue News' description of him as "a rough and tumble fighter . . . a teamster with a vocabulary of a Missouri mule skinner," had placed him in a bad light. And that aroused him. Very well. He would surprise them, he would show them that the writer of the News article had been grossly misinformed.

Carriers Awarded Nine P.C. Increase In Freight Rates

Hike Will Gross Railways About $43,350,000 Yearly

OTTAWA (CP) — A nine-per-cent general increase in freight rates was authorized today by the board of transport commissioners.

The increase, to gross the carriers an estimated $43,350,000 a year, was awarded to compensate them for the 16-centa-an-hour wage increase they recently gave non-operating employees.

The application for higher rates was filed after the railways' decision this month to grant the increase effective Dec. 1, but while they and the non-operating unions were still in wage negotiation. Friday, a settlement was reached on the 16-cent increase retroactive to Sept. 1.

The added September - October - November pay disbursements resulting from the new date will come to about $10,000,000 on the companies' rail operations.

Today's decision was ordered implemented an announcement Dec.16 that the house would be granted the 16-cent increase retroactive to Sept. 1.

The added September - October - November pay disbursements resulting from the new date will come to about $10,000,000 on the companies' rail operations.

Today's decision was ordered implemented an announcement Dec.16 that the house would be granted the 16-cent increase retroactive to Sept. 1.

The board said it "reserves jurisdiction to make such further order as the circumstances may require" in the event of "any substantial change in the cost of living."

Larson officials said the giant transport was an "experiment in air flight" and was embarked with hitch-hiking military passengers heading home on leave.

The number of passengers was not known at once. A spokesman normally carries a crew of about 12.

Brave Conduct Of Four Airmen Is Recognized

OTTAWA (CP) — Award of the Queen's Commendation for brave conduct to four Canadian airmen who pulled a number of men to safety following an RCAF crash at Summerside, P.E.I. last fall, it was announced Friday night by Air Force headquarters.

The announcement said the Queen has approved the awards to Flt. Lt. T. H. Fawcett of Waterville, N.H.; FO. C. C. Spicer, 26, Fairmboro, Ont.; Sgt. J. A. Hall, 28, Toronto; and Flight Cadet R. G. Hatton, 19, Toronto.

The crash occurred when a Lancaster, attempting to land, caught fire on the ground. Several airmen, trapped in the aircraft at the controls, rolling four and injuring nine others of its crew.

The four men arrived at the scene minutes after the accident. Disregarding their own safety they proceeded to pull crew members from the burning wreckage.

Has Not Been Adopted Mother In 35 Years

SOUTH OHIO, N.S. (CP)—Carlton Hayworth is coming home this Christmas to the mother who believed he was dead. He left in World War I.

Above crying, and bearing the tears of bloody fight at Passchendaele, he is returning to Mrs. Lou Hayworth, 72, of South Ohio, N.S.

She adopted him when he was three.

Mrs. Hayworth moved from Digby, N.S., and re-married when she was alone several months after 3 years. Carleton's half-brother, a lobster fisherman, put him nearby Westport and inquired if anybody had ever heard of him.

A fisherman said he had. He was working on a coastal tanker.

"I thought I was a dead wolf," he said Friday. "But now I have a mother, a sister and two half-brothers. I'm looking forward to get to Jonesport by Christmas Eve."

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis: An intense storm centre will cross Lake Huron and Georgian Bay tonight. With its approach, strengthening easterly winds will affect most of the province and an extremely wide variation in weather will accompany it. A fairly large accumulation of snow will occur throughout central Ontario. In southwestern areas the snow is expected to change rapidly to rain. Freezing rain is likely to be quite prevalent throughout the Georgian Bay area and may spread as far north as Sudbury and North Bay.

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (AP) — A large military transport plane with 125 persons aboard crashed and burned on a field here. Larsair air force base today, an air force spokesman said "some persons got out alive."

The C-124 Globemaster, biggest U.S. military plane in service, was destroyed by the gasoline and flames soon after the crash shortly before 8:00 a.m. PST.

Larson officials said the giant transport was on a "experiment in air flight" and was embarked with hitch-hiking military passengers heading home on leave.

The number of passengers was not known at once. A spokesman normally carries a crew of about 12.

CLAXTON ARRIVES HOME TO FACE REPORT DISPUTE

Says Some Parts Of Report Surprised Him

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Claxton, arriving from Parisfold reporters today that in some respects the Currie report surprises him.

He declined to elaborate on that point, but said the report will hasten a reorganization of the army works services which was started in 1949 but held up by the post-Korean recession.

Mr. Claxton, returning with Finance Minister Abbott, from the Atlantic Pact ministerial meeting in Paris, was asked by reporters for comment on the Currie report tabled in the Commons for his transfer from the defence ministry.

Mr. Claxton said:

He said that is a matter for the Prime Minister.

Authoritative quarters have said there is little likelihood Mr. St. Laurent will ask for his resignation.

Mr. Claxton said he will be conferring with the cabinet and officials of his department about the report. He described it as a "good breakdown" in the army works services. He said:

Currie's caustic criticisms of Canada's defence effort by two United Nations visitors to the Far East and Western Europe did not come up at Paris.

Mr. Claxton said defence production will reach its peak in 1953 and the supply of new weapons and arms will be increased from then on.

4. There are quite a few things that can be done to change "arrangements" for Canadian troops overseas.

Comment on Schedule

The RCAF C-5 plane bringing Mr. Claxton, Mr. Abbott and Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, chairman of the chiefs of staff, touched down at Rockcliffe airport on schedule at 9 a. m. EST.

Mr. Claxton, absent from Ottawa since Dec. 5, missed a turbulent three-day Commons debate on the Currie report and the defence estimates for his removal by all three opposition parties.

Between now and the reconvening of the House Jan. 13 after the Christmas recess, he will be expected to prepare a statement on the report and on what steps will be taken to implement its 44 recommendations.

Busy Week

Mr. Claxton has had a copy of the report for roughly a week and has flown to Paris and back, spending most of the time in the air.

In the turbulent Commons debate, the three opposition parties charged the government had failed at least to shift Mr. Claxton from the job he has held for six years. The sixth anniversary of his appointment fell eight days after the debate.

There has been opposition demands for an independent inquiry into the defence department.

The government has praised Mr. Claxton and indicated that it will refer the Currie report to the Commons committee on defence expenditures shortly after the session starts again.

WRECK VICTIM BETTER

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Charles Fraser, 26, of London, severely injured Wednesday in a Wabash Railway wreck here, was reported Friday night in "fairly good" general condition in hospital suffering from shock. He had been on the "critical" list. Still in hospital but resting well is Harold Clarke, 43, of St. Thomas.

Duke of Edinburgh Makes First Solo Flight in Training Plane

WHITE WALTHAM, England (Reuters)—The Duke of Edinburgh made his first solo flight in a Chipmunk training plane today.

A sailor by profession, the Duke has been learning to fly for the last month, taking lessons whenever he got a break from his duties of state and navy.

He circled briefly around the RAF station here in a Chipmunk to Windsor Castle — and came to rest with his instructor termed "a very good three-point landing."

He still has about 200 hours of solo to go before he can qualify for RAF wings. His instructor is an RAF pilot, though the naval air force had also tried to sign the Duke on.

Prince Philip, 31, has had a special plane, teacher and lectures from since he took up the study. It was not announced how many hours of dual flying he had before he soloed. Most trainees get about eight.

Authorities Say Munitions Collected for Cuban Revolt; Three Arrested After Raid

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Police raided an abandoned gasoline station in this New York suburb Friday and seized a large cache of munitions which authorities linked to a planned Cuban revolution.

The descent on the boarded-up station uncovered about two truck-loads of napalm grenades, rifle clips, gunpowder, parachute flares and a drum of napalm powder.

Sheriff John E. Hoy and assistant district attorney M. Morton Edmiston said Manhein told them he was collecting the arms for behalf of ex-President Carlos Prio Socarras of Cuba.

Later, however, Manhein denied to reporters that he was for ousted Cuba and said he was getting the munitions for an unidentified customer.

Prio Socarras was ousted by a military coup last October and Cuban strong man Gen. Fulgencio Batista, a former President, took over. Batista since has been named President of Cuba.

Prio Socarras fled to Mexico, then to Miami, from where he and his followers have been taking political potshots at the Batista regime.

The raid was staged after police had been suspicious of unusual activity around the supposedly deserted gas station.

All three are charged with illegal possession of firearms.

Manhein was seized when he drove up to the station with Frank Connell, 49. Connell was accused of being in charge of shipping the cache.

A third man, 35-year-old Jose Diaz, 35, of Jersey City was named Duarte as purchaser of the munitions.

All three men were arraigned and charged with felonious possession of firearms.

Russia Has at Least 165 Subs In Baltic and Arctic Waters, 72 Ocean-Going Says Sweden

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Russia, according to official Swedish information, has at least 165 submarines in Baltic and Arctic waters —and at least 72 of them are ocean - going.

Many of these Russian subs have a range which would enable Russia to make two trips from the Baltic straits to New York and back without refuelling.

These estimates are included in Sweden's 1953 Naval Calendar, a Swedish counterpart of "Jane's Fighting Ships." It is compiled by Swedish Navy experts and sometimes carries more detailed information than Jane's about Russian warships in waters close to Sweden.

300 Known Subs

It gave the total number of known Soviet submarines as 300 "plus Jane's and there could be no fewer than" 370 in its 1953-53 edition. This is the first time the staid Swedish publication went out of its way to report what it terms bluntly that Russia is increasing her submarine - strength by 250 by 1955.

The calendar says Russia has at present 48 submarines in Arctic waters, 12 of which are ocean going. There are at least 117 Soviet submarines in the Baltic, 24 of them ocean - going. Figures do not include midget submarines in reserve of two, of which Russia has several.

Russian ocean-going submarines in Baltic and Arctic waters for the Swedish Navy, at least 24 with a range of 15,000 -20,000 nautical miles without refuelling. Their surface speed is 20 knots, submerged 8 knots, against 5,280 feet for a land mile.

Long Distance

The distance between New York and the Baltic straits is about 3,800 nautical miles.

The best of these Soviet subs have a top speed at present of 20 knots and carry up to 10 21-inch torpedo tubes in addition to mines.

The Swedes estimated the submarine - ocean - going Russian subs at between 1,000 and 1,500 tons in addition to about 90 coastal submarines.

The Swedish Naval Calendar reported for the first time that the Russians are now constructing five 10,000 - ton cruisers of the "Sverdlov" class for their Arctic fleet.

College Develops Hog With Two Extra Ribs

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP)—Washington State College said Friday its farm scientists have developed a hog with two extra ribs that has more pork chops and longer bacon.

It took seven-years of breeding to develop the pair of "spare ribs" in the animals born in the laboratory as WSC No. 61.

No. 61 is the result of cross breeding with three Landrace boars shipp in from Denmark and 18 Chester white sows. Since 1945, some 340 litters have been raised in the experiment.

Dr. R. E. Christian of the WSC animal husbandry department said the boar will be officially recognized as a "new breed" in 1953.

Federation Wants To Close Gift Shops in Camps

TORONTO (CP)—E. F. K. Nelson, manager of the Canadian Retail Federation, said Friday the organization has asked Defence Minister Claxton to close gift shops operated in armed-service camps.

Nelson said a gift shop at the RCAF station near Summerside, P.E.I., was selling household goods, toys, clothes and electric appliances at cut rates and that some of the merchandise is poaching civilians. Canteens in Europe also were blamed.

"Armed service canteens were never meant to sell such things as electric refrigerators, toy trains or washing machines," he said. "It is unfair competition to the merchants."

Nelson said the federation put their sales to such things as beverages, cigarets and shaving gifts, he said.

Two Companies Complete Large Land Deal

REGINA (CP) — Terms of the largest land deal ever completed between two companies in Saskatchewan were announced Friday in a joint statement by the Sobio Petroleum Co. group and Socony-Vacuum Exploration Co.

The deal involves approximately 1,000,000 acres of land in the permit and land and expenditures exceeding $10,000,000.

Under the terms of the agreement, Socony becomes the operator of the Sobio-controlled acreage and will earn an undivided 50-per-cent interests in the permits by carrying out a "high-level program of exploration" during the next three years.

The expenditures under the terms of the agreement are for exploration only and would increase considerably in the event of an oil discovery.

Farthings Short In Great Britain

LONDON (Reuters)—There is a shortage of farthings in Britain and it is causing a crisis in food retailing, due mainly to use farthings on a large scale.

The price of a loaf of bread is fixed by the government at fourpence and one farthing. It is illegal for a baker to charge more or less than this exact amount.

But since most housewives don't bother to keep farthings on hand, the bakers must carry them to make change.

The solution: they have applied to the government to change the price of bread.

CANADIAN ARMY REORGANIZING SET-UP IN EAST

Functions of 4 Leaders In Korea, Japan Defined

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

KURE, Japan (CP)—The Canadian Army is reorganizing its administrative set-up in the Far East, The Canadian Press has learned.

The reorganization involves the responsibilities of Brig. M. P. Bogert of Ottawa, Brig. H. E. A. Morton of Winnipeg and Col. Willis Mcogh of Ottawa.

The object is to increase the efficiency of army elements in Korea and Japan by relieving the top responsibility for them has not been clearly defined.

Bogert, commander of the 25th Canadian infantry brigade, also is senior Canadian officer in the Far East.

Willie Brig. J. M. Rockingham of Vancouver held the post the policy was that the commander in Korea should have overall authority over all units in Korea and Kure, Japan, where administration, training and reinforcement units for the Canadian force are located.

Was Misunderstood

That wasn't satisfactory, since the commander was preoccupied with operational matters. When Bogert assumed command last April Army headquarters in Ottawa placed under the military mission in Tokyo all units in Japan and Korea which were not an integral part of the brigade.

That didn't work either. Tokyo, in travelling time, was even further from Kure than brigade headquarters in Korea were.

During the recent visit to the theatre of Maj.-Gen. H. A. Sparling, vice-chief of the Canadian general staff, Bogert suggested the policy shortly to go into effect.

Four-Fold Responsibility

Morton's functions will be fourfold:

1. Representative at Gen. Mark Clark's headquarters of the Canadian joint chiefs of staff when Mission officer he is in effect.

2. Representative at Clark's headquarters of Lt.-Gen. G. G. Simonds, chief of the Canadian general staff.

3. Representative of Arthur Menzies, charge d'affaires of the Canadian embassy in Tokyo.

4. Bogert's representative at Clark's headquarters.

Friendly Beacons Along Great Lakes Going Out as Navigation Season Ends

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The friendly beacons of the Great Lakes lighthouses are going out.

Another busy water season for them is ending.

The shipping season officially will close tonight, at midnight, one of the latest dates on record. Only a few vessels remain on the lakes under full steam for home ports. Winter ice will soon make navigation impassable.

Th. last ship cleared Fort William Friday with grain sailing weather forecast. Shipping out of neighboring Port Arthur Saturday night was the dock where Dewey Bauld will anchor. She cleared the St. Clair River at Sault Ste. Marie at 5 p.m. Friday.

Within the next few days, lighthouse keepers will be taken from their lonely vigils on reefs and promontories through the lakes system.

At ports along the shores of the five lakes which comprise the great inland sea, preparations are being made for the winter. During the coming months they will be refitted and made shipshape for the 1953 season.

At Port Colborne on the Welland Ship Canal, south end of the locks were closed Thursday. The Sault locks will not be officially closed until midnight tonight.

The good weather prevailing during the last two months prompted shipping officials to extend the season by about a week to Dec. 15 deadline. It gave Lakehead ports an opportunity to ship a near-record amount of grain.

Shipments this year totalled 452,000,000 bushels, compared with last year's 317,000,000 bushels. But it fell short of the 1951 record of 483,700,000 bushels.

This year many of the vessels wintering on lake ports will have holds filled with grain, owing to shortage of storage space elsewhere. Nine vessels at Port Colborne are storing 2,185,000 bushels.

Navigation on the St. Lawrence river between Montreal and Quebec ended Thursday. It was one of the latest closings in years.

Threat Of Rail Strike Removed By Wage Agreement

Unions Accept Increase Recommended by Board

MONTREAL (CP)—Any threat of a strike on Canada's main railway lines has been removed by a wage settlement which gives an extra 16 cents an hour, retroactive to Sept. 1, to 144,000 non-operating employees.

The agreement, which also provides for a check-off of union dues, for all workers in the bargaining unit to whom the agreement applies, was announced late Friday by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways and the 17 railway brotherhoods which it represented, the employees in five months of negotiations.

The new contract, replacing one which expired Sept. 1, becomes effective Dec. 1 for one year.

The brief announcement said the check-off arrangements are being worked out.

Majority Report

The settlement was along the lines of the majority report of a federal conciliation board which recommended an average increase of 16 cents and the check-off of dues. The majority report did not discuss the question of when it should become effective.

The board said the increase is retroactive to Sept. 1 indicated the unions had won a concession from the railroads on their earlier stand. The board also said the increase was to be in effect as of Nov. 1. There was no indication when the employees would receive the back pay.

Railway sources estimated the increase will amount to $25 to $30 a month for the individual employee, depending on his wage classification.

The railways have indicated the board also will be extended to non-union employees.

Asked For 45 Cents

The unions originally asked for 45 cents an hour and rejected the majority finding when it was announced last month. They indicated they favored the minority report, signed by union member M. David Lewis of Toronto and recommending a 26-cent-an-hour increase.

Their original demands also included a union shop and a cost-of-living bonus which turned down by the majority report.

Frank Hall, chief spokesman for the 15 international and one national brotherhoods, told reporters in Montreal that the settlement is "very good" agreement.

The railways already have applied to the board of transport commissioners for a freight rate increase of nine per cent, because the major portn t of the increased cost to their wage bills. The board has still not granted the increase, amounting to $42,100,000, if it finds the amount covers the money needed.

KILLED BY COW KICK

OTTAWA, Ohio, (AP)—A cow killed her part-owner Friday with one kick in the face. The coroner said Mrs. Lucille Mc-neck of Ralph C. Claybaugh. Claybaugh, 18-year-old son of Mrs. Fred, said the cow struck out with her hooves only a few seconds after the father threw his milking stool up beside her.

Teen-age Girls Attempt to Extort Total of $30,000

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Agents of the federal bureau of investigation have arrested two "teen-age girls—one 14, the other 15— and charged them with attempting to extort a total of $30,000 from H. J. Heinz, president of the food firm bearing his name and Arthur Rooney, owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League.

Fred Halford, special agent in charge of the FBI office here, said his men had arrested the girls six times for writers of extortion notes to the two prominent men to pick up the money they demanded.

Pick Up Parcels

The two young girls walked into the darkness of a northside Pittsburgh park and picked up a package lying on a bench that allegedly contained Rooney's portrait but held a bundle of paper, worthless.

Halliford disclosed the two girls had been arrested Thursday night. He declined to identify them, except to say their ages. He said both girls admitted writing the notes — 10 in all — to Heinz, president of the H. J. Heinz Co., demanding $20,000 and to Rooney, demanding $10,000.

Halford said the girls threatened to harm the Heinz and 11-year-old twin sons and the 11-year-old son of Heinz.

They were released in custody of their parents pending disposition of their cases by juvenile court.

British-Owned Freighter Escorted Into Harbor

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Nationalist China gunboats escorted the 1,215-ton British-owned freighter Nile into Kaohsiung harbor after reports that there had been a mutiny aboard her.

The vessel, registered by Panama was alleged by the Nationalist China news agency to be trading the Communist Chinese ports.

The ship's British owners, Wallace Bros. & Co., of Hong Kong, today denied the charge. They said they had lost contact with the ship.

Reports from Taipeh said the Nationalists would investigate the allegations and would confiscate the Nilar if they were true.

Father of 14 Ordained Priest

ROME (AP)—A 59-year-old father of 14 children, now a widower, today was ordained a priest of the Roman Catholic Church.

He is Joseph Schramm, native of Dubuque, Iowa. After the death of his wife several years ago, he left his job as a magazine distributor and began his ecclesiastical studies at Leda's pontifical Irish College here.

10 SHIPS FOR WINTER

GODERICH (CP)—Ten boats with storage grain will spend the rest of winter in Goderich harbor. It is the largest winter fleet in a number of years. It will include a total of 380,000 bushels of grain afloat. The Mohawk Deer arrived Friday and tied up for the season. Others are Manitadoc, Scottidoc, Windoc, Algocrall, Saskadoc, Vandoc, Algonoc, Algoway, Everston.

YOUTH SUFFERS CUT ON HEAD

Keith Sly, 13, of 218 Coleman Street, suffered a cut on his head Friday night when he slipped while running on the market square and struck his head on the sidewalk. Police took the lad to the Belleville General Hospital and after he received first aid was allowed to go home. The lad was running with two other boys when the mishap occurred.

SERIES OF LECTURES WILL BE CONCLUDED

Mrs. Robert Lee Moffett, from Chicago, who has been conducting a series of talks the past week in the city, will conclude her series with two more lectures. This evening at 8.30 she will address a group on the subject, "The Reality of Christmas," and on Sunday evening she has chosen for her concluding address "Prayer, a Cosmic Power."

As the lady traveller ends her stay in the city she has offered thanks to the Ontario Intelligencer and the Y.M.C.A., for which she termed, "the most fine cooperation in this educational seminar."

F. MITCHELL MAY SEEK WARDENSHIP

Another name was added today to the list of aspirants for the wardenship of Hastings County for 1953 with the report that Reeve Fred Mihalsli, of Thurlow township, would seek the honor if successful in his township election.

Previously mentioned as possible aspirants for the warden's chair, have been Steve Jack Blezard; Madoc; Theodore Tryon, Bancroft; Percy Smith, Marmora; Don; Tracey Adams, Dungannon; James Sprackett, of Tudor and Cashel, and T. C. Graham, of Tweed.

NEW STAFF MEMBER JOINS C. A. SOCIETY

Ward Molenhouse, a graduate of the School of Social Study, will join the staff of the Belleville Children's Aid Society as case work supervisor early in 1953, it was announced at the recent meeting of the board of directors of the society.

Superintendent William Lockyer reported that 186 children are under society paid care. During December, five new protective cases were opened and there were four adoptions. He paid tribute to various local organizations who had contributed to the children's Christmas enjoyment through gifts and entertainment. It was also revealed that several groups are contributing Christmas dinners for needy families.

Bar Association Hosts at Party At Officers' Mess

Staff members of the various legal offices in the city and also public officials were guests of the Hastings and Prince Edward Bar Association on Thursday evening at a Christmas party held at the officers' mess at the Church street armouries.

The guests were welcomed by H. A. Pringle, president of the Bar Association. Conveners for the party were Louis Mercelus, William Argue and Ben W. Hurley. Congratulations were extended to Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson on the birth of a [illegible]

Local Single Girls Take Dim View of Leap Year Privileges Think Men Should Do Proposing

Nobody can ever accuse local girls as being "hard up" if the married license figures for this year are any authority for judgment. During the year 1951, 341 applications for marriage licences were granted locally. To date this year, and this is leap year, the year the girls are supposed to do the proposing, only 293 applications have been made. This is a decrease of 49 applications.

This would seem to indicate the girls are not interested in getting married. Several other causes were discovered in a survey made this week. Money still remains the main reason for the decline in applications. Out of the 15 single girls contacted, four gave as their reason for not marrying "cash in the bank." The girls feel that there should be at least $1,000 saved. One male, (over 20) listed age as being the cause in her case. She feels a person must be 25 before taking the "big leap."

The sixth young lady gave as her reason, lack of prospects. When asked if that was her only reason she replied, "Yes, quite plausible for her to do the proposing, we were told, "that sort of thing is strictly for the birds."

Lady number seven complained of a lack of good men in the city. "I'm not going to marry just anybody," she said. This girl also said she was perfectly happy in her work and thought she might remain at it and perhaps become a career girl, at least until she met some one who measured up. The eighth and ninth girls "wouldn't propose to any man." According to these gals, "if there is any proposing to do, the man is going to do it. What do you think we are, hard up or something?"

The last girl was a classic. "Whom would I marry?" she wanted to know, "I didn't come from this city and I have only been here three months, but even if it had been three years, I don't think there is anyone around here I would want to marry. All the nice boys are either married and satisfied down or engaged and those who are left, nobody would want to marry."

It might be interesting to note, June marriages are the most popular of the year with 1,000 recorded since the beginning of this month. Wilfred Nolmes, city clerk, expects the number to increase considerably before 1952 rings down the curtain.

Returned Men Leave Halifax For Their Homes

The following is a list of personnel from the R.M.C.S. Stocka which docked several days ago at Halifax after serving one year in active waters of Korea. These local and district men returned from Halifax this morning for their homes and a well-earned leave.

Unemployment Here About Same As Last Year

Unemployment in the Belleville area is at about the same level as last year at this time, it was reported today by H. H. Reed, manager of the local employment office. This week there were 727 persons receiving unemployment benefits as 424 of these being within a nine-mile radius of Belleville. The other 303 are termed postal claims and live in more distant parts of the county.

"The total is about on par with last year," Mr. Reed stated, "and is expected to increase slightly when winter weather conditions close down all but the big construction jobs."

Mr. Reed said the comparatively open weather was allowing the bigger projects to be kept in progress. About 35 carpenters from Belleville district were working at the Trenton ammunition depot at Cobourg, while others were finishing work in the Marmora district.

RSM Alex Lacey Warrant Officer First Class

Regimental Sergeant Major Alex W. Lacey of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment, RCA (ALI) is now a warrant officer first class. He was presented with a scroll of certificate by Lieut-Col. G. W. McGregor, MC, commanding officer of the regiment at a ceremony held in Gananoque recently.

RSM Lacey has been connected with the regiment here for the past thirteen years, and for six and one half years has acted as regimental sergeant major.

He came up through the ranks. Serving three years in World War I, RSM Lacey was a member of the Fifth Field Company, Royal Canadian Engineers. He rose from the rank of sapper to sergeant.

Sergeants' Mess Of Hasty Pees Scene of Party

In front of a gully-lit Christmas tree, a red-faced, white-bearded, bespectacled Santa Claus distributed gift gifts to many children of the members of the Hastings and Prince Edward sergeants' mess Friday evening in the Church Street armouries.

Santa Claus was kept busy for almost an hour as nearly 40 children, ranging in age from one year to 12, clambored about him, unable to contain their excitement on the festive occasion.

After the gifts were presented the children rapidly consumed lollipops of their own and there ensued the greatest tearing of Christmas wrappers heard in some time.

Gifts of candy, nuts, toy trucks, dolls, kitchenware and many other enticing presents for the younger set brought squeals of delight from the children, when the paper was torn from their presents.

After the excitement of opening Santa's presents had died down, the little ones were served ice cream and soft drinks and then bearing their new found toys, left for home as the mess wound up its annual Christmas party for the children.

Obituary

HENRY HAROLD HUFF
(Bloomfield)

Funeral service for Henry Harold Huff were held from the G. M. Hicks and Son Funeral Home, Picton, on Saturday last. The Rev. Stephen Spurrel conducted the service.

Although Mr. Huff had been in failing health for a number of years his sudden passing came as a great shock to his relatives and friends. He died on Thursday morning in the Prince Edward County Hospital where he had been a patient for about ten days. He was in his 69th. year.

Born in Hallowell township, he lived on the homestead nearly all his life, being the fourth generation there. He was the eldest son of the late Elizba Huff and Mary Elma Huyck. He was a graduate of the Picton Business College. In 1906 he was appointed to the position of secretary-treasurer of the Ben Gill Cheese and Butter Association and held that office for 42 years until failing health forced him to resign.

He was the secretary-treasurer of the Bloomfield Milling Company, and auditor of the Bay of Quinte Fire Insurance for a long period, also auditor for the township of Hallowell. He was a member of Prince Edward as well as some canning factories.

He was a member of the United Church, was superintendent of Dezerel Sunday School for a number of years and later taught a class at Mount Pleasant Sunday School.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, Bessie Ann, May Foster; a daughter, Mary, and a son, Hudson, both at home, and a brother Floyd in the U.S.A. A brother, Hanson, predeceased him in March, 1951.

The funeral was largely attended, showing the high esteem in which he was held.

Interment was in Ellenwood cemetery, Picton. The bearers were: Curtis Doxsee, Fred Hope, Ernest Reid, Harry Werden, Harry Hubbs and Roy Hubbs.

Threat of Imported Vegetable Oils To Dairy Industry Discussed

Imported vegetable oils and the threat they present to the dairy industry in Ontario was the big topics of discussion at the annual meeting of the Hastings county cheese producers held this week in Stirling.

Approximately 200 county dairymen attended the meeting which was interesting and enthusiasm all along the line as farmers listened to the various speakers. Speakers included W. G. Coon, president of the Ontario Cheese Producers; Alva Rintoul, president of the Lanark county cheese producers, and Charles N. Heath, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers.

Confident of Future

Considerable enthusiasm regarding the future of the dairy industry was reported by Mr. Coon as he reviewed the year's activities of his association. He declared that all the work entailed in getting a cooperative marketing scheme started in the province of Ontario would certainly affect the dairy industry in Canada.

Mr. Heath also spoke on the threat of vegetable oil and stressed the importance of the Ontario Cheese Producers as well as some canning factories.

Mr. Heath also spoke on the threat of vegetable oil and stressed the importance of the Ontario Cheese Producers as well as some canning factories.

Resolutions asked for special cheese to be more definitely defined before the next making season.

Still another motion called for continued support of the province's organization of a milk marketing board with authority to direct milk into channels and products which were most needed.

W. E. Bateman received acclamation for another term as president of the association. Vice-president is Earl K. Whitmore, of Spencerville, with secretary-treasurer being Berson Mitts, of Holloway. Auditor is George Hagerty, of Tweed.

County directors are: Sidney, Sam Nicolson; Thurlow, Cecil Ketcheson; Tyendinaga, Ed. Lazier; Rawdon, Jack Morrison; Huntingdon, Percy Haggerty; Hungerford, Harry Coulter; Marmora, John A. Bell; Madoc, Alan Ketcheson.

IN MEMORIAM

CARSON. — In loving memory of a dear daughter, Shirley Carson, who passed away December 20, 1951, in her 20th year.
One year has passed and gone,
Since one we loved was taken from our home on earth,
To dwell in heaven above.
The flowers we place upon her grave
Will wither, fade and die,
But memories of her we love
Shall never fade nor die.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by mother, father and brothers.

CARSON. — In loving memory of a dear daughter, Shirley Carson, who passed away December 20, 1951.
Sleep on, dear one, and take your rest,
God has called you home to be with the blest.
Your place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled,
And whenever we speak
Your name is mentioned
Memories will flow.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by Aunt Jeanette and family. 2320

CARSON. — In loving memory of Shirley Carson, who passed away December 20, 1951.
I lost a sister with a heart of gold
Who was more to me than words could unfold.
Memories I harvest for her sake,
With wonderful memories she has left to keep.
I have lost, but God has gained
One of the best sisters the world contained.
—Sadly missed by sister Georgina and brother-in-law Bill. 2320

MALE. — In loving memory of my dear sister, Margaret Male, who passed away December 21, 1950.
Out here all our thoughts to world
Of you are ever true.
Where we laid our dear sister
Just two years ago today.

What It Feels Like to Walk on Fire

The Reverend Eric Robinson, British born Methodist missionary in Ceylon, recently became the first Christian parson ever to take part in a Hindu fire-walking ceremony. Here Mr. Robinson, whose home was once in Milford (Essex), describes what it feels like to walk through red hot cinders of a jungle wood fire . . . . .

By REVEREND ERIC ROBINSON
(In an interview with Sen Gupta)

COLOMBO, Ceylon . . . . "I have been asked why I attempted the fire-walk at Katargama.

"I did it as an experiment in the interests of Truth.

"There is a claim that fire-walking can only be done by one possessing supernatural powers. Therefore I had to find out for myself whether or not I could do it. I walked for about four hours before the ceremony. Then it was raked through carefully and all still flaming pieces of wood were removed leaving only the glowing ashes. Finally was added a thick coating of dust generously sprinkled all over it causing a sudden cloud of smoke that soon settled.

Memorable Night

"Never shall I forget the smell of burning logs and the sight of the crowd of about 3,000 eager, devoted people squatting round the huge fire in the full moonlight in that temple courtyard in the jungle.

"It must have come as a surprise even a shock—for people in British India that a British Methodist padre had gone fire-walking with Hindus, and taken part in a Hindu temple.

"I did not take part in the religious ceremony that the others carried through before the fire-walking. I did not take the bath in the sacred river and I did not enter the temple at all. The fire-walking was carried out in the outer courtyard—the first of seven, and one that is completely open to the public. Twelve Europeans were present when the ceremony took place.

"Before taking part in the ceremony I made it clear to the temple authorities that I was a Christian and that I was dedicating myself entirely from any religious significance the fire-walking might have.

"Actually it appears to be little, if any, religious significance beyond being a grand spectacle and an example of the trial of faith by ordeal."

The people of Ceylon make pilgrimages to Katargama to visit the shrine built in the heart of the jungle as well as in honor of wild elephant and other forest animals which are held in adoration by the god Sri Skanda whose devotees—both Hindus and Buddhists—number in the vast scores of thousands every year.

Revolting Customs

Yet the age-old Hindus doing penance by crawling on all fours like last few miles to the shrine. Others have travelled right across the island with silver skewers piercing their tongues and more skewers thrust through their cheeks. Others have hooks driven into their backs to which they attach carts with bullocks which see that they may hoist water from the sacred river to bathe.

On the last day of a period of pilgrimage long trenches are dug filled with red hot cinders usually all day long logs are burned in them until, as evening draws near, the trench is filled with live coal. Those who have the honor to perform the rite first make their way to the river and after ablutions are led to the temple, where the priests invoke the blessing of the god Skanda.

Then the Hindus climb up the sky the devotees, one by one, tread the whole length of the trench of embers. Men, women and children walk through the fire and their clothing remains unscorched while they do not appear to be scathed or discomfort.

That was the scene on the night that the Reverend Eric Robinson made his attempt.

"As the fire-walkers came back from the river, led by pipers," he said, "they carefully slipped off shoes and socks.

"Carrying them in each hand they stepped into the embers and walked across in five quick steps. I had taken off my cigarette in the fire looked like as I stood at its end before stepping calmly back and then lighting another cigarette in the dark and imagine 80 square feet of flaming embers.

"The fire was quite hot enough to make me glad it was no larger than it was."

Red Hot Chorus!

"The others did not give under my feet at all, though I weigh 13 stone. There was no soft, flaky ash in that furnace of red hot charcoal. When I walked out of the courtyard with American friends immediately after the fire-walk my feet felt as if they were still on the fire. However, to the delight of Hindus and Europeans, bandaged them up, and I walked for days on crutches. Hatton, 75 miles from Colombo.

"We had an uproarious time with the Buddhist priestly party from Katargama, and I suffered no ill-effects whatever. Neither have I felt any pain since.

"My conclusion is that I got burned simply because my skin was softer than theirs And who knows that none of them was the possession of hard skin under foot is the main point. I believe anyone whose skin is calloused by habitually walking barefoot could do it without being burned. I always wear shoes and socks, so my feet are soft. The fact that other fire-walkers on the night I tried were all used to going barefoot.

"How far I have succeeded in exploding a fallacy I do not know. However, I take off my hat to the fire-walkers. They are true Sadhus (holy men) by any means. Many are simple laborers who are fulfilling their vows—and these are the people among whom I have worked for 25 years.

"No, I am not contemplating becoming a Hindu. My Christian faith has never been more robust than it is now."

Lovers of the 'Iron Horse'

(By A TALBOTT ROCHE in Miss Bell)

Ask any model railroader how he became one, and he'll probably say, "I don't know, I just like trains." It's just as simple as that, but because of this simple answer urge, he spends most of his spare time designing, creating, building, assembling and operating scale model railroads. He prowls the junk yards looking for scrap (real) railroad yards, watching the switch engines switching the freight locomotives (hogs), He goof down to the station in the afternoon to watch the Streamliner go by.

It's a hobby that spreads like wildfire through a neighborhood, and usually railroading starts a whole group. At first, there's a general leering at the model that appears at Old Tailspout's, but the boys in the white coats will be after him like flies with new toys, but make no mistake about it,—these are not toys. They are scale models of real railroads: the locomotives, cars, buildings, and even the people.

Once a model railroader entices a scoffer into his bluse to look a t layout, the contagion begins to work. The "scoffer" will stand around a while, usually with a mass of Old Tailspout's in his hand, complaining that his best friend's hobby is "crazy" and he's ready for cutting out paper dolls. Finally, the two of them go into the basement to look the layout out. There is a miniature freight yard backed by a scale mountain, all very lifelike. When the locomotives are placed on the track, coaches coupled on and power applied, the trains move with increasing speed, over switches, under bridges, stopping at stations, through tunnels, around a lake, forward, reversing, and before the guest has left the basement he is just as busy as his host, adding freight cars to the Big Jeff Pullman-passenger box cars and switching to sidings with the "hogs" (Yard goats to you) By this time the guest is infected with the hobby of Model Railroading though he doesn't even know it!

There are more than $50,000 farrocquinologist in the United States ranging in age from 8 years up to 75 years old. Seventy-five per cent number under 14 years belong to the Boy Scouts, while the middle and older brothers are confirmed railroaders. The average age of a new (Model Railroad owner and official) is about 30 years. Here's just an ordinary Joe, with some dreams in his soul, and railroading is the way he gets them out.

He lives in one-room apartment and has a layout in a bureau drawer, or on the kitchen table, or on a base on hinges that can be raised and dropped to lie flat against the wall. The size of a man's living quarters are to stops a railroader. . in fact, many a man has built his home with both eyes on the basement space that he can build a layout, and they have to share the basement with the laundry and the furnace, but he can always find a way to get his track around obstacles.

He's married, of course. What does his wife think of this hobby? Usually, she's right along with him in building the scenery, passing him the screwdriver, making cafe's and upholstery for the Pullman, painting the freights and the figurines...and all the other things a wife does when she's not mad says, "Here, hold this." She knows where her husband is, practically every night of the week. Her greatest problem is to keep some of the neighbors quietly living, for a railroad devotee has a way of looking over a room and saying, "Gee, that's the spot, could use some space like that for a . . ." And when he does, she's alert every minute . . .

She knows he isn't going to spend any more money on this hobby than if he were to go to movies and that he's getting fun, and that this hobby is good for him. After an evening spent in high-balling the trains around his big layout, and all his rolling stock, having the trains collide and the cars derailed, he'll come back into this world with the tension that had been piling up in him all drained out. Doctors recommend Model Railroading as having therapeutic value.

Now, what does all this cost? A general survey of large and small railroads brought out the amazing fact that most of them spend about $2.00 a week. Basic equipment needed to start an empire is about $50.00 (which will include a locomotive, 10 to 12 feet of track, transformer and three or four cars. If you want to spend less, a complete train can be bought for about $20.00 and if you want to spend more it will cost you exactly what you want to spend. One of the very handy things about Model Railroading is that it solves so many birthday and Christmas presents.

Dad and the empire can be built on a card table, yet be as complete as a small section of a Class I railroad. But it all starts with one car, or one locomotive. From then on, you're on your own.

You'll probably start building because a

AN ARCHAIC STATUTE

One of the most archaic statutes in the Criminal Code is among those which a committee of the Senate has recommended for amendment. The change is one which would establish the right of appeal in convictions for contempt of court.

This is not a law that affects ordinary offenders very often. There are two main categories of offence described as contempt of court. One is direct disobedience of a judicial order, insult to a judge or refusal to give evidence in court. The other form, and the one against which the most strenuous objection has been raised, is public comment, if involves published reports or comment on court proceedings which may be regarded as prejudicial to a fair trial or likely to reflect upon the reputation of the court.

In the latter cases the accused is usually a newspaper publisher, editor or writer. And at present he now stands the judge in any case of contempt can convict a person or a corporation and impose any sentence he wishes. Neither the conviction nor the sentence can be reviewed, rescinded or altered by a higher court.

The strange thing is that this arbitrary statute has been in effect for a long time without any change. In discussing it the Toronto Star notes that in a contempt case heard last year the crown counsel cited an English case in 1631 in which a prisoner had thrown a brickbat at the judge. The judge contempt the offender's right hand was cut off and he was hanged in court a few minutes later.

There is of course no possibility of such barbarous treatment being imposed today but the sentence in that case illustrates the absolute authority which judges still have in contempt cases. Members of the Senate committee were very much surprised when the sponsor of the amendment, Senator Roebuck, former attorney-general for Ontario, explained the extent of this authority to them.

The proposed change in the law would not restrict the judge's right to convict and sentence offenders for any act which might be construed as contempt of court. It would provide, however, that in cases of contempt in the face of the court there may be taken against the sentence but not against the conviction. In cases where the judge finds that contempt has taken place outside the courtroom, such as when a publication comment has been made on court proceedings, the amendment would establish the right to appeal against both the conviction and the sentence.

The fairness of this right of appeal is seen in the light of instances in recent years in which newspapers have been fined, sometimes substantial amounts, for reports of trials which the judge held to be inimicable to the rights of one of the parties involved.

While the right of fair comment is clear enough in theory it is not always so readily established in fact in a particular case. It is one thing to be ruled arbitrarily in contempt by a judge who has the right to hold the contempt anything whatever he may have to say in hearing upon a hearing in his court. It is quite another thing, the simplest justice indeed, to have the right of an appeal from such a conviction.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

If it is a fair presumption that the recent report of the royal commission on the Belleville conditions at the Don Jail is to produce some action in keeping with the fuss that has been raised, a larger study of prison conditions in the province might be warranted.

We have in mind some figures which were recently prepared by Daniel Coughlan, director of probation services in Ontario. It is Mr. Coughlan's view — with impressive figures to prove it — that we send too many people to jail.

Last year 30,000 people went to jail in this province. Our population is roughly 4,000,000, or about 1 with England, where there are 19,800 jailed. The population there is just over 50,000,000.

Mr. Coughlan is not convinced that the British behave any better than Canadians. He knows, however, that the penal system there makes much more use of probation as a corrective method. In Ontario about two-thirds of jail sentences are for 90 days or less. This is a great many of these offenders would be put on probation.

In the opinion of our chief probation officer this system is better for the lawbreaker in minor cases and very much to the advantage of the taxpayer. It costs $1,000 to maintain a person in jail for a year but only $100 to put him on probation. There is also a direct loss to the labor force of the country and the records show ever-increasing rates in short-term crimes.

But Mr. Coughlan's crushing argument is that 70 per cent of all persons jailed become repeaters!

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The Audubon Society is distributing all over the land a great deal of Canada's tiny mechanical bird call which is of European origin and which is a great success in the old countries. It is a gadget not much larger than a thimble, consisting of a wooden cylinder in which a small metal tube is turned with a key or a swirler. A great variety of warbles and squeaks can be produced. But the most important sound it utters, which can be easily simulated by the human voice, is the short, sharp chirp or alarm note which a great many species of birds employ.

This sound, repeated half a dozen times along a wintry country road, has an electric effect on nearly all birds within hearing whose presence in the thickets and undergrowth of such otherwise have been suspected. Bird spotters, of course, follow their sport all winter through; a fact not usually appreciated by golfers, female players, sailors and most other winter-indoors sportsmen. With a party of bird spotters last Sunday, to which I belonged, was a man with one of these new Audubon gadgets. In walking half a mile along a side-road between cedar swamps and thickety fields, he called, with that alarm chirp, the following birds out of the surrounding stillness and emptiness: forty - odd black-capped chickadees, song sparrows, twenty tree sparrows, four robins that should have been a thousand miles to the south by now, one Carolina wren, uncounted chickadees, several juncos, and half a dozen woodpeckers.

These birds came promptly, within six or a dozen seconds of what the alarm was all about. Without the alarm call, of course, we would have seen a fraction of the number, nor would we have supposed them to be in that silent and apparently deserted bush.

A very natural question arises from all this, in the minds of incidental, what the heck do you want to see all those birds for? Bird Unhappily, the addicted looked upon unable to think of a reasonable answer. Happily, however, the bird does.

Disheloth or Woollies

(Fort William Times-Journal)

A physician in London, England, has directed an attack against the use of long woollen underwear by the people of Great Britain in the winter. Long underwear made of cotton dishcloth was healthier, he said, and less itchy. Compared to a Canadian bushworker as he swings the axe and saws the timber, a stroke he will be apt to commence, "is that s-s-s!".

Just One Thing

(Brockville Recorder-Times)

The assistant chief constable of Nottingham was very unkind to little driver when he offered advice to city bus drivers. "If a woman driver puts out her hand it means one thing — her car window is open."

Looking Into Others' Homes

(Londen Times)

The generation that came to manhood in the last war has had unparalleled opportunities for inspecting the insides of other people's houses. For the inevitable period before the Nissen hut became the accepted form of lodging, most of them were billeted in requisitioned buildings or private houses, and when peace came they began a large-scale reconnaissance on their own. House-hunting, though often disappointing is seldom dull, and certainly gives the domestic arrangements of others, never far below the surface, was given fresh stimulus.

Nor has this curiosity been repressed by ownership, which generally take pleasure in conducting their visitors round the house, proudly demonstrating the ingenuity with which, to meet the changed needs of the age, they have been a kitchenette out of a bedroom on the first floor or transformed the conservatoire into a second bathroom.

Many are conducted tours, as indeed with any other, saintly in some reaches, of more interesting and more rewarding way of doing it is to turn the pages of one of those magazines concerned with the elegant side of life.

How the tenants here and there in the herbaceous border long past its best, the lucky ones who flood the well-planned gardens of the famous to their immaculates homes. Though the standard of good taste and comfort is beyond the reach of most, the pleasant feeling is less one of envy than of amazement at the prevailing ideals. Whether the home is a rambling cottage in Sussex with its dogs all over the floor or a hyper-real residence in Belgravia, the onlooker marvels at the lives of others being led with no apparent sign of disorder.

Preliminary confidence-testing he will, of course, expect, the better to show up the glories of the baggage, dining room, the unworn carpets, and the china cupboard filled with jade, but of the, to him, indispensable paraphernalia of contemporary civilization—the telephone directories, the soda syphon, the socks for darning, and the box of home-grown apples—the reader can find little trace. A Lucile Lorimer lingerie and a Marsden shepherdess occupy a mantelpiece which, in his house, would be hung with pipe cleaners, calendars and vases containing last April's old keys.

Such tidiness seems to him to be of another world—indeed it is in a flash that he has encountered its like—and he may well decide that it is a high price to pay for elegance. It may comfort him to recall the number of times he has been while looking shown round a house, the front garden and threshold of a room to apologise for the muddle.

The Prince Had Enough

(Winnipeg Free Press)

Recently H.R.H. Prince Charles set forth with high hopes and a high in his affections, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother, for a Symphony concert. It was his first attendance at such a gathering in all his four years and it may be that the suggestion came from his Lady Mother.

In the first twenty minutes all went well. Charles viewed the assembled company with a bright eye, which, perhaps, had especial gleams for the gentlemen who had long nose pipes and for those who beat brass plates together.

However, presently Charles began to fidget, drumming his heels on the floor. He did the nurse. But the Prince conferred with Mrs. Nursie, Princess Anne Bethesay, who in turn spoke to the Earl of Athlone, Colonel Wernher, Lord of the Isles and Prince and Great Steward of Scotland, all of whom shook their heads to indicate that enough is plenty.

Disconsolate smiled consent and the nurse arose with her charge. Queen Mary Highness with that, after all, he had brought a Lady and it wouldn't do to disappoint her. So she arose and with her Lady in Waiting and small boy. Having seen him into a motor car at the Buckingham Palace gate and — we hope — a current bun — apprehension encourage an agency she returned to her place.

Still twenty minutes was a long time for a boy and shake he gave his attention to the lovely noises which filled the hall. Indeed, His Royal Highness may have established a record for very young persons.

Naval Eccentrics

(Admiral Sir William James in Sea Power)

The commander-in-Chief, Pacific, who sent his shirts to England to be washed and covered his buttons with tissue paper; the captain who put on knickerbockers and a red coat for dinner; the captain who sat on the quarter-deck; the captain who, in the days of sail, when the officer, practised revolver-shooting at the patent log; the captain who, in the days of steam, used to use the engine-room telegraph to control bent. Fisher, I remember, covered a man in tin tiles and white waistcoats.

Normal officers, after serving for a few years on small ships up Africian rivers o ron coasts where Europeans were seldom met, often developed strange idiosyncracies, and it was not Fisher alone who of all the small ships on foreign stations that the ranks of the eccentrics were largely recruited.

Though their nuisance-value to their shipmates was often high, their passing was regretted because they did add to the spice and fun of life afloat.

Wants Gold Coins

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

The suggestion has been made that Canada should mint gold coins to commemorate the coronation of Queen Elizabeth. We think it is a good suggestion. Instructions should be followed up by Government action.

Two-bit Books In Millions

(Time Magazine)

For those avid critics who hoped to find the radioactive stuff of great literature, it was another disappointing year; the literary fallout simply eluded the Geiger. But publishers and booksellers, ready to settle for mere gold in the hills, found 1952 rewarding indeed. Not only was it customary to go up (as did book prices), but there were few map- or disappointments along the way. Even the dull quiets a few rich strikes, To plain readers prospecting for good, entertaining reading, the year brought a lot of satisfaction; six novels and six nonfiction books sold over 107,000 mark, creating the kind of bookstore traffic that carried along many more modest titles. In fiction, it was a year of new pronouncements but of oldtimers. The big sellers were the big names, the established favorites — Hemingway, Steinbeck, Du Maurier, Keyes, Costain, Wouk. It was the paperbacks that continued to make the biggest noise in the publishing world. With 50 to 60 million paperbacks sold in the last five years end, 270 million copies had been printed in the past 12 months, 100,000 outlets. While a depressing share of these were last year reprints, the first quarter there was also plenty of good reading in the two-bit editions. The confessions of Saint Augustine and The Universe and Dr. Einstein, Bucklingham Palace — and — we hope — a current bun — apprehension encourage an agency she returned to her place.

Still twenty minutes was a long time for a boy and shake he gave his attention to the lovely noises which filled the hall. Indeed, His Royal Highness may have established a record for very young persons.

An Appraisal Of Churchill

A New York Sunday Times reference to the 78th birthday of Mr. Churchill concludes: "He has lived more lives than a cat, done more things and played more parts than any man, historian or reader of our times. Yet he is not a superman, not one of the great brains of our era, and certainly he has been far from infallible. His unquenchable human spirit would seem to be an enlargement of Britain's virtues. But he is a unique person because he has a superabundance of those virtues, invincible courage, determination, honesty and vitality of the British character."

The Canadian Government, that Canada should mint gold coins to commemorate the coronation of Queen Elizabeth. We think it is a good suggestion. Instructions should be followed up by Government action.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

CONFINEMENT AND CALCIUM DEFICIENCY

Before we quarrel I beg to say that the suggestion I offer today is my own and avowedly I am no authority, but, like all of you, I have a head to use, on observations made or conclusions reached by reputable authorities.

It is unnecessary to cite authorities for the statement that the everyday diet of most Americans is deficient in calcium. Let appropriate doctor believe it is or cite an authority who denies it.

In current medical literature one finds frequent allusion to the steady loss of calcium from the bones, teeth and other tissues, that occurs whenever patients are confined to bed for weeks or months. Whether this enfeeblement can be prevented by seeing to it that the patient gets a high calcium diet throughout the period of confinement or by some daily calcium supplement of calcium-phosphorus-D, is a question which remains to be answered. Some physicians now take this precaution for their bed-ridden patients.

In this column I have harped on the manifold common ailments which, as I believe, are due to calcium deficiency, and which, as hundreds of readers have reported, respond to increased calcium if they take over a sufficient period of months.

Let us talk to follow I'll quote briefly the views of recognized authorities on the physiological action of calcium. For the present suffice to say that calcium is needed to prevent spasm or constriction of the coronary arterioles and maintain the vigor of the heart beat. Remember, this applies not only to an adequate daily intake of calcium in the diet (liberal use of milk and milk products such as cheese and cottage cheese, greens as relish or salad, peanuts, peas, beans and nuts), but also to preparations of calcium (with phosphorus and vitamin D) used in a daily supplement for the ordinary American diet which is usually deficient in calcium-phosphorus-D.

These are some of the facts which it seems to me raise a grave question of the practice of confining to bed for weeks or months patients who have had a coronary casualty.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MEMORY DIARY

Wise and happy sayings that I long ago committed to memory still remain with me. Many of the quotations I use in these talks have been committed to memory in my mind. Every once in a while they bob up and are used to emphasize a thought or suggestion. I have a little library bet up in my own mind.

And then, there are those happy experiences in life that I am trying to bring to mind from time to time. Happily many of the unhappy things have left my memory city. The friends we keep through the years are those we only see the good. It is so easy to forget and forgive if we only decide to do so. Some people who does not receive his just due until long years after he is gone. It is then that the real story of his life is recorded—with the small frailties blotted out.

Many a man's enemy has boomed as heroic after he is gone. He wasn't so bad, after all! So it is wise to think the best of everything and every person in the diary of our mind. That's the way to have a healthy mind and peace in the heart. There is much room in the mind. But there is reserved a few pleasant pages for pleasant things, and kindly thoughts, than for anything else. Many thoughts recorded there crowed out the happy ones that ought to stay.

Thoughts are the well thought of by others. Let us then, think well of them, for it is the cultivated wealth so precious as that of a host of friends. Keep them forever in that diary of your mind, so they won't be forgotten. Those memories grow more precious as we grow older. That is why we should keep on adding them as we can bring quickly to mind when we need them to give us comfort and assurance — and perhaps to give us that so much needed spiritual refreshment for the dark days. We can then pick those "roses in December" that we so much loved in June.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

IF YOU WANT TO

Someone once asked a devoted follower of Andrew Jackson whether or not he thought Jackson would get to heaven, and the answer, Christian replied, was a snort: "He will if he wants to."

"Old Hickory" had a reputation for a strong will which finds room down across the century with as much force as it did in Jackson's day, 1830's.

Jackson generally got what he wanted. He was not above killing a man in a duel or threatening to hang John C. Calhoun as Vice President of the United States.

There was something behind the statement of this loyal partisan that Jackson would get to heaven if he wanted to. Put you and I will get to heaven if we want to—and only if we want to. Our desire to get there is the one essential spiritual requirement of our making it.

People go to heaven or to hell because they want to. This—which is just another way of saying that God respects our wishes—does have eternal significance.

If we press forward to the right goal and turn our faces heavenward, the gates of hell and the powers of darkness cannot prevent our reaching the desirable heights.

Think sink down into hell—both in this world and the next—if we will. Think and keep on courage, will power, and purpose enough to set their faces heavenward.

Will you get to heaven? Yes, if you want to!

Ike Needs $20,000 a Week

(Wall Street Journal)

The Republicans are having money troubles.

They are not broke by any means. On the contrary, by the refreshed $200,000 to "Citizens for Eisenhower" with a goodly part that the citizens are welcome to return the money to Keep Ike in the Commodore.

Therein lies the problem. Since the November 4 election, the GOP President-elect has maintained headquarters at New York's Commodore Hotel, cost $20,000 a week. He has 43 rooms on the sixth floor of the Commodore and roughly the same on the payroll.

There's no statutory provision for financing such a government in exile — "Free Government", as the Ikemen like to call it, as the Ikemen like to call it.

So Rep. Hugh Scott, of Pennsylvania was called in to start a fund raising campaign to pay the rent and some of the payroll until the taxpayers start footing Ike's bill after he moves to Washington next month.

Defence Minister Sends Message To Armed Services

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Claxton, in a year-end message to the forces said Friday that Canada's contributions in Korea and Europe are proof of the determination to resist aggression and build up Western military strength.

The minister's message said in part:

"Christmas 1952 finds our Canadian forces serving at home and abroad in many lands.

"Our soldiers in Korea, our seamen in Far Eastern Waters and our airmen winging their way across the Pacific on the airlift are evidence of the United Nations' determination to repel aggression wherever it may occur.

"Our brigade in Germany and our increasing air squadrons in the United Kingdom and France are Canada's proof of our faith and determination to play her part in upholding her share of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization .....

"To the Navy, Army, Air Force, defence research board and all civilian members of the department, I extend my very best wishes for a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year."

Senator Taft Clinches Post Of Floor Leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Friday virtually clinched the post of Republican floor leader in the new Senate as Democrats stepped aside.

Thus a post of tremendous power in Congress will go to a man who fought President-elect Eisenhower bitterly for the Republican presidential nomination. The success of the Eisenhower legislative program could depend in no small measure on how well the two can co-operate.

Doubt as to who would capture the prize ended with an announcement by Taft that he was a candidate for the job and that he had assurances from Senators Styles Bridges, Rep.-N.H., and William F. Knowland, Rep.-Calif., that they are not seeking it.

Second Man Held Identified As Participant

BOSTON (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation today has in custody a second man identified as a participant in the $1,-000 Brink's holdup.

FBI affidavits named the unidentified man as having been in the group of hooded gunmen who escaped with the largest U. S. cash haul after tying up five employees in the armored car firm's vaults, Jan. 17, 1950. The man is described as 37 years old and having a long record.

First sworn affidavits, made available Thursday night, named Joseph (Specs) O'Keefe, 44, of Boston as one of the Brink's robbers. But since then, all papers having connection with the hold-up have been removed from files and hidden.

Allege Toronto Men Working Extortion Plot

TORONTO (CP)—One man was under arrest Friday in what police say is an extortion racket.

George Lumsden, 32, of Toronto was charged Thursday night with extorting about $800 from John Knowles of Toronto. Police said Knowles was "arrested" in a downtown hotel last October by two men impersonating police officers.

They added that Knowles was released on payment of $50 and later paid out $750 which the men told him was a bond they had to put up because authorities had discovered Knowles' release.

LAST DEBT PAID

FLINT, Mich. (CP)—Hotel manager Scott Shattuck opened an envelope Friday and found a brief note and $1. The unsigned note read:

"This is for a towel which I found in my coat sleeve.

"He died in Korea."

Freighter Eases Toward Port, Rudder Damaged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian freighter Maplecove today eased downward Vancouver with a damaged rudder, trying to bring her 62-man crew into port in time for Christmas.

In case she doesn't make it, the rescue tug Island Sovereign, speeding to her aid, is carrying a fat supply of turkeys and plum puddings.

The two ships may rendezvous Sunday 50 miles off the British Columbia coast. If the Maplecove can still keep going under her own steam, the Island Sovereign will simply act as an escort.

The 10,000-ton Canadian Pacific Steamship freighter damaged her rudder Thursday 1,200 miles west of here and the crew had no control over her. However, Capt. R. A. Leicester reported Friday the ship could make 10 knots in quiet seas.

With a break from the weather, and if the Maplecove holds up, seamen figured the vessel could make it into Vancouver Tuesday or Wednesday. She is homeward bound from Yokohama after her second run to the Orient.

Bey of Tunis Signs Two Decrees Asked by France

TUNIS, North Africa (Reuters) — The Bey of Tunis today signed two reform decrees proposed by the French, soon after receiving an ultimatum from the French governmegnt.

His concession to the French averts a crisis in the protectorate and possibly prevented drastic changes in his own palace.

Count Jean de Hauteclocque, French resident-general, flew back to Tunis early today after conferring all week with French cabinet officials over the Bey's non-co-operation. The ultimatum he had delivered to the Bey on his arrival was drafted by ministers in Paris late Friday night.

Hauteclocque said he had persuaded the Bey to sign the two decrees last Monday but that the Bey reneged that night. He did not go to the palace himself but sent his deputy, Robert de Boissezon, to deliver the note.

Terms of the ultimatum were not made known, but experts here said the Bey would probably either sign or renounce his throne. The residency was reported ready to set up a regency council to handle the royal affairs of the protectorate.

Charged With Theft

Ottawa (CP) — Frank Harper, 58 year old civilian employee of the army's Plouffe Park ordnance depot, was charged Friday with theft o $250 worth of army clothing from the depot. The RCMP, who arrested him, said the theft had been carried out during the last few weeks.

Harper was held overnight at a city police station and was to appear in court today.

The RCMP said a quantity of clothing missing from the army stores was found in Harper's home.

France to Deliver Formal Protest To United States

WASHINGTON (CP) — France shortly will deliver a stiff formal protest to the United States against what it describes as interference with the internationally-recognized "rights of seamen" by new U.S. immigration regulations, it was learned Friday.

The French cabinet has taken the matter in hand after hearing Ambassador Acte following a protest by more than 1,000 crew members of the French liner Liberte.

The men object to being questioned by U.S. immigration officials about possible past connections with Communism.

The McCarran Act, which goes into effect Dec. 24, bars foreign seamen from landing in U.S. ports unless they have been cleared and found to have no Communist affiliations.

Safe Containing About $100,000 Stolen Nov. 30

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — The RCMP confirmed Friday that a safe containing about $100,000 in cash and cheques was stolen at a railway station here Nov 30.

They said the safe was taken from an office of the White Pass and Yukon Railway and contained $2,500 in cash and $95,000 in cheques.

In Ottawa, RCMP headquarters said it had received word that the safe held about $3,300 in cash and $132,000 in cheques and was carried away from the British Yukon Navigation Company Limited. The cheques were said to have been payable to the company.

First word of the robbery came Thursday from a Dawson Creek radio station.

RCMP here said they had no details about the robbery.

Lakehead Sees Late Closing Of Navigation

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — One of the latest navigation seasons on record closed here Thursday when the SS Mohawk Deer shipped from Thunder Bay harbor at 3:25 p.m. with a cargo of 320,000 bushels of wheat and oats.

The Sir Thomas Shaughnessy left at 2.30 p.m. Thursday, the Thunder Bay at noon, and the Hagarty and Westmount late Wednesday night. Two other big carriers, the Sir James Dunn and the Cloverdale, will winter here. About five others are wintering here.

Three lighthouse keepers were picked up today by the tug Sarah more and will be brought into Port Arthur. The tug James Whalen took six other keepers aboard Thursday, and was to drop them off at their homes at Rossport Friday.

The weather for closing operations, and the last month of shipping was the best in the memory of 70-year-old Bill Mutch, United Towing and Salvage superintendent.

The Mohawk Deer, owned by Seacomfleet Steamships of Montreal and skippered by Captain Joe J. Mailhot of Three Rivers, Que., had clear sailing when she left.

CHICKEN THIEVES ACTIVE IN THURLOW

Chicken thieves are active in the Thurlow township district north of the city, according to a local market gardener who claims he lost ten laying pullets from his henhouse the other night.

"I heard the racket at the henhouse, but before I could get out to the barn the thieves had left with their loot," he said.

I. McCoy Heads Crop Improvement Association

Irwin McCoy, Marmora township, was named president of the Hastings county crop improvement association at the annual meeting held in Stirling. Vice-presidents are Harold Chambers, Stirling, and Ridley Wallbridge, R.R. 3, Belleville. A. O. Dalrymple, agricultural representative, is secretary.

Approximately 90 county farmers turned out for the meeting which saw a morning discussion of the various projects. Emphasis had been placed on soil conservation with special attention being given to fertility improvement.

During the afternoon session Professor N. R. Richards, head of the soils department of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, gave an illustrated address on "Soil Fertility, the Key to Crop Production." He showed slides illustrating the effects of deficiencies of the common plant nutrients. A question-and-answer period followed.

Directors of the association for 1953 are as follows: Sidney, Fred Campbell, Douglas Ketcheson and Douglas Fyear; Thurlow, Clifford Ketcheson, William Leeming and Charles Treverton; Tyendinaga, Fred A Robinson, Earl Badgley and Joe Hanley; Rawdon, Lorne Hagerman, Glen Heath and Ivan Shaver; Huntingdon, Arthur Wood, Clifford Mitts and Gerald Kirby; Hungerford, Frank Fewster, Bernard Hunt and Donald Martin; Marmora, Harry Neal and Everett Barrons; Madoc, William J. Stewart, Allen Ketcheson and Bruce Robinson.

Heavy Supply of Turkeys Offered At Firm Prices on City Market

Christmas fowl reigned supreme on the local produce market today as almost every available space was filled with turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens for the Yuletide table. Prices were generally firm at mid-morning.

King Turkey ranged all the way from 59c per lb. for undrawn toms, and up to a top of 75c per lb. for fully drawn hen turkeys. The general price, however, was straight 60c for undrawn birds, and take your pick of either a tom or hen turkey.

Geese also were plentiful with vendors asking 50c to 55c per lb.; ducks were quoted at the same figure, while chickens ranged from 50c to 60c per lb.

There was little change in egg prices with grade "A" and mediums being quoted at last week's price of 65c and 62c, while pullets increased slightly to 60c per dozen.

Vegetable prices remained generally at last week's level. Potatoes held at $2.75 per bag; Spanish onions at 90c per basket and cooking onions at 75c. Carrots, beets and parsnips were 50c per basket. Sauerkraut was 35c per quart.

Top grade Delicious apples sold at $4.25 per hamper or 85c per basket; Spys were $4 per hamper and Pippins $3.25.

Christmas trees covered almost every available spot on the outside market, ranging from 75c to $2.75.

Elm cordwood was offered at $14 per cord while dry hard stovewood was quoted at $18.00 per cord.

Lindsay Will Enforce Curfew at 10 O'clock

LINDSAY (CP) — Police Chief John Hunter said Friday that a 10 p.m. curfew will be enforced on youths 16 and under to cut down on juvenile crime.

In recent weeks 10 boys, all under 16, have appeared in court on charges of theft, including stealing money from milk bottles and ornaments from cars.

Chief Hunter said parents will be charged with neglect if their children are caught violating the curfew more than once. Lindsay is 130 miles northeast of Toronto.

Cash's Employees Hold Christmas Party at Cedars

On Thursday the annual Christmas party of Cash's employees was held at the Club Cedars with 76 members and friends sitting down to a delightful turkey supper.

Following dinner the president of the club, Mr. Kerr, called on Mr. M. C. Perrill, the general manager, and Mr. Philbin, the plant manager.

The draw for the club prize was made by Mrs. N. Simmons of the Club Cedars, with Mrs. B. Williams as the winner. The door prize was won by Mrs. G. S. Kerr. Following this Santa's assistant in the person of Mr. T. Hood, distributed the exchange gifts.

Rounding out the evening round and square dancing was enjoyed to the music of Wal Taylor and his Rhythm Ranchiders. Good prizes were won by Mr. T. Helm and Mrs. F. Buddle, Mr. Philbin and Mrs. La-Rocque.

The committee in charge were thanked for a successful evening.

Remember...!

As the busy holiday season approaches with all its hustle and bustle, the driving problem becomes more acute each day.

Each year around Christmas and New Year the accident rate is much higher than other times of the year because of slippery roads, fast drivers and carelessness.

A little courtesy and a special effort to drive carefully may save much grief at this pleasant time of year.

Christmas Party

On Tuesday evening, the Good Companions' Club of Tabernacle United Church held a Christmas party in the church basement. Miss Jean Vickers, assisted by Miss Lewis, had the group through some lively and hilarious games.

In keeping with the Christmas season, there was a carol singsong and this was heard, and with a "Whoop-there", Santa Claus came bounding into the room to distribute the gifts that were piled around the gaily decorated Christmas tree and to collect his reward from the pretty girls.

The Christmas refreshments were evidence of careful planning and were admired as well as enjoyed by all.

Women's Activities

EGGLETON W.M.S. 82 W.A.

Madoc Junction — The December meeting of the Eggleton W.M.S. and W.A. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bert Riddle, with 15 and four children present.

Mrs. Clarence Pitchett presided over the program that had been prepared by Mrs. Warren Harlow and opened the meeting by reading a poem, "The Shepherd's Song." Christmas hymns were sung with Mrs. Bert Reide as pianist.

The devotional period was taken by Mrs. Gordon Nelson and included the reading of the Scripture lesson; a reading, "The Bethlehem Innkeeper's Wife," by Mrs. Harry Clark, and a solo by Mrs. Maurice Clancy, which were enjoyed.

Mrs. C. Lansing gave a splendid paper on Christmas.

Rev. and Mrs. L. Norman attended the meeting and Mr. Norman told the story of "The Cobbler."

Reports

The business period followed with several reports being given.

Mrs. Harlow offered her home for the January meeting and membership tea, and Mrs. Gordon Bigley will prepare the program.

The birthday bank was opened and money counted.

Mr. Norman conducted the installation of officers for 1953, Mrs. Pitchett thanked the hostess; Mr. Norman, Mrs. Lansing the program convener, and all who had assisted on the program.

Mrs. Reide served refreshments.

FOXBORO W.A.

The annual meeting of the Foxboro W.A. was held on Wednesday afternoon in the S.S. rooms with a good attendance.

The president, Mrs. Simmons, gave the call to worship followed by a Christmas poem and prayer. Group 3 was in charge of the devotional and program.

Rev. H. W. Giffin and Mrs. Giffin showed a film on "The Birth of Jesus" which was most instructive. Christmas carols were heartily sung. Mrs. Tupper gave a Christmas reading. Mrs. L. Carter "Christmas Bells", and Mrs. G. Docette "The Christmas Story". Mrs. R. Hall and Mrs. F. Bills favored with a lovely Christmas duet.

The president took charge of the business. Mrs. Hodgen reported having sent out over 30 cards to the bereaved and sick. The treasurer, Mrs. Hicks, reported a successful year, the group having raised over $400.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Chambers and Mrs. Arthurs for their work in making the new stage curtains which were donated to the S.S. by the C.G.I.T. girls. One hundred dollars was donated to the M. and M. Fund and new bibles/bibs were to be bought.

Group 2 will be in charge of the March meeting.

Mr. Giffin closed the meeting after which a social half hour was spent with a cup of tea and cookies.

German Baron Will be Groom Of Nancy Oakes

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Nancy Oakes, heiress to a vast Canadian gold mine fortune, is to be married Dec. 31 in the Church of St. Mary to Baron Ernst Lyssard von Hoyningen Huene.

Lady Eunice Oakes announced the forthcoming ceremony at which the bishop of Nassau is to officiate.

Miss Oakes' father, Sir Harry Oakes, was slain at Westborne, a former family home here, on July 7, 1943. Nancy's former husband, Count Alfred de Marigny, was accused of his murder, but Marigny was acquitted but ordered to leave the colony.

Miss Oakes divorced De Marigny after standing loyally beside him through the trial.

Since the divorce Nancy has lived in New York, California and Mexico City as well as in Palm Beach, Fla., and Nassau. She met the baron in California. He is the son of Baron and Baroness Herman von Hoyningen-Huene, Chasse at Oberammergau, C.rmany.

The younger brother, Ture, will be best man. A reception will follow the ceremony at Jacaranda House, Lady Oakes' Nassau residence.

Weston Bakeries Hold Annual Christmas Party

Weston Bakeries held their annual Christmas party at the Kiwanis Centre on Tuesday evening. The activities opened with films for the children, sing-song and an hour of entertainment.

Presentations were made to Mr. and Mrs. T. Beninger, Mrs. Niblock and Miss Niblock by Gerald Howis and Ron Stoneburg.

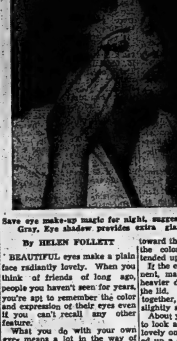
Door prizes were drawn by the children for 15 lucky people.



Mr. Beninger, Mrs. Niblock and Miss Niblock thanked the employees for the lovely gifts and wished all present the compliments of the season.

Refreshments and coffee were served to the 150 present. All enjoyed the happy time.

Afternoon Attraction

Eye Shadow for Added Charm

Save eye make-up magic for night, suggests Movie Star Coleen Gray, Eye shadow provides extra glamor after dark.

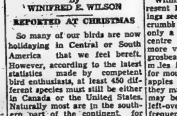
By HELEN FOLLETT

BEAUTIFUL eyes make a plain face radiantly lovely. When you think of friends of long ago, people you haven't seen for years, you're apt to remember the color and expression of their eyes even if you can't recall any other feature.

What you do with your own eyes means a lot in the way of attractiveness. Keep them bright and sparkling, let them send friendly messages. No matter how you feel, don't let them take on a cold staring look.

Night Make-up

Night is the time for added eye magic that comes out of the make-up box. You can add to the natural witchery by laying on eye shadows. Go slowly, be cautious, know what you're doing.



The shadow should be cobweb faint, so artificial will not be too apparent. Put a little dab under the lashes in the centre of the lid then smooth softly upward and toward the ends of the eyelid. Let the color fade away as it is extended upward.

If the eyes are a bit too prominent, make the shadow a little heavier directly in the centre of the lid. Let the eyes are set close together, deepen the shadow slightly at the outer corners.

About your eyebrows! You want to look as if you combed with a comb, not as if you dressed up a crazy design in a nightmare. Those horrid straight lines that look like nothing human are out.

If you must use a pencil for darkening, use it on the little silky fuzzies that grow on the skin. Feather the marks. Do little quick strokes from the inner terminals to the outer one. Unless the lashes are extremely thin, you may find that cancels your eye liner, gives a more pleasing effect than the eyes.

If you use mascara on your lashes, be sure you get the tearproof, unsmudgeable kind. Otherwise you may have little mud puddles under your whiskers.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

REPORTED AT CHRISTMAS

So many of our birds are now holidaying in Central or South America that we feel bereft. However, according to the latest statistics made by competent bird enthusiasts, at least 450 different species are still be either in Canada or the United States. Naturally most are in the southern part of the continent, for there many of the birds spend the winter because the climate is quite suitable for them. Nevertheless, even in the cold winter weather of Nova Scotia, there are now 25 species or more within a 10 mile radius on Christmas Day. Last December 28th, members of the Newfoundland Natural History Society in St. John's identified 21 varieties in the city and half a mile along the coast at Torbay and Willess Bay.

"You may ask, "What kinds of birds can brave the cold?" The big test is really not ability to resist cold, but whether or not the bird can obtain the required food at this time of year. Big bodies of water are still free of ice. Therefore geese, teal, certain species of ducks, and gulls can yet obtain fish from the Atlantic Ocean, large lakes, or wide rivers.

Within urban districts the overgrown English sparrow still stalks large seem to thrive on scraps or crumbs found on the streets; and only a short distance from the centre of the cities we notice more varieties. A flock of pine grosbeaks, males in pinky red, females in grey-brown and grey, look for mountain ash berries and old cappies hanging from trees that they enjoy as the seeds. A robin may be staying, subsisting on leftovers of cultivated crops and frequently found feeding on insects and larvae in bark crevices; several species of woodpeckers live on insects hidden deep in trees; chickadees eat nuts for their holiday meal.

A flash of bright blue in a wooded area means a jay also is endeavoring to satisfy its hunger on nuts; the mottled grouse is eating buds of trees. Pellets at the foot of a big tree where six a sleepy owl tell a tale. Perhaps it feg on chipmunk, a mouse, or a small bird.

Among birds best able to survive a Canadian winter are seed eaters. Unless snowdrifts are unusually deep, some weeds are sure to poke up, and others hang from bushes and trees. These provide nourishment for juncos, redpolls, crossbills, crossbills and tree sparrows. Even purple finches and goldfinches may remain here for Christmas dinner.

JET CRASHES, 2 DIE

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

There has been a good deal of discussion this year about putting Christ back into Christmas. A leading article in Maclean's magazine points to the way we have twisted Christmas until now when we have hit an all-time low.

The writer of this particular article estimates that we Canadians will spend $2 billion for beer and liquor this Christmas, that we will go into debt about 100 millions, that we'll spend twice as much for Christmas card postage as we shall for missionary work, and on the strength of former years, these estimates will not likely vary much from those suggested.

The stark fact that men will spend more than a million dollars on perfumes alone, makes you stop and wonder if a few more dollars could be spared to help many worthwhile projects under way in every community for the benefit of the sick, the aged and the unfortunate.

The largest expenditure, for liquor — $5 millions is shocking, especially when you examine the tragic results of stimulating "the Christian Christmas". What Christian spirit is this anyway? this excuse for getting drunk; getting into debt and getting away from everything Christmas should stand for?

Banking Advice

At the bottom of each page in the depositor's pass book of the Bank of Montreal appears a sound little sentence which is well worth noticing. Each month they run this "Opportunity comes to those with ready cash" — "Economy is not thrift; it is management" — "Nothing gives more confidence than money in the bank" — "Plan to save and you can save" — "Care for your money and it will care for you" — "A definite objective will help a small bird.

Amazing birds best able to survive a Canadian winter are seed eaters. Unless snowdrifts are unusually deep, some weeds are sure to poke up, and others hang from bushes and trees. These provide nourishment for juncos, redpolls, crossbills, crossbills and tree sparrows. Even purple finches and goldfinches may remain here for Christmas dinner.

WOMAN PLAYS SANTA

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP)—An unidentified Moose Jaw woman played Santa Claus in a local Santa Claus theatre Thursday. The woman dropped a roll of bills tied with an elastic band at the Salvation Army Christmas Cheer box. In the roll were four $100 bills and a $20 bill.

BROADCAST PAPAL TALK

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Pope's Christmas message to the world will be broadcast in 24 languages—including those spoken in most countries behind the Iron Curtain. The message, in reply to Christmas greetings offered him by the College of Cardinals, will be given Dec. 24 for the 14th consecutive year before Pius XII became pope in 1939.

Girl Guides Mothers' Group Holds Christmas Party

Recently the newly formed mothers' group for Company 7, Girl Guides, held a party at Queen Mary School for the Guides.

District Commissioner Mrs. R. D. Arnott and Area Commissioner, Mrs. H. G. Amos attended this occasion.

During the evening, Commissioner Mrs. R. D Arnott, drew the lucky ticket for a Yuletide centrepiece, which was won by Mrs. William Harden, 23 Sinclair St. Proceeds from the draw will provide assistance for the mothers' group.

The executive are — Mrs. Charles Jeffs, Mrs. R. Shell, Mrs. F. P. Clarke, Mrs., T. W. Horton and Mrs. Valyear.

Instead of the Guides exchanging gifts among themselves, each provided food and clothing for distribution by the Salvation Army.

Capt. E. Samuels was assisted during camp fire by Brenda Briscoe, Sandra Carol singing and Mrs. C. D. Fuzzen reading a Christmas story.

Patrol leader, Eleanor J. Clarke, graciously thanked the mothers for helping them make their last meeting of the year most enjoyable.

KILLS 5, SELF IN RAGE

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP)—A Yuletide customer criticized the work of a pottery maker at Quiriguana Friday and the pottery maker went berserk, killing five persons, including the customer, with machete and pistol. Then he took poison and died. Police said the customers' poked fun at Eladio Marzon's pots and jugs, making Marzon so violently angry that he killed two men, two women and a child.

CHARLES DEYO DIES

NEW YORK (AP)—Charles W. Deyo, 72, former president and chairman of the board of the F. W. Woolworth Company, died Thursday night at his home at New Canaan, Conn. Deyo, a native of New Falls, N.Y., entered business with the S. H. Knox Company in London, Ont., in 1902. He came to New York in 1912 when the Knox firm merged with Woolworth.

KQUERRY GETS DIVORCE

LONDON (AP)—Group Capt. Peter Townsend, an extra equerry to the Queen, won a divorce Friday on the grounds of the misconduct of his wife, Mrs. Cecil Rosemary Townsend. An extra equerry is called to attend the Queen at big state ceremonies. Townsend formerly was deputy controller of the royal household at Buckingham Palace. John Adolphus Cecil Lazzio, son of a portrait painter, was cited as corespondent.

"Turn the Corner for Real Savings"

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Christmas is a good time to forgive and forget, he said.

We hear a great deal about girls who send letters to boys overseas giving them the brush off, because, if their absence they found someone else at home they liked better.

Now comes the story in reverse when a soldier at home got the brush-off in a letter from her husband overseas, because he found a new love on his side of the world.

Here is the wife's description of what happened:

"The holidays that are here keep reminding me of a very sad Christmas last year.

"The ten years I was married to a man who had always been the kindest and most considerate that ever lived. Then, just about a year ago during the Christmas holidays, while he was on duty in the Far East, I got a long letter from him, telling me about his interest in a woman also in service over there, and demanding that I give him an immediate divorce. Had I gotten a message saying that he had been killed in action, I couldn't have hurt any more.

"Through the help of an army chaplain, we wrote a letter to my husband's superior officer, as a result of which my husband was relieved from active duty and flown home, arriving here in early February. The first few weeks that he was home will never be erased from my memory, for where he had always treated me as though I were a queen, he was now really cruel to me. I found he had drawn away with his wedding ring, and given this woman his college ring, after we had all sacrificed and done without to get him through college in the first place.

"About six months after his return, he told me that he would not have married this woman even though he were free to do so, and that he loved me, although he said he knew I would not believe him, which was right.

"Am I making a mistake by not letting myself fall in love with him again? At times, if I do let myself go, I'm almost happy. But what can I do to forget and have faith in him again? I don't seem to have so much feeling left, and we are cross with each other at the least little thing. Could it be different if I acted toward him like I used to?"

Still Loves Him

In spite of the terrible shock this wife received, her letter of words no doubt whatever in my mind that she is still in love with her husband. It is not loss of love, but loss of confidence in him and bitter resentment against him which keeps her from letting herself "fall in love with him again." Hence, in my opinion, there could be nothing that would mean more to her than to make a real effort to destroy the barrier now between them, before it is to late.

Under such circumstances, as hers, disillusion, bitterness and resentment are not only perfectly natural but inevitable. The only way she can get rid of them, however, and have any hope of restoring her former relationship with her husband, is to ignore them, so far as possible, and start concentrating on making their previous happiness a reality again. If, no matter how she feels, she will act toward her husband as though nothing had happened, keeping her mind fixed at all times on the fact that, since she once thought him "the kindest and sweetest person that ever lived," he may once again prove so, it may well be that she can work through this desperate period and into happiness once more.

Even though these Christmas holidays cannot help reminding her of the tragedy that befell her just a year ago, this season of "good will toward men" does offer her the best opportunity in the world to leave that tragedy behind and set herself resolutely toward the realization of a truly happy New Year. If her husband sees that she really wishes to make it so, and if he was sincere when he told her he still loved her, surely he will want to do his part, and so together they may well eventually succeed in re-establishing their old loving partnership.

QUESTION:

Could you send me a recipe for salt-rising bread?—Jennie C.

ANSWER:

SALT-RISING BREAD

This is a very temperamental bread to dough, so keep out of draughts.

Scald 1 cup milk and pour over 1-3 cup cornmeal or preferably white. Let this stand in a warm place until it begins to ferment—about 24 hrs. It must be kept warm if you have to use a heating pad! Heat until lukewarm 2 cups milk, 3-4 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 tablespoon lard. Stir into these 3 1-2 cups sifted all-purpose flour. Stir this into the corn mixture when it is ready. Place the bowl containing these ingredients in a pan of lukewarm water for about 2 hours, or until bubbles work up from the bottom (you will have to keep adding boiling hot water to the water around it to keep it warm). Stir in 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour. Place the dough in three greased 8x10 inch pans until it has doubled in bulk. Place the loaves in a moderate oven of 350 deg. Fahr, for about 15 minutes, then increase heat gradually to 425 deg., baking the bread about 1 hour in all. You may have to try this 3 or 3 times before you recognize the stages at which steps are taken, however, it is worth learning, for the loaf is fine and delicious.

QUESTION:

Would you please give me your recipe for butter tarts which, I believe, contain a little orange or lemon rind?—Mrs. H. C. A.

ANSWER:

BUTTER OR BANBURY TARTS

Mix together in saucepan 1 cup each chopped raisins and sugar, 2 tablespoons fine cracker crumbs, 1 well-beaten egg, grated rind of 1 lemon or orange, 1-2 tablespoons lemon juice and 2 tablespoons butter. Stir over low heat until they begin to thicken. Remove from heat and cool. Partly fill individual baked tart shells. Top tarts with whipped cream or do not cook this filling and about the unbaked tart shells, 2-3 full, and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 12 minutes.

QUESTION:

I was delighted with your recipe for cocoanut dreams. You mentioned having a recipe for Honeymoon Bars and Matrimonial Squares.

I would appreciate having these, could you publish them in time for Christmas? I always get some cookie recipes that might be different, or maybe tips for making Christmas Candy. —Lily C.

ANSWER:

I hope you saw the cookie recipes that have appeared over the past few weeks—also candy.

HONEYMOON BARS

(2 variations)

Into measuring cup put brown sugar to 1-2 cup mark then fill cup with white sugar; put in bowl with 1 cup soft shortening, 2 teaspoons vanilla, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1 egg. Beat hard for 1 minute. Add 1 cup sifted flour and 1 cup coarse rolled oats. Mix into first mixture and spread in buttered pan 11x7x1½ inches. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 45 to 55 minutes. (For very thin cookies spread this batter in 2 pans.) Melt 1-2 lb. semi-sweet chocolate in bowl over hot water (do not let set). When melted spread this over baked layer, spreading evenly. Now chop 1-3 cup walnuts or Brazils or almonds fine and mix together with wax paper and sprinkle uncovered half with the chopped nuts. Remove paper and sprinkle other half with shredded cocoanut. Thus you have two varieties. Cool until chocolate is set. Cut with sharp knife into 24 bars. Extremely popular and good-looking.

MATRIMONIAL SQUARES

(date and oatmeal)

Cream 1 cup soft shortening and 1 cup brown sugar and mix well into them 1 cup flour and 2 cups rolled oats. Spread half of this in buttered pan to depth of 1-2 inch. Spread over this the filling —Simmer 1 lb. dates in 3-4 cup water and 1-4 cup sugar until a soft mush. Cool and spread on layer in pan. Cover with remaining crumb mixture and flatten with fork. Bake about 20 to 30 minutes at 350 deg. Fahr. Cut into squares with sharp knife when cool.

Slim Suit

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THE long torso line is a feature of many of the advance-early spring suits, as well as those made for resort travel. This slender suit is of navy and white imported tweed, with navy wool fringe at the collar to lend a nice bit of decor. The sleeves are three-quarter full-length and cuffed. Two curved, slit pockets below the shoulder line where the double-breasted closing starts, and a cuff at the jacket hem are other details. The skirt is reed slim.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

When she invites him to be her escort to club dance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

On the last Saturday in January, the girls' club to which I belong is giving a dance, the first dance they have ever given. The tickets are five dollars each, to cover expenses. I have already invited my escort, but he has balked about tickets, and neither have I. Am I expected to buy both tickets? If I am, should I explain this to him? If I do buy tickets, do I give them to my escort, and when? Supper is included in the price of the tickets, but if there are any other expenses, such as perhaps a snack after the dance, as well as the transportation to and from the dance, who pays these expenses?—Brenda L.

When you invited the young man to be your guest, you became his hostess . . . and therefore it is you who buys both tickets. I imagine he took this for granted, though you did too, and so did not mention it. But if you think it needs explanation, tell him that you have the tickets, and ask him if he would like to take care of them now, or shall you keep them and give them to him (which is the easier way) when he calls for you to take you to the dance. All such incidental expense as transportation and taxi-fer-dance snacks are your escort's responsibility.

Husband and wife and wife's mother may combine to send wedding present

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister-in-law (my husband's sister) is to be married soon to a young man who is a very close friend of my family. In fact, it was I who introduced them to each other. My mother and this young man's mother are very dear friends, like close friend. When we receive invitations to the wedding, would it be proper for my mother and me to "join forces" and send one important wedding present, or should we each send a present separately?—T.

The customary way would be for you and your husband to give a wedding present together, and for your mother (and father, if he is living) to send a separate present. However, if otherwise your mother would be sending a present alone, I see no reason why you and your husband and your mother shouldn't combine to send a more important present than you could be sent if you sent presents individually.

Matron of honor's husband not to be wedding attendant

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please advise me about my problem. Because of special circumstances, I am planning to have both a matron of honor and a maid of honor. The husband of the matron of honor is not to be a wedding attendant. Therefore I must, of course, provide a partner for her. What is the proper arrangement?—Doris M.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Give your child beauty

All modern mothers realize the importance of health and medical advice for the well-being of their children. Crooked teeth are straightened, posture is watched,

Even little girls are conscious of appearance

how she looks when she is grown up. Not only that, but she will develop grooming habits that will add to her attractiveness later on. She should be taught to enjoy bathing, since cleanliness will develop into the delightful quality of personal fastidiousness.

As soon as she is old enough to wash her face and hands, she should be taught to make a thorough job of it. She should have a blunt scissors, which should be changed frequently; towels should be soft and absorbent. Careless face-washing in the teen years may result in pimples and blackheads, a condition from which many eighth-graders are subject.

The child should have a nail white pencil to pass under the nail eaves while washing the hands. This works like magic and the child will be interested in using it. Fingertips must be kept scrupulously clean, as the eaves pick up bacteria. During the cold weather, a hand lotion should be used. These milky, semi-fluid toiletries can also be used on the face if the skin is chapped. They are better than oily emulsions as such creams through they dry immediately.

Many children rebel against shampoos—The wise mother will make a game of this ritual, or she plays beauty shop—we are referring now to the little ones—the child will consider it a lark, will not protest. The shampoo balm will keep the suds from the baby's eyes. You can get one at the toilet department of any large store.

If a child is not inclined to romp and play, it may be because she isn't wearing the right shoes, is suffering from foot discomfort. When buying footwear for her, seek out an intelligent salesperson who will measure the feet carefully, find shoes that are sufficiently wide for the foot, that provide support and are at least half an inch longer than the foot.

the feet have better care than they had in the past, and eyes are examined. Excess weight is regarded as a menace. Nervous habits—like squinting, nail-biting and blinking of the eyes—should have attention, because there is an underlying cause that must be discovered and corrected.

Even very little girls are conscious of appearance; they desire beauty, like food, is a natural instinct and should be respected. The beauty care little daughter receives will have much to do with

It is not necessary to have "partner" arrangements in the wedding procedure. The bride and groom choose the attendants they wish to have, and then make the plans to include them in the processional and recessional, balancing the formation as required. For example, always first in the processional are the ushers, walking two by two. Next, the bridesmaids, walking two by two. Then if there are two honor attendants, they walk either alone or together. Last, the bride and her father. In the recessional, the maid of honor and the matron of honor walk together, or either may walk with the best man, the other following, alone. A Note: Of course the husband of the matron of honor should be invited to the pre-wedding parties, and of course to the reception. And if there is to be a bridal table, he should, if possible, be invited to sit at this table.

A Child's Life of Jesus

"I love you, my dear son," he said. "I am happy that you have come home to me"

A CHILDS LIFE OF ET

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the last books written by the late Fulton Oursler, noted author of such volumes as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Nell O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER IX

When we do things that Jesus asks we feel just wonderful. We feel gay and glad just as He said we would.

He liked to tell stories to show what He meant, like the one about the Prodigal Son. (Prodigal means someone who wastes things.)

It is the story of two boys. Their father was rich, and someday he meant to give all his money to the sons. But one son did not want to wait. He was the prodigal. He asked for his part right away. And his father gave him the money.

With his pockets full, the prodigal son left his home and went far away. He wasted all he had. He spent it on foolish things. Soon his money was all gone. Then he was hungry and had nothing to eat. He was tired but he had no bed to sleep in. He went to work feeding the hogs for a farmer. He had to eat the same food as the pigs. He had to sleep on the hard bench in the pen with the pigs. He was cold and had no blanket. He cried and wished he had stayed at home.

At last the prodigal son said to himself: "I will go back to my father's house. I will ask my father to take me as his hired servant."

So he started to walk the long way back. For days he walked the hard dusty road. And when he was still a long way off from home his father saw him coming. The father ran to meet the prodigal son and threw his arms about him and kissed him.

"I love you, my dear son," he said. "I am happy that you have come home to me."

The father took off his ragged clothes and put on him a fine new robe. And he put a gold ring on his finger.

We can all see for ourselves why Jesus told this happy story. He wanted us to know that our Father in Heaven feels like that. No matter how foolish we have been, He will always be glad to see us if we will be sorry, and make no more mistakes, if we can help it.

One morning, Jesus, who loved animals and trees and flowers so much, told a story about the white, woolly lambs. There was one in the stable where He was born — my member? Now that Jesus was a grown-up man, He called Himself a Shepherd and the people were His sheep. This time He told the story of a shepherd who had a hundred sheep. One lamb did not stay near its mother but wandered away by itself and got lost. It was a dark, cold night.

So what did the shepherd do about it?

The good shepherd left the ninety-nine good sheep in their warm shed while he went out in the cold and the dark to search for the foolish lamb that had lost itself. When the shepherd found his lost sheep, he gave a shout of joy. He lifted it up and put it on his shoulder and carried it back to the fold.

Then he called together all his neighbors and friends and said:

"Come and be glad with me, for I have found the sheep that was lost and it was not eaten up by the wolves."

Our Father in Heaven is like that good shepherd, Jesus said. There is joy in Heaven, when one foolish person stops making mistakes and comes back to God.

Tomorrow: The Last Supper.

QUAD CALVES DIE

SOMERSET, O. (AP)—Quadruplets bred by artificial insemination were delivered from a Holstein cow here Thursday, but all four died shortly after birth. Dr. George Simms, veterinarian who performed the delivery, said he did not know of any previous quadruple birth through the artificial insemination process.

Health Minister Returns Home From Assembly

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Health Minister Paul Martin returned to Ottawa Thursday after completing a hectic two months as head of Canada's delegation to the United Nations assembly.

The session was drawing to a close when Martin boarded a plane for home, weary from the grind of public and private conferences on the world's toughest problems.

Since Oct. 14 when the seventh assembly opened, Martin has emerged as a seasoned negotiator in international affairs. He took over as head of the delegation when L. B. Pearson, external affairs minister, was elected president of the assembly.

Tried to Shape Plan

From the beginning, the 49-year-old Martin plunged into efforts behind the scenes to shape a Korean peace plan which would gain the widest support from the non-Communist world and be acceptable to the Communists as well.

The Ottawa-born MP from the Ontario riding of Essex East conferred first and last with India's Krishna Menon in building a Korean proposal which would get around the deadlocked issue of repatriating war prisoners.

Pearson also worked on this problem.

After weeks of negotiation, which saw a brief-lived split in western ranks, the assembly approved it with only the Communist bloc in opposition.

Scream in Nightmare Saves Family of Five When Gas Fills Home

TORONTO. (CP) — Billy Godkin, 8, had a nightmare. He screamed loudly, rousing his mother, Mrs. J. H. Godkin, Thursday night and indirectly saved the lives of five persons already partially overcome by gas fumes.

Mrs. J. H. Godkin said that she tried to reach her son when he cried out but fell to the floor. Finally she managed to get up and open a side door of the bungalow in suburban North York.

Others in the dwelling, Mrs. MacGregson and her three children, were guided to safety.

Grain Freighters Make Last Trip on Great Lakes

Although Great Lakes navigation officially closed several days ago, the last freighters of the season are plowing through the waters of Lake Superior and Lake Huron. Here at Fort William, the freighter Hochelaga is loaded with grain for transportation to Midland, Ont., on Georgian Bay. Great Lakes sailors say this season has been the most clement in 60 years.

Up until Dec. 11, the official closing day for Great Lakes' navigation, 218,000,000 bushels of grain were handled at Fort William elevators, and poured into the holds of waiting freighters. During the same period last year the total was 183,000,000 bushels. Even at that, freighter captains have to scurry from one elevator to another to get a full load of grain. — Central Press Canadian Photos.

Defence Minister Says Agreements Largely Fulfilled

PARIS (Reuters) — Defence Minister Brooke Claxton of Canada said Thursday night the "firm commitments on which each Atlantic Pact country agreed for 1952 have been largely fulfilled."

Claxton, who has been attending the four-day NATO conference here said:

"We have established the machinery as well as the will and habit to work together. This is a tremendous achievement since never before in history have 14 nations agreed on such close alliance in peacetime and in the name of peace.

"NATO works as a team. This applies not only to its permanent staffers but to ministers and generals as well."

"Some people say this week's conference was only a partial meeting on account of the forthcoming government switch-over in the United States," he said." But the fact is that the ministerial council dealt with everything which was ready to be dealt with at this time."

Referring to his week-end visit to the RCAF wing stationed in France, Claxton said: "The morale of our men is splendid. They are as happy as one can be some 3,000 miles away from home."

Just Another Joe, That's All

CAMP GROHN, Germany (AP)—The loudspeaker boomed out "Pte. J. Stalin" and everybody gaped. Then a young Polish soldier who is in the U.S. Army explained:

"You pronounce it that way. But it's really Jan Stalun, No relation to that other guy."

MINE EXECUTIVE DIES

NEW YORK (AP)—Joseph C. Hovensky, 68, international banker and head of large mining interests in Canada and Bolivia, died Wednesday. Hovensky was board chairman of Patino Mines and Enterprises Consolidated, Inc., outstanding tin producer operating in Bolivia, and president of Fabican Company, Ltd., which mines gold and nickel in Canada.

Rescue 19 Africans Caught in Rock Fall

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — Ten of 19 Africans entombed by a rock fall in Nourse gold mine here Wednesday reached the surface today.

Five of them walked 4,500 feet to the surface and guided a rescue party back to the rockfall. Five more were freed.

Contact has been made with four of the remaining trapped men still alive and it is hoped they will be rescued.

Two Africans and a European were killed in the rockfall and three others seriously hurt.

Three others already freed are in hospital in serious condition.

LONG DISTANCE is always "rushed" at Christmas. So many people want to greet absent friends and families that delays on many calls are simply unavoidable.

Calls reach their peak Christmas Eve and Christmas Day. Then, even though every switchboard is manned to capacity and every operator is working at top speed, delays will occur. And some calls to distant points like the far West, the Maritimes and south of the border may not get through at all.

That's why it's a good idea to call before the rush.

Please remember—

that Long Distance calls will go through much faster before Christmas Eve and after Christmas Day.

It always helps if you can give your Long Distance operator the out-of-town number you are calling.

"General's Dam"

This is the Petawawa Camp dam, nicknamed the "General's Dam," which was mentioned in the Currie Report tabled in the House of Commons. The report said the dam was not authorized by defence headquarters, that it was built on a stream in the camp at a cost of $3,000 to $4,000 and that its purpose was not clear. Percy Wright, CCF member for Melfort, charged it was used by officers as a fishing spot. — (CP Photo.)

Death of King George Heads List of World-Renowned Figures Who Died This Year

By GLADYS LENNON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The year 1952 was the one in which a beloved monarch, who had led his country through some of the darkest days of its history, laid down a burden that had grown too heavy for his failing strength. King George VI died peacefully in his sleep Feb. 6 at his country estate of Sandringham. He was 56.

It was the year that the four-year-old republic of Israel lost its first president, Chaim Weizmann, 77, scientist and long-time Zionist leader. He died Nov. 9 at his estate near Rehovoth.

In Argentina, the death July 26 of Senora Eva Peron, 33, former actress wife of President Juan Peron idolized by thousands of her countrymen for her philanthropies, touched off an unprecedented display of public mourning.

Death struck at the ranks of labor in the United States, taking the heads of two great organizations. Philip Murray, 66, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the United Steelworkers of America, died Nov. 9 at San Francisco. William Green, 82, who had been head of the American Federation of Labor since 1924, died Nov. 21 at Coshocton, Ohio.

Political Field

Sir Stafford Cripps, 62, the "Mr. Austerity" of Britain's post-war economy, died April 21 in Zurich, Switzerland, after a long illness. Ill health had forced his resignation in 1950 as chancellor of the exchequer in the then Labor government.

Other deaths in the political field included Raymond Aron, 73, U.S.-born Tory member of the House of Lords, whose wife, Lady Astor, was the first woman to sit in the British House of Commons Harold L. Ickes, 77, former U.S. secretary of the interior Vittorio Orlando, 82, Italian ex-premier and last survivor of the Allied "Big Four" leaders at the 1919 Versailles peace conference; Count Carlo Sforza, 78, Italy's foreign minister before and after the Fascist regime; William (Billy) Hughes, 88, prime minister of Australia during the First World War; and Clifford Hugh Douglas, 73, British engineer-economist and originator of the Social Credit theory.

Among churchmen, Michael Cardinal Faulhaber, 83, Roman Catholic archbishop of Milan and foe of nazism, died June 12 in Munich.

For Sister Elizabeth Kenny, Australian nurse who became the centre of medical controversy over her method of treating polio patients, a long period of illness ended with her death Nov. 30 at Toowoomba, Queensland, at the age of 66.

Two figures closely associated with the beginnings of progressive education were removed by death: Dr. John Dewey, 92-year-old philosopher and author, in New York, June 1, and Dr. Maria Montessori, 81, May 6, at Noordwijk, The Netherlands.

The literary world lost such names as George Santayana, 88, Spanish-born philosopher and poet who died in Rome Sept. 26; Hungarian-born playwright Ferenc Molnar, 71, in New York April 1; Fulton Oursler, 52, writer of biblical best-sellers, in New York May 24; John Murray Gibbon, 77, Canadian novelist, historian, musician and artist, in Montreal July 2.

Leading Publisher

Deaths in the newspaper field include Henri Bourassa, 84, founder of Montreal Le Devoir; George McCullagh, 47, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail and the Telegram; Sir Keith Murdoch, 65, Australia's leading newspaper publisher; William E. Scripps, 70, publisher of the Detroit News; Howard Blakeslee, 72, science editor of the Associated Press; and Mark Sullivan, 77, long-time Washington columnist of the New York Herald Tribune.

Among artists who died during the year were American sculptor Jo Davidson, 58; illustrator Howard Chandler Christy, 79; Sir Oswald Birley, 72, British portrait artist; and cartoonist H. T. Webster, 67, creator of "The Timid Soul."

Theatrical circles were shocked at the death Sept. 6 of British-born star Gertrude Lawrence, 52, in New York in the midst of one of the outstanding successes of her career, the musical "The King and I."

Other names well-known in the entertainment world include Alison Skipworth, 88, British-born stage and screen actress; Hattie McDaniel, 57, known to radio and television audiences as "Beulah;" actors John Garfield, 39, and Canada Lee, 45; screen comedienne Polly Moran, 66, team-mate of the late Marie Dressler, and radio tenor Donald Dame, 34.

BOSTON (CP)—The Morning Star VI, a sailing vessel which left Boston for missionary duty in the South Pacific in 1947, has sunk in Micronesian waters. Both men aboard, Capt. Creston D. Ketchum of Vancouver and a native crew member, were saved.

Word of the craft's loss was received Friday by the American board of commissioners for foreign missions. The board represents the Congregational Christian Churches of America.

MARMORA

Public School Pupils Present Christmas Pageant

MARMORA— Pupils of Marmora Public School, under direction of Miss Olga Wurm, music teacher of the school, and under the auspices of Marmora Home and School Association, presented the Christmas pageant, "The Christmas Story", in the Town Hall, on Wednesday before a large and appreciative audience.

Before the rise of the curtain, Mrs. R. Frost, president of the Association, upon whom the pageant, entailed much labor, welcomed the gathering.

Lovely Scenic Effect

In the stage settings, which included the crib, at which side sat Mary and Joseph and the flight into Egypt, made an excellent background for the presentation of the pageant. All impersonations showed fine training. They included the Holy Family, shepherds, angels, Herod, Wise Men, chief priests, and scribes and the three Kings of the Orient.

A robed choir of 72 young voices sang the hymns and carols incidental to the story in a manner evoking much admiration.

Between the musical offerings, readings from the Gospels were taken by Ronald Wells, with excellent diction. Mrs. H. Rennie was pianist throughout.

Shortly before the close, Donald Marett, chairman of the Marmora Public School Board, extended thanks of the gathering to all participating in the production of the pageant.

Presentations were made to Miss Wurm and Mrs. Rennie by junior scholars. A silver collection was taken to defray expenses incurred.

The kindergarten classes of St. Paul's Sunday School held a Christmas party in the Parish Hall on Thursday afternoon, in which the teachers conducted a pleasing program for the children, who also made the acquaintance of Santa Claus towards its close.

Howe Defends Govt. at Opening Of Liberal Hall

KINGSTON (CP) — Production Minister Howe said here Friday night the Currie report "was a rehash in lurid language" of events that occurred at Petawawa military camp and were investigated a year ago and previously reported.

He said in an address that Canadians could be sure "there was nothing in the army, air force or naval situation they need be the least bit ashamed of." Mr. Howe spoke at the opening of a new Liberal party hall.

Of the report by George S. Currie, Montreal chartered accountant and wartime deputy minister of national defence, on army works services, tabled in Parliament Monday, he said "extravagant language" had been used.

Dealing with security measures to protect public funds, Mr. Howe said it was evident that Mr. Currie's curiosity wasn't aroused when a copy of the report was stolen from his office and delivered to the CCF party eight days before it was received at Defence Minister Claxton's office.

The "minor crisis" in Ottawa resulted from investigations of Petawawa camp. That situation, he said, had been "fully" honed into the present crisis by the government's political enemies."

NEW PURGE UNDER WAY

Vienna (Reuters) — A new purge is under way in Czechoslovakia — this time a purge of street names. The Czech newspaper Lidove Demokracie reported that plans have been made to change the names of all streets and public squares which had been named in honor of "reactionary politicians" and "people of the pre-Munich republic."

Word of the craft's loss was received Friday by the American board of commissioners for foreign missions. The board represents the Congregational Christian Churches of America.

Red Congress Fails to Catch Vienna Interest

French nuclear scientist Joliot Curie opens the Communist "Congress of Peoples for Peace" in Vienna, Austria, but finds that his audience numbers less than half of what was expected. The congress, though widely advertised, attracted little interest even in the parades staged through Vienna streets.

Political speeches can have the same effect on Communist listeners as they do elsewhere, to judge by this pose. The "comrade," a delegate to the Vienna congress, dozes off in the middle of a speech. — Central Press Canadian Photos.

Report Crew Members Have Seized Freighter

HONG KONG (AP) — Crew members have seized the Panamanian freighter Nidar and taken it to Quemoy, Chinese Nationalist island off the Communist China coast, the Chinese central news agency reported today.

British civil and naval radio stations here said they had nothing from the Nidar. Her Norwegian owners, the Wallem Company, said they tried unsuccessfully to reach the vessel by radio.

The Nidar, of 2,760 gross tons, reported it narrowly escaped a similar attempt at piracy Dec. 7.

SUSPEND JUDGMENT

OTTAWA (CP)—Judgment was reserved Thursday in the trial of a truck driver whose oil tank-truck crashed through the front of a bank here last Feb. 13 and fatally injured bank manager Ernest Fitzgerald. The trucker, Wilfred Conlin, 33, of Hull, Que., is charged with dangerous driving. Judge A.C. McDougall said he will give judgment Jan. 7.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers, saying, Stanley, haven't I heard you mention Stanley Zerbin, Williams?

I should say so, what about him pop said, and ma said, I see there that he's in town for the Hardware Men's Convention.

Well then, said Stanley, good old Stanley, pop said, and I said, Why, pop, how old is he?

No older than you are, as a matter of fact, he's got all the rest of his life ahead of him, pop said. We used to be inseparable, like Damon and Pithias, or Fish and Chips, or liver and onions, he said, and ma said, Then why dont you get in touch with him and invite him to stay with us during the convention?

Well now that's very nice of you, pop said, and ma said, Not at all. I keep up with my old girl frends, and I beleeve in the equality of the sexes, so what's fair for one is sauce for the gander. It's the least you can do. In fact I think I'll call him up for you myself, it would be a nice surprise, she said.

That's a fine idea, pop said. Stanley, Stanley, he's such a fine simple caracter that it's impossible for him to act any way but naturally. For instance he cant sit down without putting his feet up on some article of fernitture like a chair or even a table. And he always carries an old half smoked cigar around with him, I'll bet his wife can track him down to any part of the house, just by the aroma, pop said, and ma said, Goodness, oh well, maybe it's best just to keep old frends in fond recollection.

Well yes, perhaps I'd better be satisfied with the sentimental haze of the good old past, pop said.

Sounding glad to get out of it.

TANKER ON MUDBANK

Belfast (AP) — Exits and entrances to Belfast harbor were clear today after tugs pulled the 15,000-ton tanker Calfex Wellington off a mudbank. The oiler blocked passage in and out of the port when it ran aground on Thursday. It was refloated at high tide Thursday night.

Former 'Wonder Kids' Of National Hockey League Due For Slump Break

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

TWAS CLOSE!

The Glens won their fifth victory in six starts here last night, but brother, it was awful close. The wide-hungry Police netted the surging Glens right up to the wire in a game that was hard-fought but not productive of any spectacular hockey. In fact the calibre dished up to 1,500 of the faithful was quite short of that displayed against the Stouffville Clippers here last Saturday night.

And that recalls the fact that the Glens keep a date with the 1953 senior "B" champions in Stouffville tonight. This should be the test supreme for the Glens, and if they pull this one out of the fire they'll do something that hasn't been accomplished this season. The Clippers didn't take that 2-1 defeat too amiably, and you can bet your Christmas turkey Monty Bangay and Co. will be out to avenge that setback.

Try not back to last night's game. If the old system of picking three stars was still in vogue, this department, at least, would have no hesitancy in clapping two of them on the sorrel noggin of one "Red" Doran. In our humble opinion, the Glens' playing coach is one of the better all round players in this entire senior "B" set-up. Pals Michael J. Kedden and Coc Perdue may not agree with that statement, but with quite likely be outvoted.

The line of Peter Jones and Sammy Mulholland, centred by "Red" stood out like a sore thumb last night. Not only from an offensive point of view (they got three of the five), but as a "defensive platoon" as our American football broadcaster friends would say.

"Rob" secured a brace of markers, both the result of heady hockey. He should have had at least two more, and on one occasion missed a clear-cut breakaway when he fanned completely. The Flying Saucers", MacDonald, Mulvihill and Jackie Wardhaugh skated miles with Wardhaugh potting a pair that came in very handy. Vern Geyer came through with a couple of fine performances at the blueline and the big fella doesn't do a bad job as public relations officer for the team when something goes wrong with officialdom.

He protested and rightly so against the penalty handed out to Jimmy Schneider, tabbed "interference" by Referee Stan Scrutton. Tommy heaved a Pete attacker high, wide and handsome with a legal bodycheck that must have jolted the bones of his great-grandfather, and got the nod from Mr. Mike. The Pete's forward was carrying the puck at the time and we wonder why the interference penalty, unless it was from a point of progress viewpoint. Tommy definitely interfered with that.

FRONT HURT!

It had to come sooner or later, and the Peterborough Triple Links turned the trick. They wiped some of the flush of consistent victory off the faces of Don Barrett's Hawkiets last night in Peterborough for the Moira laddybucks' third defeat in eleven starts. The clumping won't do them a particle of harm, in fact, it should have a reverse effect.

According to our Mr. Goodfellow, the Hawkiets were hoofed, handcuffed, stymied and stalled for a couple of periods and when they did final want we left of their locker. Sign it was too late, and the Links' big margin was too weighty to overcome. However they did whittle an 8-2 score to 8-5 before taps sounded, so it wasn't as bad as the first two of the evening indicated.

The win gave the Peics' kids a firmer grip on second spot in the group standing with an even dozen points, four behind the league-leading Hawks. The Barrett crew have a head herself next Mic until December 29th, when they visit the Cobourg Jays.

However, as was mentioned before the defeat last night won't do the Hawks a bit of harm. A licking never hurt any team, especially when they're well out in front of the pack.

HISTORY COURTEOUS!

Fred Haney, new boss-man of the Pittsburgh Pirates baseball squad, who is expected to make a silk purse out of the flivvening's sow by next diamond semester, is something of a philosopher. He played several years are with the Detroit Tigers, and saw New York and the Yankees for the first time from the position at third base. The story goes, Haney aimed a feeble blooper down the third-base line that barely cleared the barrier for a home run. Babe Ruth watched it go.

At the inning's end, Ruth trotted past Haney, head down as if in deep thought. Haney didn't even look up when the rookie's words clattered against his ear drums.

"Hewie like that one, ya big bum!" noodled the irrepressible delighted Haney. "You're not so hot. Now you're only forty-nine homers ahead of me."

Ruth never said a word in reply, never even glanced at his heckler. He merely walked to the bat rack, selected a bludgeon and marched to the plate. With his first swing he struck an epic Ruthian homer, a towering blast. With mincing gait and with his head still bowed, Ruth pattered around the base paths. Just as he approached the open-mouthed Haney at third base, the Bambino spoke.

"How do we stand now, kid?" he asked.

Chicago Hawks Been Winless In Last Seven Appearances; May Start on the Maple Leafs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Are Chicago Black Hawks ready to pull out of their slump?

Conn Smythe, Toronto Maple Leafs' managing director, says he thinks they are and has been cracking the whip around the Leaf camp preparing for two week-end games with the Hawks, known earlier this season as the wonder kids of the National Hockey League.

Chicago, which finished in the league cellar for five out of the last six years, paced the league during the first part of the season. A few weeks ago they began to slip and in their last seven games have lost five and gained two draws.

Here's Why

Smythe, who has gained a reputation as an astute hockey analyst, gives two reasons why he fears Chicago this week-end.

1. They haven't won a game in their last seven starts.

2. They have four former Leafs in their line-up.

The Leafs' ace goalie Al Rollins, Gus Mortson, Cal Gardner and Gus Mancuso, player who leaves the Leafs "they like nothing better than to come back and beat us," Smythe said.

In other games this week-end fourth-place Detroit is at Montreal and tail-end New York at Detroit, now the league leader. Sunday Montreal is at Boston and Detroit at New York.

At Montreal, the talk still is about Jean Beliveau, the reluctant rookie who prefers playing in the Quebec Senior League. Jean, idol of Quebec fans, is on loan to Montreal Canadiens by Quebec Aces and in his first game Thursday night scored three goals against New York.

Frank Selke, general manager of the Canadiens, was quoted as kidding before Thursday's game that if Beliveau, one of the most sought after players in all time, scored three goals he would write his own ticket. He was startled when the big scoring ace from Quebec came through.

Frisco Meredith in the second heat took the decision after a rousing stretch battle in a photo over Dr. Parker. Maudeen Volo took the show end.

Robinson's retirement from the ring received a mixed reception from British sports writers.

Some of them said farewell with praises for Robinson's fighting, but others took the view he skipped out because he was scared to meet Turpin for the third time.

The most bitter criticism was written by the Daily Herald's Clifford Webb, who dubbed the Robinson retirement "the dirtiest trick in the history of boxing."

Bilmores Win Twin Bill From Kitchener

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Perhaps Guelph Biltmores, Memorial Cup champions last season, are pulling out of their slump.

The Biltmores, drained of some talent by the parent New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, haven't been showing top form of late.

But Friday night they registered a double victory—both at the expense of the last-place Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts.

In a replay of an earlier game between the neighboring clubs Guelph came out on top 4-3 while in a regularly-scheduled tussle the Bilts blanked the Greenshirts 7-0. In the only other game of the night, Toronto Marlboro leaders of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, dropped a 9-6 verdict to second-place Barrie.

In the replay, ordered by the OHA, the game was started from 18:01 of the third period with the score tied 5-5. It started with a penalty shot by Kitchener on which Greig Hicks scored. But Guelph playing six-men, tied the score on a shot by Ron Murphy. In the overtime session Murphy scored for Billy McCreary scored for the Bilts.

In the scheduled game, Murphy and Jim Connelly each scored two goals for Guelph. Jackie Wirtz, Billy Graham and Billy McCreary notched the others.

At Barrie, the Flyers' win moved them to within four points of the Marlies. Larry Thibeault and Ken Teal tallied the Barrie markers.

Tonight St. Michael's is at St. Catharines, Barrie at Galt and Oshawa at Three Rivers in an interlocking schedule game with the Quebec Junior League, Guelph and St. Catharines visit Toronto for the Sunday afternoon doubleheader meeting Marlboros and St. Michael's respectively. Other Sunday games: Kitchener at Windsor, Oshawa at Montreal Canadiens.

Graham Gets Decision Over Joey Giardello

NEW YORK (AP)—Billy Graham of New York was awarded the decision over Joey Giardello of Philadelphia Friday night. Chairman Bob Christenberry of the New York state athletic commission reversed the original verdict after reviewing the judges' cards of the 10-round main event at Madison Square Garden.

The officials had split on the verdict, giving Giardello the decision at the end of the bout, and the small crowd booed the verdict and crowded around the ring howling for a rematch.

Giardello weighed 151¾, Graham, 146.

Christenberry changed the card of Judge Joe Agnello, who had given the 10th round to Giardello by one point, and gave Graham two points. He had changed the fourth in which the judge gave Graham the edge by one point, and made it two points for Graham.

As a result, Agnello's card read 7-3 in rounds, with Graham a winner on points, 7 to 6.

Judge Frank Forbes had it that of Judge Charley Shortell gave Graham the other point.

Anthony Ferrante, Giardello's manager, said he would take the case to the state supreme court and test the legality of the commission's action.

Christenberry said his action meant "no reflection on the honesty or integrity" of Mr. Agnello."

Graham stood stunned in his corner as the original decision was announced. He lost a disputed decision to the same youngster Aug. 4 at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway.

Cleveland Tribe's Doby, Rosen Win Loop Honors

NEW YORK (AP)—Larry Doby and Al Rosen, two of Cleveland's long-distance hitters, Friday were officially named as American League slugging and runs-batted-in champions, respectively.

Official 1952 statistics show Doby taking the slugging title, based on times at bat and total bases, with a .541 average. Larry was also the American League's home run leader last season with 32.

Final slugging averages by The Associated Press, released in October, also listed the Tribe outfielder as the circuit's leading slugger with an identical .541 mark.

Rosen, the Indians' third baseman, wound up with 105 runs batted in, only one more than the total registered by Doby and Eddie Robinson, Chicago first baseman. Gus Zernial of Philadelphia was the only other player to drive in as many as 100 runs.

Second to Doby in the slugging percentages was Mickey Mantle, brilliant New York Yankee outfielder. Mickey slugged at a .530 pace.

Among the major league records tied were the 12 hits in succession made by Detroit's Walt Dropo and the two no-hit games turned in by Virgil Trucks, veteran Tiger hurler, now with St. Louis Browns.

'Win Western Conference, Lose Job' Holds Good for Frankie Filchock

EDMONTON (CP) — Flingin' Frankie Filchock, Edmonton's sports hero of 1952, has been out of Edmonton Eskimos' following a two-day dispute over the now-famed "two-year" contract.

Filchock, who took over as coach from Annis Stukus at the start of the 1952 football season and guided Eskimos through two harrowing playoff series to the western title, was fired Friday night following a short-lived attempt at reconciliation.

Formal announcement of the firing was made in a club statement issued by Manager Al Anderson. The statement reviewed briefly the record leading up to the dispute and ended with this sentence: "The board now is looking for a new coach for the year 1953."

That was all for Frankie, who quarterbacked Montreal Alouettes to the Grey Cup in 1949 and gave Edmonton its first Grey Cup contender in 30 years.

This Is Like

The firing seemed to bear out a jinx that has haunted western coaches for the last three years—"win the Western Conference and lose your job."

In 1950 Frank Larson took Winnipeg Blue Bombers to the Grey Cup final and was replaced by George Trafton. In 1951 Harry Smith of Saskatchewan Roughriders went out in favor of Glenn Dobbs. This year it's Filchock.

The Filchock - Eskimo dispute first surfaced Thursday. It centred around certain clauses in the new contract.

One was a provision that the club could dismiss Filchock "without notice" at the end of the 1953 season if Eskimos failed to get into the Western playoffs.

Another exception was a provision that the club receive any money Filchock earns from football. Frankie said he agreed the club should approve any radio or newspaper work but felt that he should not have to turn over all remuneration.

Britons Say Randy Top Contender For Robinson's Middleweight Crown

By JIM CHAMBERS

LONDON (AP)—Britain's Boxing Board of Control lined up solidly behind Randy Turpin Friday as the logical No. 1 contender for the world middleweight crown vacated by Sugar Ray Robinson.

Teddy Waltham, secretary of the board, called the New York state athletic commission, the U.S. National Boxing Association and the European Boxing Union, saying the British body seeks their support and co-operation to resist any attempts to sidetrack Turpin, the British and British Empire champion who won the world title from Robinson here in 1951 only to lose it back 64 days later in New York.

George Middleton, Turpin's manager, said he and the British fighter were not surprised at Robinson's decision, but they were disappointed.

"We shall be only too willing to fight Charles Humez of France for the vacant title," Middleton added.

Plans to determine a successor to Robinson as the world middle-

Glen Roys Edge Peterborough Petes 5-4; Junior Hawks Lose To Links 9-5

Keep Pace With Group Leaders With Fifth Win in Six Starts In Close Hard-Fought Tussle

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

Staving off a desperate third-period rally, the Belleville Glen Roys raced through to their fifth victory in six starts in a hard-fought senior "B" battle with the Peterborough Petes here last night. The score was 5-4.

The Glens clung to their fourth-spot position in the league standings with 14 points, four behind the league-leading Oshawa Truckers. They meet the Stouffville Clippers tonight in Stouffville.

Over 3,000 fans saw a battle that did not produce any sensational hockey. The third period was the only one with fireworks being at any minute. Seven of the game's thirteen penalties were handed out in that session. Scrutton in this haul, with the Petes' Hunter and Glen's Semark being banished with majors in the only fistic mixing of the game.

Come From Behind

The Glens roared from behind twice in the first period to tie the count at two-all. Paced by Bayley Grant, "Shrimp" Bonney flung home two markers from the stick of the scrub-topped mentor in the second period in the first and then grabbed a two-goal lead with seconds to go.

Play roughened in the third period as the checking got harder. The Petes drove hard in a desperate effort to cut down the margin and they shaved it to one after thirteen minutes of play. "Red" Doran whipped in close on Harding in this period, missing an open net on two different occasions. Tony Parisi shared hero honors with Hay Harding in the protective nets, with the Glen goalie coming up with another brilliant, last-second effort.

The Petes driving hard for the equalizer, goalie Harding came up with fifteen seconds to go, but the Glens hurried back the threat as time ran out.

Coach Doran and Jackie Wardhaugh, fleet winger, shared scoring honors for the Glens, each nabbing a brace of counters. Peter Jones scored his other in a brilliant solo effort after a breakaway. Sammy Maiullaro was credited with two assists.

Hunter accounted for two of the Petes' scores with Collins and "Toody" Greenlaw getting singles.

A good-sized crowd was attracted in the Glens' net off a surprise-visit from Ken Schrader, the scout-ing for the Petes after sight missings of play in the first period. Tommy Schrader was in durance vile at the time. Five minutes later Peter Jones grabbed a loose puck after a Petes ganging attack and raced through to beat Harding cleanly for the tying goal.

Petes Grab Lead

The Petes grabbed the lead again two minutes later when Greenlaw potted a pass from mates Leonard and Fryia after a smooth passing play. Montgomery and Wasson, who got the within seconds of each other and the Glens paid off with the extra manpower. Wardhaugh evened the count with Schmidt Mulholland with 18 seconds to go.

The Glens took over in the second period. The double was on seconds old when Red Doran took Vern Coyer's pass to give the Glens the lead for the first time, six minutes later the Petes-coach trailed Sammy Mulholland's goalward dash and banged home the rebound after Harding had kicked out the winger's shot drive. Hunter cut the Glens' lead to one with five minutes to go but Wardhaugh took Schneider's pass to put the Glens two up before the period ended.

The third period saw the best bouts of the night. Both teams "laid it on" and open warfare threatened. The pugilists kicked out drive after drive and the Petes finally clicked with a gang-up attack after Vern Coyer was given the gate. That was Hunter's second penalty.

Came the fistic flare-up and banishment of Semark and Hunter. The Petes put on the pure "laid it on" and open warfare threatened. The pugilists kicked out drive after drive and the Petes finally clicked with a gang-up attack after Vern Coyer was given the gate. That was Hunter's second penalty.

Came the fistic flare-up and banishment of Semark and Hunter. The Petes put on the pure "sieve" and Harding, saved their goalie, but the Petes' misfired and time ran out.

The teams:

Belleville: Glen Roys, Parisi; defence, V. Coyer, Schneider, Semark, Reeves; forwards, Mulholland, Wardhaugh, Macdonald, Doran, Jones, Day, Green, Dec-Coyer, Wardhaugh, McRae.

Rams' Coach Fears Lions Will Win Game

DETROIT (AP)—Hampton Pool, disturbed by the swaggering mental outlook of his Los Angeles Rams, fears Detroit Lions will whip them Sunday.

Pool watched his chilled squad of Californians work out on Briggs Stadium's grass turf today and insisted he isn't catching the fever of pessimism that hits so many coaches before big games.

"The workouts the Rams' only one here in Detroit prior to the playoff for the National Conference title under a year-stelled crowd of 50,000.

"I don't have the crying towel out—I'm just being realistic," said Hamp.

Sunday's winner will move to Cleveland for the Dec. 28 National Football League title game against the Western Conference champions, Cleveland Browns.

Pool's opposing coach, Buddy Parker, is confident—at least in word and week out. He thinks his Lions have a good chance of winning but he qualifies his statements.

"It's a tough game and the Rams are much better than people realize," Parker said. "The teams are evenly matched and it will take all we've got to win. We can do it, if we want to."

Trabert Trims Italian Star In Cup Play

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The Australians became fully aware today that in Tony Trabert they have a tennis player of extremely capable second singles tennis player for them to face in the coming Davis Cup challenge round.

Trabert, a 22-year-old ace from Cincinnati, O., crack young-ster, Fausto Gardini, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5, 6-3 today.

Australian experts unanimously agreed that Trabert is more dangerous now than he was a year ago although he has spent time in the United States.

Trabert trimmed Gardini in far more convincing fashion than Vic Seixas, the American captain, who was carried to five sets in whipping the lanky Gardini Thursday.

Off today's form Tony has been made the favorite to defeat Australian's No. 2 Davis Cup singles player, Mervyn Rose, and partner or Mervyn Rose.

Trabert's great speed and power but Gardini was a second player but he was almost completely helpless when Trabert was getting his first serve in and he did not get beaten a 13 clean aces past Gardini.

To help operate at short the final day's program which saw the U.S. team sweep the Italians into a 5-0 clean-up, Trabert Richardson had no difficulty defeating Rolando Del Bello 7-5, 6-3, 6-7, 6-3.

Does Your Youngster Want a Gun

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Outdoor Sportsman, Author and Creator of Sabre Shotguns)

It is inevitable that all parents of boys shall be faced with the problem, sooner or later, of whether or not the youngsters be allowed jo own guns. To some families the problem is a minor one; they simply put down the parental foot and say no and the boy grows up without owning a gun.

In other cases the problem is not quite so simple. Even though the father may not be a hunter the boy can develop an early affinity for the sport so that the ownership of a gun becomes a matter of paramount importance to him.

Not many parents, particularly those whose financial status allows some latitude, will overrule the reasonable desires of their children. Thus the matter of a boy owning a gun can well become one of the prerogatives.

As the father of a boy, I feel qualified to speak with some authority on the matter of juvenile gun ownership. The boy isn't a member of the tribe of Israel satisfactorily.

Given Small Shotgun

When he was 12 years old I acquired a little single-barrel .410 and still is—a .410 double barrel. With the gun came half a box of shells, a few of which

During the first season of ownership I was one of the guilty who confined to the gun club. There, under my constant supervision, the boy learned the rules of safe gun handling. He shot clay birds and watched other guns operated by them. As youngsters will, he absorbed the rules of safety until they were automatic with him, followed instinctively.

Then the time was allowed somewhat more latitude. At that time we lived on the outskirts of town. In a grove of trees near our house a flock of crows had made their headquarters.

I gave the boy a box of shells and fixed a program of paying 25 cents on each crow brought in. The only limitation was that each crow on which the bounty applied must be shot on the wing. Sitting shots did not qualify.

Unknown to him, I watched his early hunting efforts through my aid of binoculars. It did not take me long to satisfy myself that he was a safe hunter. Moreover, his gun handling was far safer, by and large, than that of not a few adults with whom I have hunted.

Next came hunting trips. These were held at various game farms in the general vicinity. We live near the center of pheasant population area of New York City. Hunting in open country, with thousands of gunners abroad, not only was dangerous but also unproductive. So we patronized the game farms and paid for the birds we shot.

Appointed Instructor

When World War II came along the boy owned his own 12 gauge shotgun and he was a finished performer in the field. It did not come as a surprise when I learned that he had been appointed instructor in a navy training camp. He, in turn, passed on to other youngsters the rules of safe and correct gun handling that he had learned with that little .410 double.

I don't believe that any rules can be set down to guide a person in the determination of whether or not a boy is old enough to own a gun. Youngsters vary in their characteristics. Some are naturally thoughtful and careful; others are not.

A parent knows his boy better than anybody else—at least he should. All right—would you hand your boy a loaded gun across a busy street? Would you let him transact for you a matter involving, say, one hundred dollars? Would you trust him with a business message?

You alone must be judge of his reasonableness and that very thing is of utmost importance when considering gun ownership. Not only must he be taught the rules of safety, he must be trustworthy not to break them.

It may be that you have neither the time nor the desire to guide him through the early stages of gun ownership. If so, you may be deficient in every community there are groups which will school youths in gun handling. The Scout Master knows about this, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. Your sporting goods dealer or gun officers of your local sportsmen's association will tell you about classes in gun handling and safety.

Encourage Sports Interest

It is a healthy thing for your boy to show interest in the outdoor sports. Don't make the mistake of discouraging this interest. How about including that muchdesired gun in his Christmas list? Under the Christmas tree this year? Obviously, the youngster should not be given a gun and then turned loose to use it as he sees fit. Instruction must go hand in hand with the gift. We are betting that you will have no more fun doing the instruction job as the boy will have while he learns to use his new gun.

In closing, here's wishing you and yours a very Merry Christmas.

Sport in Brief

BARRIE (CP)—Stafford Smythe, coach of the league-leading Toronto Marlboros, refused to allow Barrie Flyers' July Friday night's Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game here Saturday. Max Emms, coach of the Flyers, had proposed the delay so fans could get ahead with their Christmas shopping before the game.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—The University at Buffalo defeated Hofstra, Buffalo State Teachers 71-53 in a basketball game Saturday night. Doug McClelland led the victors with 20 points.

NEW YORK (AP)—Three New York race tracks and Empire Racing Conduct and Inactive Empire—are considering a proposal that they merge their interests into one giant-sized $25,000,000 plant.

John J. Rowe, president of the Jamaica track, and Cyrus S. Jutter, president of Aqueduct, said Friday a survey is being made to find the proper site for the new establishment. A decision may be made in two months.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Police said Willie Boyd, 34-year-old exercise boy, admitted Friday he deliberately set the $30,000 Jockey Club Park race course fire here Oct. 26 while "full of" marijuana. The fire destroyed the track's grandstand at the corner race track, which had been converted into a training track.

CLEVELAND (AP)—Joey Maxim said Friday he hopes to get a return fight with the new lightheavyweight champion, Archie Moore, next January or March. Before that, said the dethroned champion, he plans to get in a tune-up fight. Maxim lost to Moore Wednesday night.

Vancouver Trins Stampeders 6-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks downed Calgary Stampeders 6-3 Friday night to move into a first-place tie with Saskatoon Quakers in the Western Hockey League. Meanwhile the Quakers dropped a 4-1 verdict to Edmonton Flyers and Victoria Cougars trounced Seattle Bombers 9-2.

Len Haley, Cliny Johnson, Larry Wilson and Rags Ragian were the marksmen for the Flyers as they punished their foes over the Quakers.

Jim Fairburn paced the Cougars with four goals. Reg Abbott, Colin Thompson, Lloyd Gronsdahl and Roche snared the others. Gerry Foley and Rudy Filion counted for Seattle.

Canadians Win Over Topflight American Stars

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (CP)—Lionel Conacher, amateur sportscaster beating to some of golf's proudest reputations on Friday's drawing round of the $13,000 international four-ball tournament.

Hal Fetzner of Saskatoon paired with Stan Leonard of Vancouver to defeat Jack Burke of Houston, Tex., and Sammy Demaret of Concord, N.Y., 1 up. Burke won last week's Miami Open title.

U.S. open champion Julius Boros, of Fall River, Mass., and Doug Ford, Harrison, N.Y., were defeated 1 up by Miami's Buddy Godwin and Dutch Harrison.

Willie Klein, 51-year-old Miami golfer and 12-month ace who once came through with a 1-up victory over Fred Haas of New Orleans and Marty Furgol of Lemont, Ill. Fletcher and Leonard are to meet Boros and Brosch in today's quarter-final.

Tribe, Phils Swap Hurlers

CLEVELAND (AP) — Hank Greenberg announced the first deal of the off season for Cleveland Indians Friday when he obtained pitcher Dick Rozek for righthander Bob Hooper of Philadelphia Athletics.

The Indians' general manager said the 6-foot, 200-pound Hooper, who is 30, a "seasoned hurler" who might help the club's bullpen. Rozek is a promising younger pitcher. Rozek is 25.

The deal, announced, does not figure to help the Indians in the immediate future. The team opens with Cleveland he pitched only 52 3-3 innings and had one victory and two defeats.

Hooper won eight and lost 15 for the Athletics last year.

Hornets Blank Providence 7-0

(By The Canadian Press)

Pittsburgh goalie Gil Mayer achieved his second shutout of the season Friday night as the Pittsburgh Hornets Providence Reds 7-0 in an American Hockey League game.

Mayer, in the stunt here of last Oct. 29, when the Hornets won their first game of the season, Mayer was superlative as he had to be.

Johnny McLellan and Chuck Blair each clipped in with two goals for the Hornets. Karma and Sullivan each scored the other goals.

Blanked 5-0 in First Period And Trail by 8-2 in Second; Rally in Third to Score Three

By JOHN GOODFELLOW

Belleville Junior "B" Black Hawks travelled to Peterborough last night, forgot to duck once they arrived on the scene, and absorbed a 8-3 shellacking from the Lack City Oddfellows. Despite the loss, the Hawks retained their position at the top of the league as all teams today embark on a 10-day Christmas vacation.

Whether Belleville was off its feed or Peterborough was red hot depends entirely upon where you sit. Certainly, compared to recent games, the Barrettmen apparently could not get organized. Peterborough boys on the other hand, checked like fiends and when the breaks presented themselves, converted it for all the traffic would bear.

Gordie Coyle was the big man for the winners with three goals. Single counters went to Thrift, Smith, Sullivan, Ferguson, Floyd and McCracken.

Five in First

Davey Jones was high point man for the Hawks with one goal and three assists. Hank Therrien bagged two tallies and Jones, while Pete Whalen, and Ray Hermiston added the other counters.

The Petes got away winging on five goals without a reply in the first period. Roger Smith started the parade at 4:50 when he belted home a shot at a corner in the Belleville end and sifted a backhander past Hawks' goalie Bill Schiller. Smith went two up as Sullivan took Gardner's pass at the Hawk blueline and made a screamer into the Belleville cage that Schiller never got set for.

Coyle kept the heat on by picking up a loose puck in the Belleville zone and drifting in front of the net. He came back five minutes later to connect on passes from Ferguson and Twist into the fourth Pete marker. Just 25 seconds afterwards, Peterborough got its sixth number five on passes from Twist and Ferguson.

It took the Oddfellows just 25 seconds of the second period to double the count as even half decent, Twist pumping the biscuit home on a nice play with Ferguson and Sullivan.

Therrien Starts It

Belleville finally scored near the end of the period. Therrien made one of his characteristic rushes before sliding the puck to Davey Jones, who rifled it past Coyle. Gilmour was also in on the attack.

The Petes made it 7-1, however, as Floyd tipped one in from the point after Karma and Sullivan had set up the play. Hermiston closed the gap by skipping one into the rigging off Barclay's pads with the Hawks' goalie in the penalty box. Hermiston's fine shot from 15 feet out caught the corner of the net and narrowed to 8-2. Holl and Casey lent a hand on this one.

After a 1-0 start the chosen words by Coach Barrett at intermission, the Hawks came out for the third canto chewing six-inch spikes. Gilmour sank a beauty from the left side, for the third Belleville goal, after taking a pass from Hank Therrien at the second-period half moments later on a setup from Jones.

Coyle, however, put the damper on the league leaders' hopes of a hat trick, banging in Twist's rebound. Therrien scored the final goal of the night, deking Barclay cleanly after taking a pass from Jones. That made it 9-5 and that was that.

The Petes were full value for their win. The Hawks were lackadaisical slightly stale—a condition that probably will clear itself with the Yuletide rest period. It says here, anyway.

The lineups:

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Bisoco and Green; centre, Jones; wings, Therrien and Gilmour. Alternates, Jones, Therrien, Pete Whalen and Ray Hermiston.

Peterborough: Goal, Delahaye; defence, Holl and Prinsile; centre, Twist; wings, Coyle and Ferguson. Alternates, Sullivan, Byrne, Kearns, Floyd, Smith, McCracken, Karma and Gardner.

Referee: Maurice Welsh, Toronto; linesman, Don Kingdon, Peterborough.

Summary

First Period.

Peterborough, Smith 4.50
Peterborough, Sullivan (Ferguson) 11.35
Peterborough, Coyle (Ferguson, Twist) 25
Peterborough, Coyle (Ferguson, Twist) 18.05
Peterborough, Ferguson (Twist, Coyle) 18.30
Penalties: Coyle, Whalen, Bisoco, Therrien.

Second Period.

Peewee Hockey

Close scores featured the peewee division in the Belleville Hockey Association games played at Memorial Arena this morning.

The Tigers, Bruins and Rangers each scored 3-1 victories over the Hornets, Hawks and Leafsters.

Ebbler and Dever were the scorers for the Red Wings with Fuller counting for the Hornets.

Wally Hardwick and Weeks aniped the counters for the Bruins victory with Brennan scoring for the Black Hawks.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This week the gale of the Hollywood press listed their pet loves and hates among the film stars in 1952.

Janet Leigh and Tony Curtis drew the bouquets as the most cooperative players. The Hollywood Women's Press Club zapped Rita Hayworth and Marlo Lanza as the most unco-operative.

These annual selections are some times confusing to the scribblers. The poll does not represent the entire press of Hollywood. Males are excluded from voting. The press club is composed of many women who have little or no contact with the stars.

A good section of the club consists of fan magazine writers. Those stars who won't submit to the fan mag routine are often chosen for the most unco-operative tag.

Let's look at the "unco-op" winners of the past:

Female: Ginger Rogers, Jean Arthur, Joan Fontaine, Sonja Henie, Greer Garson, Irene Dunne, Peggy Ann Garner, Jennifer Jones, Rita Hayworth, Hedy Lamarr, Ditta Dehasse, Esther Williams.

Male: Fred Astaire, George Sanders, Errol Flynn, Robert Walker, Pidgeon, Fred MacMurray, Frank Sinatra (twice), Gary Cooper, Humphrey Bogart, Robert Mitchum.

Most of them are still thriving in their chosen profession: so the blast from the ladies seems not to have ruined their careers.

They are the columnists who give film reporters something meaty to write about, instead of the drab guff about their hobbies and favorite foods.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Angles to a forcing bid are not expressed in the rule. As, a jump is forcing to game; or, a new suit takeout is forcing for one round; or, a takeout double forces partner to bid.

Actually, each forcing rule intends to imply a bid "or its penalty equivalent." In other words, you may ignore a force if you can make more for your side by doubling opponent or passing.

After all, the aim of any pair is to make the most points in any deal. If they can do so by reaching their own best bid, good. If they can make more by letting opponents play the hand, good.

When partner doubles for takeout, you are forced to bid if an opponent does not intervene with a bid. But suppose you have a big hand, you must bid. So you have heard.

But suppose you can defeat an opponent bid for more points than side could score at a bid. Go for this gain. Even if necessary to pass when your partner has used a signal that forces you to bid.

The bidding goes like this:

South	West	North	East
1 H	Dbl	Pass	? -

You, east, hold this hand:

♠ 4
♥ Q 10 9 6 2
♦ 9 5 6
♣ 8 3

Partner's double is forcing for one round. Your pair can make more by defeating the opponent one heart bid. So, pass. Best them.

Your pass in that spot turns your partner's takeout double into a penalty double. Your pass says you can defeat the opponent for more than if your pair kept on bidding.

Now, hearken, larkin. Don't go around telling people I advise passing takeout doubles. The one and only time to do it is when you are sure of making opponents for a bigger profit.

A forcing bid do not disdain, unless you see a bigger gain.

RAISED CHEQUES

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A week ago a judge placed Connie Gianelli, 32, on probation for altering a $10 state welfare cheque to read $110. Friday she was arrested again this time, charged with altering a $110 state welfare cheque to read $1,110.

Your Individual Horoscope

By EP[illegible] DRAKE

Look in the section in [illegible] your birthday comes, and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SUNDAY, DEC. 21, 1952

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Many of the closest aspects are wisest for current situations. (Flintiness: "Haste makes waste." "Better to be sure than sorry." "Where there's a will there's a way."

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Enjoy the company of oldsters and youngsters. But be not too active... don't exhaust vitality and nerves. Pursue that happy medium!

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Techniques and methods more important than often we realize. Approach in small matters counts, too. The impression we give is vital.

June 22 to July 21 (Cancer)—Avoid becoming emotional; don't take too much to heart others' personal difficulties. Remember always the power of prayer.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Some easy ways some large ones. What you do, how you go about preparations, and your attitude in general are important these days.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Be determined, but not stubborn or heedless of others' wishes, a likely temptation now. Make your day one of co-operative thinking and—action.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—The "little" things may [illegible] you; the unexpected details, by, how is your work system these days

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Don't wait till last minute to do things you should be doing now. And if you can get some details out of the way for the week, do it now!

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—It's a better day than you think. And with a smile, a cheery word, a hopeful, determined-to-win demeanor, you can accomplish much. Church first, of course.

December 22 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Review for purposes of noting how better to do. Treat this day for its holy worth.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Don't crowd your day, but don't dawdle. However, relax after church. And you will be fit for tomorrow's work.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Set some rules for idle hours. If you have a busy schedule, be wise, keep calm within, take things in order, [illegible]

YOU BORN TODAY: Sagittarians often excel in athletics, politics, music, art, brokerage, real estate, the military, . Clear insight, prompt action, astute ambition are highlights of this Sign. Be not annoyed at delays, and be not forceful nor abrupt. Birthday of: Benj. Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, statesman, novelist; Albert P. Terhune, editor-author.

1952 Rise of Canadian Dollar In Money Market Aid to Some But Embarrassment to Others

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The financial world said homage to the Canadian dollar in 1952.

For the first time in 15 years it had climbed from a discount to a premium, becoming the world's most powerful currency.

But pride in that achievement turned to embarrassment for the Canadian government, and for a big segment of the Canadian population.

Helps Importers

The premium on the dollar, which rose to a 19-year high of more than four cents during August and September, ate away the opportunity of paying less for foreign imports.

But exporters complained of "considerable hardship." The premium tended to increase the price of Canada's exports and cut into Canada's ability to "compete" for foreign markets.

It was a cause of exporters increasing the price of their goods or absorbing the premium as an extra cost. Many exporters remained undecided: No one was certain how long the premium trend would last but some thought it would be short-lived.

It wasn't. As the year drew to a close, the premium shrank to less than two cents, but then bounced back to more than three cents.

In British Columbia lumber producers complained that the high Canadian dollar was cutting into their ability to compete in the American market. The B.C. government demanded that the federal government do something about it.

Unable to Help

At a Vancouver speech, Finance Minister Abbott replied that there wasn't much the government could do. It would take millions and millions of Canadian dollars to buy up all the surplus American dollars apparently available in Canada.

There wasn't that kind of money available in the federal treasury. As it was the government had invested a record sum of Canadian dollars in American dollars and gold.

The official reserves at the end of September climbed to a peak of $1,852,300,000. The government said it was using these reserves to "iron out" any sharp daily fluctuations in the exchange rate of the dollar."

What it actually was doing was buying up as much surplus American currency as it could to prevent the Canadian dollar from increasing its premium.

Reasons For Rise

Federal experts attributed the dollar's strength to three main developments:

1. A surplus instead of a deficit in Canada's foreign trade.

2. Heavy movement of foreign capital into Canada.

3. A "psychological" growth of confidence in the dollar in the world's money markets.

But for the wheat grower and the gold producer, particularly, the premium was just a way to lose money.

Canada sold most of her wheat through the international wheat agreement at the maximum price of $1.80 a bushel in United States funds. Every time the dollar went up a cent, that price went down almost two cents a bushel.

Gold producers sold most of their production on the official gold market with the price fixed at $35 a fine ounce in U.S. funds. Again, every time the Canadian dollar jumped, the price in Canadian funds declined.

Two Possibilities

For those who were discouraged by the increased dollar, there were two possibilities: foreign investors might decide to pull in their horns and take profit on their Canadian investments, or the Canadian government might decide it was again time to place a fixed rate of exchange on the dollar.

There was some indication toward the end of the year that American investors were taking profit on some Canadian securities but not to any extent to push the exchange rate down sharply.

As for Canada's exchange rate, Mr. Abbott observed in his Vancouver speech that "changes cannot be made without arbitrarily causing pain to some groups and giving financial benefits to others."

Jury Attaches No Blame in Death Of Diabetic Girl

BARRIE (CP)—A coroner's jury ruled Friday that Mary Taylor, 15-year-old diabetic, died because she stopped taking insulin of her own free will. Its verdict, delivered after an hour's deliberation, attached no blame to any one.

Crown Attorney William Thompson brought 19 witnesses to the stand. But the key figure in the attempt at prayer and faith healing three weeks ago, Pastor Ruhe W. Holmes of Tulsa, Okla., did not appear although he had been requested to attend.

A sworn statement he made to Ontario provincial police officers in New York state the day after the girl's death was admitted as evidence, together with a second statement from the evangelist, made through a representative, Pastor Maxwell Whyte of Toronto. Chief coroner Smiris Lawson of Ontario presided.

Ordained Minister

Pastor Holmes' statement to police said he was an ordained minister with the Assemblies of God and that Mary Taylor had sought information about the healing of the sick. Her mother asked whether Mary should give up her medicine and he told them "that was a decision it would not make."

Pastor Whyte read a letter from Pastor Holmes written in North Tonawanda, N.Y., Dec. 14 in which he said that he could see no wrong that he had done.

"Surely we have a right to preach and pray as we have," the letter said. "I told her I was not a doctor and did not give any advice regarding medicine. I do not claim to be a healer. I pray for the sick and Christ is the healer."

Dr. Lawson, summing up the evidence for the coroner's jury said:

"I think I can understand this poor girl a little. If you have been taking medicine for 15 years and anything comes along that has a possibility of relief you would be inclined to try. I myself almost be disposed to try it."

No Blame Attached

Mr. Lawson said he felt that no blame should be attached to the presence of the evangelist who have desired to exercise a helpful ministry. Notwithstanding, there is no doubt a very serious error has been made and he would all agree that if there is any possibility of preventing the repetition of such a fatal mistake he would be well to employ such means."

Truman Accuses Russia of Using States as Target

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman Friday accused Russia of using the United States as a target for "the most shameless, cynical and vicious campaign of falsification ever conducted against an ancient people anywhere."

Addressing the National War College, Truman said Soviet leaders now apparently realize "they can gain nothing from war but catastrophe." He says, turned to a policy of trying to drive a wedge between the U.S. and its Allies.

"We must meet this present phase of the Communist challenge, as we have met others in the past," the President said. "We must make a real effort to overcome the things that tend to divide us from our friends and Allies."

"If this effort is to succeed we are able to preserve unity and confidence among the free nations, we need not be panicky today about the state of the world. We are not on the ledge side. The world is not about to collapse around us."

Standing steadily on the foreign policies he has pursued during his seven-year regime in the White House, the President said future historians may recognize "some mistakes," but he declared:

Harry Meldrum Moore

The first duty of the council that morning was to choose one of its number to preside over them for the year. It was to be a fight between two reeves of equal standing, men who were both able and popular. John Strong, reeve of Meyo, was big, grey-headed; and Peter Slattery, reeve of Tinupo, was the direct opposite, small, dark, wiry. Of the two, Curly preferred Strong. Strong had the manner of the man who would fill the warden's chair with dignity. And since this would be his last year in council, Strong would not be so hard to convince that the northern townships were not getting a fair deal, and he might indeed do something about it.

It was not surprising then, that when Reeve Strong approached Curly for his support, Curly agreed. But he made it plain that his vote had strings attached. He wanted county council to take more interest in the north and he wanted larger grants for road improvement. He would have the main roads designated as county roads and he wanted county council to begin every effort to have the railway company build its proposed line all the way through to the Depot. It would be a good idea if county council, by a body, visited the north to see for themselves just what neglect had done for the townships.

"My impression is that county council has been building up the southern townships at the expense of the north," Curly said, "down here you have everything, while up there we have nothing. Yet you take our money, handing us back only a niggardly portion of it. Yet, Mr. Strong, I'll support you, but you know at what cost."

Reeve Strong appeared to be much impressed.

"It's quite obvious, Reeve Brown, that your part of the county is suffering from neglect, as you say," he said, "but, still, you must not place all the blame on council for such neglect. It is apparent that your former reeve did not tell us these things. I have been in council for ten years now, and I don't recall that your reeve ever said one word about the needs of the townships. And not having been told anything, naturally we took it for granted that everything up there was all right. I give you my word, Reeve Brown, that if you support me, and I'm chosen warden, that I will personally look into those claims of yours, and if they are as you say they are, I'll send you home at the end of the session with some news that your unified townships will be pleased to hear."

Reeve Strong defeated Reeve Slattery by three votes that morning, and he was being escorted to the warden's chair, he gave Curly Brown a broad smile that had but one meaning.

During the session that followed the meetings were held mornings and afternoons—Curly Brown was on his feet more often than any other member of council. Fearlessly he fought for the rights of his township, willingly taking on any man or group of men in argument. And the better it became, the better he liked it. He was careful in what he said, yet he never backed down. And he gained friends. No doubt about that. As the days passed he was impressed that his fellow members were less anxious to face him—that they were giving what he wanted. That on attaining his end he was leaving an impression that stamped him as a man to watch in future, never scorned him. Curly, himself, had not come to county council as a seeker after personal glory, just rather as a man who had the welfare of his townships at heart first, last and always. What did he care what impression he had left on county council? He had succeeded, hadn't he? Nothing else mattered.

But that was not what the Bellevue News thought about it. The same Bellevue News that had called him among other things "a loud-mouthed blunderer," made a right-about-face. Now it said editorially: "This broad-shouldered man, with the infectious smile that belies his audacity and daring, is a keen debater. He possesses the rare gift of marshalling facts, then pounding them home in clear terse sentences that leave no doubt of their meaning. Never in the history of council has its members been so boldly and daringly rapped across the knuckles for its utter indifference to the needs of the northern townships as was done before his a man so new to public life dared to castigate such an august body in such plain, yet parliamentary, language for its administration of what many yet prove to be the most important part of the county. By his first attempt to move council to action, Reeve Curly Brown has done remarkably well. He may indeed return to his beloved northern townships as the bearer of good and important news."

That Friday morning Curly Brown was driving north with Johnny Morcom and shortly after noon he was taking with Ben Whitmore when the stages met between Seven Lakes and the Lookout.

"How did you make out, Curly?" Ben asked, "or did county council throw you out?"

"No, Ben," Curly laughed, "they didn't throw me out. As a matter of fact, we got along famously."

"But, are they going to do anything for us?"

"Yes, they are," Curly said, "but how much will only be known when I get a letter of verification from the clerk."

Harry Foster, Percy Wren and Peter were at the post office to meet him. As they were driving home it was Peter who broke the startling news that Bill McTaggert had suffered a stroke in his office that afternoon. Curly and Baird had said there was little hope for him. He reminded his father that Billy and Curly were the same way—at work one day, dead the next.

The news of Bill McTaggert's serious illness came as a great shock to Curly Brown, most particularly at such a time as this. Only as recently as the previous Sunday he had met Bill at church and he had then said that he had never felt better. At that time, too, he had considerably coached Curly on county council procedure, wishing him unbounded success in his mission. Now the council to come to the aid of the townships.

And now, Bill McTaggert, his best friend, was gravely ill and might die, and if he did what would happen? The shut-down of the mill in the spring of '99 had been bad enough, and if there have been really serious in its effect on the district of the town had not a company decided to open a mine at the Lookout and had it not come in unexpectedly as the idle mill in search of mine and milling capital, God knows what was a different matter now. To be faced with the possible loss of a man who had neither son nor daughter; a man whose wife had been in Bellevilla for six years; a man who would leave no one to carry on his business. And if Bill McTaggert died, where would Banker Northcott fit into the picture? The chances were that Northcott would wait until the winter set in before he secure in the mill-pond and then he would clamp down on everything—possibly advertise the business for sale. But then, Curly cheered himself with the thought that just because the mill-owner's father had died suddenly, it didn't necessarily follow that Bill would go as quickly. He might indeed recover sufficiently to run his mill for some time yet.

Throughout the night, throughout the next day and even while he took Peter and Percy to church on Sunday morning, Curly was fearing the worst. After church he drove to Bill McTaggert's front door opened and Dr. Baird came out. His head was bowed, Curly felt a loquiries. He knew what to expect.

As Dr. Baird approached, Curly asked: "How is he, doc?"

"Dr. Baird came to the sleigh, wiped his eyes.

"Curly, our good friend Bill has gone," he said, "he died just a few minutes ago. I'm on my way now to the undertaker's.

86 Americans Die In History's Worst Airplane Disaster

Santa Claus Special Crashes On West Coast; 116 Aboard

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (AP)—Military experts continued today to comb wreckage and minds in an attempt to solve the riddle of why 86 men were killed last Saturday in history's worst plane crash.

Civilian officials began a concerted demand for investigation and action to reduce the number of military plane accidents.

Saturday's crash, which killed all but 30 of the men aboard the United States military's biggest plane, was the 10th in a recent series which has taken more than 300 lives.

Calls began immediately for grounding of military aircraft while safety precautions and plane checks are taken. Criticism arose from Congress, with demands voiced that the flying must be stopped.

Senator Richard Russell (Dem. Ga.) called for an exhaustive investigation. He said it may assemble a sub-committee of his Senate armed services committee would conduct it.

At Larson air force base, starting point of the ill-fated flight, the grim job of identifying the dead continued. Many were mangled and burned beyond recognition.

Meanwhile, four air force generals, including Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, chief of staff, other officers, civilians and technical representatives of aircraft and equipment manufacturers, trying to piece together the cause of the accident.

As at the scene of the crash, pieces of experience, flying heavy equipment and the weather in the area last couldn't develop enough power to rise from the runway. Capt. George Demas' observation moments before first had—he was one of the passengers who lived through the crash.

"It had a peculiar feeling," he said from his hospital bed, "that we were staying too long on the ground. I looked out window and when I felt the plane bounce at the end of runway and it settled the plane had not developed enough power to complete the take-off."

The pilot, Demas said, apparently agreed, since he "tried to yank it into the air because it was getting late to reverse the propellers and stop it."

The plane rose sharply, the captain related, then started to settle. "I thought we were going to hit the left and that suggested to me he was attempting to come back to the runway."

The pilot, identified as Lieut. William O'Connor of Pocatello, Ida., probably changed his mind and attempted to regain control, of course, Demas said. After that, the first thing Demas could recall was the plane hitting the ground, the wreckage and collapsing.

The left motor on the giant twin-decked plane was not unusual, air force officials said. But Representative Edith N. Rogers (Rep., Mass.) asked the air force to investigate the engines until the accident causes can be determined.

Hardy Group on Arctic Island Awaits Cold Blustery Christmas

OTTAWA (CP)—A cold, blustery Christmas awaits a group of hardy Canadians working near the top of the world at the northern edge of Canada's arctic frontier.

They are the Moonlies and Resolute Bay settlement on lonely Baffin Island, whose frozen waters stretch out west of Greenland, about 1,000 miles from the arctic circle and about 1,800 miles north of Montreal.

Cut off from civilization except for the annual visit of a supply ship and the occasional RCAF plane, Eskimos and Canadians alike will be snowbound at this southernmost arctic outpost this evening, reaching Toronto about midnight. This "freak fall of snow" will become mixed with rain or freezing rain along Lake Ontario, tonight, but how far north and east this belt will come before the weather-wise weather is still in some doubt.

walrus steak and memories of warmer, brighter days back home.

This will be the fifth Christmas in the arctic for Jack Scott, Moosonee-born northern RCMP volunteer—who gave their names to settlers in a radio-equipped hut at Craig Harbour, 50 miles away, by dog-sled "it's them hundreds of miles from that base.

They got turkeys from the C. D. Howe supply ship that made its annual visit to Resolute Bay earlier last August, but RCMP officials at Ottawa guess that the turkey will be the last they'll see for this time: Walrus meat may be substituted here.

Christmas mail is being dropped by an RCAF plane.

At Alert, where four Canadians and four American prepare weather reports from transmission to civilization by radio, there may be a jollier time. Transport officials say plenty of supplies have been sent to that station and there should be a big Christmas celebration.

VIOLENT DEATHS CLAIM 23 LIVES OVER WEEK-END

Traffic Accidents Take 12 Victims in Ontario

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fire, drowning and car crashes were among the causes of violent death for 23 persons in Eastern Canada during the week-end.

WEIGHING MACHINE FOUND SMASHED

After-midnight pranksters are believed responsible for tipping over a penny weighing machine on the Footbridge Arcade some time late Saturday night. The machine was found early Sunday smashed and lying on its side with pennies scattered over the sidewalk.

J. R. BOYCE STAFF ENJOYS YULE PARTY

Staff members of J. R. Boyce and Sons were guests of the firm at a Christmas staff party held at the garage. The evening was spent at darts and other games with prizes going to the lucky winners. Movies were also shown.

During the evening a dinner was served by the management of Dixie Inn. Helping to serve the dinner was little Berlinda DeYurst, six-year-old daughter of George DeYurst, Dixie Inn manager.

14 COMMUNICABLE DISEASE CASES HERE

Communicable disease in the city has been reported as being normal for this time of year according to the medical officer of health, Dr. A. M. Breula. The week ending December 20, shows five more cases of scarlet fever being reported to the health office and one case of infectious hepatitis. For the week ending December 13, six cases of the disease, scarlet fever, had been reported. The total number of cases now stands at 14.

LIGHT SNOWFALL BLANKETS DISTRICT

There is no further need to dream of a "white Christmas." For those who had their fingers crossed, uncross "em". The city now has two inches of rather fine snow. Furthermore, the forecast received this morning is cloudy and more snow.

Saturday evening at 5:40 p.m. it began to snow and it kept snowing intermittently until Sunday midnight. Santa will not have to put wheels on the sleigh this Christmas if the weather continues to remain cold.

SEVERAL MINOR MOTOR ACCIDENTS

Slippery snow-covered streets were responsible for a series of minor motor vehicle accidents in the city during the week-end with more than a half-dozen such mishaps being reported to police. No one was injured.

The majority of accidents took place at street intersections, two at the Upper Bridge and two others at the Front and Bridge Street intersection. Damage in no instance resulted in over $200 to any one vehicle, it was reported.

BELLE THEATRE CHRISTMAS PARTY

About 40 employees of the Belle Theatre attended the annual Christmas party held at the Golden Arm Inn Sunday evening. At that time Christmas bonus cheques were presented.

Obituary

ALEX. CASSIBO

Former farmer in Hungerford Township, Alex. Cassibo, Hastings County home, died at the home Sunday. He was 76.

Born in Belleville, Mr. Cassibo was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Cassibo. After retiring his active years had farmed and worked as a laborer in Hungerford. He had been at the county home since 1938. He was unmarried and was a member of St. Michael's Church.

MRS. STELLA MAE WOODLEY

Victim of a highway accident near Havelock, Mrs. Stella Mae Woodley, 40 Hamilton Road, died suddenly on Sunday. She was in her 50th year.

Daughter of Mrs. Gordon Gilray, and the late David Grant, Mrs. Woodley was born at Harbermere in North Hastings and had lived in Belleville for the past four years. Previously she had lived at Batawa and at Coe Hill. She was a member of Christ Church.

Surviving besides her mother, are her husband, Roy Woodley, Hamilton; one son, one daughter, Mrs. Ramona Mae Dobbie, also of this city; one brother, Ray Grant, of Weslemkoon, and three sisters, Mrs. Alex. Gunter, of Weslemkoon and Mrs. Gordon Fraser and Mrs. Harold Wright, both of Batawa.

PHILIP FRANCIS HAMILTON

The funeral of Philip Francis (Frank) Hamilton took place on December 19, at Wetaskiwin, Alberta. Death was due to an industrial accident.

At the time of his death he was 44 years of age and was well known in this area, having received his formal education at Massassaga and Foxtails Public schools. As a boy he was a regular attendant of Moulinette Wesley United Church and Sunday school.

Later, Mr. Hamilton moved to Alberta, but made frequent visits to his former home. He served four years in the Canadian army at which time he met and married the former Violet Johnson, of Edmonton.

Besides his wife, he leaves a son: his mother, Mrs. Philip Hamilton, of Mountain View; three brothers: William A., of Napanee; Walter, of Belleville, and Seymour, of Mountain View; two sisters, Mrs. Ed. (Mary) Heniine, Reg. N., of Toronto, Alberta, and Otho (Pearl) Herrington, Reg. N., of Mountain View, his father predeceased him in July of this year.

MRS. FLORENCE MAY DAY

Mrs. Florence May Day, 105 Yeomans Street, died suddenly in an automobile accident on Sunday, December 21st. She was in her 76th year.

Born in Frankford the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Frederick, she had lived in Belleville for the past 16 years. Previously she had resided in Cobourg.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Manley (Annie) Loveless, of Belleville; Mrs. Harold (Marie) Veale, of Saratoga Springs, N.Y.; Mrs. Jean Leonard, of White Rock, B.C.; three sons, Edward M. Turner of Toronto; James Turner, of Oshawa and John Turner of Belleville. Three brothers, Ernest Frederick of Cobourg, Blake Frederick of Lindsay and Harry Frederick of Castleton, also survive.

The funeral was a member of the United Church, Ladies of the Moose, and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion.

Funeral arrangements appear elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. LILLIAN SOLMES

Mrs. Lillian Solmes, 105 Yeomans Street, died in Havelock hospital on Sunday, December 21, following an automobile accident. She was in her 49th year.

Born in Picton, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Bert Frederick, her husband, Joseph Solmes, predeceased her some years ago.

She is survived by two brothers, Ralph and Cuthbert Frederick, both of Picton. She was a member of the United Church.

Funeral arrangements appear elsewhere in this edition.

JOHN AUSTEN FLETCHER

John Austen Fletcher, 102 Yeomans Street, died in Belleville General Hospital on Sunday, December 21st, after an illness of four weeks. He was in his 78th year.

Born in Sidney Township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fletcher, the deceased had lived in this district all his life. A retired farmer, he was a member of the United Church.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Jessie Kelly, of Consecon, and a nephew, Paul Fletcher, of Alhambra, California.

Funeral arrangements appear elsewhere in this edition.

TRENTON

Batawa Woman Wins $1,000 As Cash Prize

Trenton (Special) — There is one woman in the Frankford district who expects to enjoy a very happy Christmas. She is Mrs. Ann Anna Kravacek of R.R. 5, Trenton, winner of the $1,000 cash prize put up as an attraction to raise money for Community Chest work by the Frankford Lions Club. Her nephew, Milan Kravacek, 23, profited well because he bought his aunt the ticket. She gave him the tidy sum of $200, and the young Boy Scout, who drew the lucky piece, Roger Levy, also fared well; besides Lion Joe Adams, of Frankford, seller of the ticket, won $100 for his efforts.

A mother with two children of her own Mrs. Kravacek works for the Bata Shoe Company. Her husband is a department manager for the same company.

Smiling happily Mrs. Kravacek explained that she intended to use the balance of the money to fix the family home, a job that had been planned when funds became more abundant.

Incidentally the Lions Club project was successful and the club is already enough money to go ahead with the proposed community centre.

LARGE CHRISTMAS PARTY

Jim Uttley's annual Christmas party attracted the largest crowd ever to gather at the Trenton Country Club here. The proceeds, in excess of $275, went as usual, to the Salvation Army.

At eight o'clock Santa Claus arrived in full bright red regalia, extending heartiest season greetings and officiating at a draw for lucky prizes. Then came cole-slaws and carols and dancing.

Those winning prizes were: Norm Chambers, Rita Gordon and Mrs. Benton.

Special prizes went to ladies attending. Those winners were: Mrs. Ian Gardiner, and Mrs. F. Fillon.

St. Thomas Sunday School Attends Service

Backgrounded by a beautiful tableau, "The Nativity," sweetest story ever told, was presented to members of St. Thomas' Church Sunday School at the Christmas service held in the church Sunday afternoon.

Archdeacon Arthur Smith, rector, told the beautiful story in simple language, interspersing the various phases with appropriate carols and hymns. Members of the Sunday School enacted the roles of Mary and Joseph, the angels, the shepherds and the three wise men in a colorful setting.

Various classes of the Sunday School, in charge of their teachers, paraded from the Parish House to the church for the service. Several parents were in attendance.

Following the service, the children marched back to the Parish House where they sang two motion pictures "Santa Claus and the Snow Fairy Queen"; "A Christmas Rhapsody." Afterwards they were given bags of candy and fruit, with ice cream.

BAY FROZEN OVER

The first freeze-up of the season on the bay occurred Friday night. The ice was fairly firm and will likely last unless the weather turns mild.

Shrine Club Holds Successful Turkey Party

Christmas cash and crippled children are synonymous to the Belleville Athletic Club and on Saturday members combined the first two to finance the third. Saturday was the date of the annual turkey craw while today a hugely successful party was held for the crippled proteges of the club.

The Saturday party attracted some 110 Shriners and guests from all parts of the district with seventy-five succulent turkeys as top prizes in one of the most successful events of its kind held in the history of the club.

And every last nickel of the net proceeds went to the financing of today's party for the less fortunate kiddies of the city and district.

Shrine president D. L. Storey, secretary Noble Lionel Crawford and Noble Outfit Lieut. Tom Lewis, Cecil Holway and others combined to make the evening a rousing success. Games were keenly contested, with Lady Luck distributing her smiles in a generous manner.

A luncheon was served at eleven o'clock and around midnight the festivities broke up, wended their way homewards.

Anti Tank Regt. Officers Hold Children's Party

A real Christmas atmosphere prevailed in the officers' mess of the 9th Anti-Tank Regiment on Sunday afternoon when Lt.-Col. G. C. McGregor, M.C. commanding officer, and his officers, were hosts to their wives and families at the annual Christmas party.

Old and young joined in the singing of Christmas carols with Dean Whalen pounding out the tunes on organ.

Santa Claus, with red coat and whiskers, delighted the youngsters who were presented with individual gifts. Later they saw motion pictures appropriate to the occasion, shown by Captain Harold Vingoe. They also were presented with candies, fruit and ice cream.

Donation of soft drinks were made by the Coca Cola Company and ice cream by Neilson's Limited.

Later the officers and their ladies enjoyed afternoon tea.

On Saturday night the mess was the scene of a carol party when members and guests joined in the singing of seasonal melodies, with Mr. Whalen presiding at the organ.

An afternoon tea is being held for officers, their wives and guests, on Boxing Day afternoon.

Baled Cotton Damaged by Fire In Boxcar
About one-third of a carload of baled cotton en route to textile mills in Quebec was damaged by fire in the local railway yards yesterday when the car caught fire inside.
City firemen were called to the scene and said it took about two hours to bring the blaze under control. Dense smoke rolled from the steel boxcar as firemen fought the flames. The burning bales had to be hauled out of the car with a truck before the fire could be completely extinguished.
Firemen said the blaze was apparently caused by either combustion or friction of bale wires rubbing together during movement of the car. Such fires are frequent occurrence, railway officials stated.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Western oils settled back from early sharp gains and industrials led the trend in light early afternoon stock market trading today.

Afternoon support for papers and banks bolstered the industrials list and constructions and steels continued firm. Utilities weakened.

Senior golds were mixed but junior producers gained strength after new high gains in Anglo-Rouyn and East Malartic. Macassa slipped. Prospects continued firm as Hoyle, Goodfish and Barrymin added pennies. Holding companies were mixed.

Higher-priced base metals were mixed but most other issues gained. Eureka and Ontario Pyrites added pennies in active trading and Dominion Asbestos, United Keno and Sherritt-Gordon gained. Chibougamau Ex and Steep Rock slipped.

Western oils showed a majority of gains, including Central Explorers, New Devon and Security Free. Stanwell traded 93,000 shares to add 19 cents.

DOLLAR EATS

MONTREAL (CP) — The American dollar was hit a discount of 3 3-16 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today.

Christmas Travel Boom Biggest in Years

TORONTO (CP) — The Christmas travel boom this year will be the biggest since the holiday seasons of the Second World War, railways, airlines and bus company officials reported today.

Biggest problem on Canada's two trans-continental railways has been booked almost solid since October. A CPR official said only a small amount of emergency space was kept open.

Tomorrow Trans-Canada Airlines will start operating 45 extra flights, the majority to Montreal, New York and Western Canada. Hundreds of reservations have been made for overseas points, mostly to England.

Only White Man in Desolate Region To Have Fancy Christmas Dinner

MUSKOX LAKE, N.W.T. (CP)— Mat Murphy, the only white man in this dis tate wilderness of moss and scrub, will sit down to two 7-kimo friends' ristmas Day to a feast of caribou, seabird, canned vegetables and cake. He's done it every Christmas for years.

Mat is a 51-year-old trapper who loves life in the Muskox Lake region, 400 miles northwest of Edmonton where the temperature sometimes plummets to 70 below. He has spent some 20 Christmases in the far north.

Murphy's dinner, set out inside a tting tent and beside a crackling wood fire, will be a real treat to a man who eats dehydrated foods day in and day out.

Christmas would be lonely for Murphy but for the presence of an the time living in his large tent-cabin — a 30-foot-long structure made of canvas stretched over poles and lined with caribou hide and banked with sod.

Besides being good company, they always have his tent warm for him when he returns from a two-week inspection of his traplines.

In addition to the caribou, a special Christmas box will be opened.

Murphy will have a Christmas cake, canned vegetables and seafoods and other delicacies. The cake was baked for him by his daughter-in-law, before he left Yellowknife, N. W. T., last August for the 275-mile northeasterly trek to Muskox Lake.

Christmas would be lonely for Murphy but for the presence of an Eskimo couple. They camped near him this winter and spend much

Over 100 Attend Lions Banquet

FRANKFORD — Over 100 Lions and ladies attended the Frankford Lions Club annual Ladies' Night Monday evening in the Frankford Community Hall. President, Jim Johns, called the meeting to order. Following the invocation, Lion Bob Bates led a sing-song of Lion choruses. The toast to The Queen was given, following which all sat down to a bountiful banquet. Lion Adrian Babcock was toastmaster for the evening, and kept everyone laughing with his wit and sparkling wit and humor. Toasts were proposed to the ladies and the expression of thanks was given to the caterers.

A short program was enjoyed. Lions Clinton Cooney and George Roberts favored with a duet, following which Jim Farr, Trenton club, gave a number. The Frankford United Church quartet, Lions Bob Bates, Ernest Wallace, and Harry Slingerland favored with several numbers. Lion Bob Bates then led in another sing-song.

Among the visiting dignitaries were the presidents of the Trenton and Brighton Lions Clubs, and Mayor Roy Whitley, a member of the Trenton Lions.

Following the bountiful repast, and period of fun and entertainment, a dance to the music nothelium was enjoyed, with music by Jack Keane and his Starlighters. Highlight of the evening, was the announcement of the winner of the Lions contest which has been conducted to raise proceeds for the Lions arena. Mrs. Leo Kravacera, of R. R. No. 3, Trenton, was the winner of the grand prize, a one-thousand-dollar bill.

Thus, came to a close another splendid Ladies' Night, and another successful achievement for the Lions Club of Frankford.

FIERCE FOG

LONDON (CP)—Ambulance service was among the worst affected during London's recent spell of fog. Twice attendants had to act as midwives when the thick blanket made delivery impossible. Some vehicles were two or three hours on a journey normally taking 15 minutes.

LAST QUAD DIES

ROME (Reuters)—The last of quadruplets—all boys—born Friday to a Rome dockworker's wife died Sunday. The other three died Saturday. The mother, 33-year-old Fernanda Ferrante, is reported doing well. Fernanda and her husband, Orlando, 36, have two other children.

Lee and Kelsey Granted Stays of Execution

Toronto (CP) — Chief Justice J. W. Pickup today announced stays of execution for two men sentenced to be hanged within the next two weeks. The delays were allowed to give them time for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

One was Harry Lee, 37, of Hamilton, sentenced to die December 30 for the rifle slaying last summer of Mrs. Mary Rosenblatt, of Hamilton. His execution was stayed to January 20.

The other was James. Alfred Kelsey, 29, convicted last September at Welland in the bludgeon slaying of Sam Delibasich, Welland taxi driver. Kelsey's execution, scheduled for January 6, was stayed to March 10.

Lee's appeal to the Ontario Court of Appeal was turned down on Friday.

Former Belleville Resident Dies

OSHAWA (CP) — An employee of the Bell Telephone Company for 54 years prior to retirement in 1933, Edwin Herbert Farrow, 87, died Sunday night.

During his years with the company's construction and contract department, he was stationed at Hamilton, Stratford, Orillia, Kingston, Belleville and Toronto. He was born in Elora in the Guelph district. A son and daughter survive.

AP Writer Sees Stalin Vigorous On 73rd Birthday

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW (AP)—Josef Vissarionovich Stalin became 73 years old Sunday. Moscow papers made no mention of the event but gave top play to the Stalin international peace awards annually made public on his birthday.

I have seen the Soviet leader close-up four times this year and found his appearance little changed from when I first saw him 11 years ago.

The four occasions were on May Day, on Soviet Air Force day last summer, on the stage of the Bolshoi Theatre Nov. 6 when he sat with other Soviet leaders, and in Red Square Nov. 7 when he reviewed a parade marking the 35th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution.

Stalin is known to have made at least four public appearances at Moscow theatres in the last year.

The Soviet leader walks with a resolute stride. Three of the times I saw him this year he had to climb a long flight of steps. He managed them jauntily for a man approaching 73.

During the last week newsreel close-ups of Stalin reviewing the November parade have appeared on television. They showed him saluting the marchers and chatting jovially with other Soviet leaders.

DROWNED IN CREEK

ALMONTE (CP) — Six-year-old Gordon Van Dusen was drowned Friday when he attempted to skate on the thin ice of a creek near here. Playmates notified police, who recovered the boy's body within 30 minutes of the accident. Attempts to revive him failed. Almonte is 30 miles southwest of Ottawa.

War-Weary Britons Look To 1953 for New Deal

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—War-weary Britons look to 1953 for a new deal in trouble-shocked Iran. They cling to hopes that the new year will bring a halt to recurring international crises and relief from the wearing burden of an uneasy, armed peace.

With the growing strength of the Western powers, Allied leaders said the defiant attitude of Soviet Russia has moderated. But, they said it would be disastrous to place too optimistic a view on the improved situation as Europe had not yet reached a state of security.

The actual war potential of the Communist alignment still remains a closely-guarded secret. But the Russians alone are reported to have at least 175 well-trained and equipped divisions ready to strike. Another 60 divisions of doubtful offensive value, military experts say, could be raised in satellite countries. It is also said that the Reds could muster some 20,000 tanks and more than 25,000 planes for front-line duty.

Gradual Buildup

Measured against this might, the Allied armed forces in Western Europe by the 14 countries comprising the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is hardly considered to be far from adequate.

The Western powers, despite increasing internal problems, have slowly built up a unified land force of some 26 divisions, backed by an expanding reserve and underlying power capable of speedy mobilization in an emergency.

The actual goal for the current year was set at 50 divisions, a program which was reviewed at the recent NATO meetings in Paris.

The Allied air force came close to its 1952 target of 4,000 planes. In this build-up Britain played a major role with Canada contributing the nucleus of her promised 12 fighter squadrons for service in continental Europe.

Work has also proceeded at top speed on a network of about 100 airfields, including the Canadian operational base at Grve Tresquin, near the Saarland frontier. Two more fields are to be laid down by Canada.

Great Sea Power

Bolstered by the combined power of the British and United States navies the North Atlantic countries have an overwhelming advantage at sea.

In the general scheme of preparedness, all branches of the Allied forces engaged in local and large-scale manoeuvres during the year, Canada's 27th infantry brigade, on duty in Germany, for more than a year, Canadian naval units and RCAF airmen played a prominent part in these operations.

In the atomic field Britain exploded her first atom bomb at Monte Bello Island, off the northwest coast of Australia. United States scientists in the Pacific were reported to have set off the first-ever hydrogen blast. Other new and highly-secret weapons, guided missiles and faster-than-sound aircraft contributed to the growing strength of the West.

WOMAN SETS AIR RECORD

MARSEILLE, France (AP)—Jacqueline Auriol, daughter-in-law of the French president, Sunday bettered her own woman's record for flying over a closed 100-kilometre (62.15 mile) course with an average time of 534.375 miles an hour. Mrs. Auriol's flight beat the record of 11.360 miles an hour, which she set in May, 1951. She flew a "Mistral" jet fighter.

RATEPAYERS HAVE THE ANSWER

Last week in Osgoode Hall, Mr. Justice Judson, of the Ontario Supreme Court, gave a decision which has been awaited with interest by school boards and municipal councils everywhere in Ontario. He ruled that a municipal council has no power to control school board spending.

This decision simply confirms the long-standing provision of the Ontario Municipal Act which requires that a municipal council must levy for, and collect, the total estimates submitted by a school board. Two weeks ago we commented at some length on the controversial aspects of this question in discussing the impending case which was brought before the Supreme Council by the Fort Arthur School Board after the City Council had cut $57,000 from the Board's 1952 estimates.

Despite the fact that this matter is of vital importance to every municipal ratepayer in the province only meagre details of argument in the case have been reported. After a five-hour hearing last Tuesday, the presiding justice delivered an oral judgment which appears to have hinged on whether the Board had given the council sufficient detailed information about the estimates submitted.

It would appear that having satisfied himself that the School Board had complied with the requirements in this respect by submission of the estimates, Mr. Justice Judson was not adjudicating a test case against the Municipal Act but merely ruling on a question of whether the requirements of the Act were fulfilled.

* * *

It is a strange thing indeed if the only effective argument advanced by the municipal council was that the school board had not complied with Act. After all, the vexatious point at issue, from the standpoint of the municipal councils, is that the terms of the Act give the school boards arbitrary spending powers to which they should not be entitled.

Any case which hinges on anything else than this single point is but all of the justice and fairness of the unrestricted spending powers which are vested in the school boards. As we pointed out before this, the Act has been on the statute books of this province for 102 years. The municipal councils take the position, and we think it is a fair one, that the law is now obsolete.

There was a time when the foundation was being laid for a school system in this province, that it was expedient and wise to provide for the building up of that system in such a way that school boards would be left entirely free by municipal councils. It was with commendable foresight that the early legislators made sure an adequate, progressive, and expanding school system would be assured.

* * *

The time has now arrived in many Ontario municipalities, however, when it can be claimed with a good deal of justice that the shoe is on the other foot. The demands for school purposes have become so high that they can only be met with out of two alternatives. The municipal council must proceed with its own essential program of maintenance and new development, add the school board's uncontrolled estimates, and unconscionably high tax rate will be the ratepayers. Or, it can curtail its much needed civic works program with consequent deterioration of ordinary services to the ratepayers. In a responsible and reasonable school system placing heavier burdens on the municipal taxpayer.

Neither of these alternatives is calculated to win many friends for members of municipal councils. Their position has become utterly unfair and wholly unjustified in the light of the proportion of municipal tax revenue which is now earmarked for school purposes and the other items of municipal administrative costs can be considered.

This situation can not go on indefinitely. Some new concept of responsible authority as between municipal, provincial and federal authorities probably holds the answer to the many tax problems harassing local government in some new form or other from year to year. In the light of the report of the Rowell-Sirois Commission, which was to have been the answer, shows how little hope there is of immediate relief for the municipal ratepayers from any such broad formula of equitable tax adjustment.

* * *

We have not the faintest notion what the proper legal approach should be in a court of law with a view to amending the spending powers of school boards but we do know that the ratepayers of this province still have in their hands all the power that is necessary to change the Ontario Municipal Act in any manner they might see fit.

It is a safe guess that at least seven out of ten of the members of the Ontario Legislature are men who first entered public life as elected representatives to municipal councils. They all know what this problem is: some of them have certainly strenuously protest against it when they were wrestling municipal votes.

It is a question that cuts across all party lines. It is one that threatens to put at stake the homes and properties of many thousands of citizens in this province. It is one that the members of the Legislature could do something about in short order. But of course it must first be made clear to them that something must be done.

It would not be the whole answer to the municipal tax question by any means; but it would be a starting point, and the concerted efforts which would be required to spur the M.L.A.'s into action might mark the beginning of a united movement of municipal ratepayers in action on their own behalf.

QUATRAINS

CHRISTMAS PRAYER

This is the Christmas prayer I pray:
God watch o'er them now far away,
Surround with faith the trouble-tried,
Let love in every hope abide.

HAPPY TIME

The grownups grateful seem to be
That Christmas comes but once a year.
But it is fun, they will agree,
And very pleasant while it's here.

MOTHER THOUGHT

'Twas this the mother used to say:
"Let's do our best throughout December
To make it be a Christmas Day
The children will always remember."

GIVE AND TAKE

If I were Santa I would make
Each call a game of give and take.
I'd give to all of joy a share
And take away what hurts they bear.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 22, 1932

Two hundred pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf will go home for Christmas; those who remain at the school will be well looked after for Christmas.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Centre United Church recently elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Vivian Vitter; vice-president, Mrs. Joseph Markham; secretary, Miss Margaret Stapley; treasurer, Mrs. Richard Stapley; flower committee, Mrs. Percy Lucas, and Mrs. Jason Stapley; visiting committee, Mrs. Charles Lucas, Mrs. Schamerhorn and Mrs. Myatt.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Addy, of Boston, Mass., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fenn, Dundas St. East.

Miss Jean MacLaurin is home from McGill University, Montreal, to spend the Christmas vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Nicolson celebrated the 50th anniversary of their wedding on December 20th, at their home in the 6th concession of Sidney township. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Nicolson was Mary Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bush and the farm upon which they settled adjoined that of the bride's parents, in the 4th concession of Sidney township, and they have resided there since that time. Mr. Nicolson was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nicolson of Madoc. He's now and their families, except one son in Western Canada, were present. Many friends, including the bridesmaid of fifty years ago, Mrs. Thomas Mayhew. Mr. and Mrs. Nicolson received many handsome gifts.

30 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 22, 1922

Mayor Charles J. Deane entertained the members of the city council at the Quinte Cafe last evening after the meeting of the committees. The hospitality was much appreciated and an enjoyable time was passed.

This was nomination day for mayor and aldermen of the city of Belleville and a unusual numerous candidates were nominated for mayor, but only three will stand, namely: Ald. Geo. Ostrom, ex-Ald. Geo. Benjamin and W. C. Mikel. Thirty-eight persons were nominated for aldermen and twelve are to be elected. It is expected that there will be contests in some of the wards for school trustee. However in Kilcheson Ward, Arthur McGee was elected by acclamation and in Baldwin Ward, John W. Cook was elected by acclamation. Those who wish to run have until tomorrow evening to qualify.

40 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 22, 1912

Mr. Clark Taylor is home from McGill University, Montreal, to spend the Christmas vacation.

Mr. Arthur Steel is home from Toronto to spend Christmas.

Mr. George Jones, of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is here to spend Christmas.

Mr. W. E. Tummon, receve of Huntingdon, was in town today.

Capt. J. Eccles, of Kingston, is spending the Christmas holidays here.

Mr. W. H. Dyer is home from the School of Practical Science, Toronto, to spend the Christmas vacation.

Mr. Thos. Thompson, receve of Madoc, was in town today.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thompson, of Suffolk, N.Y., formerly of Belleville, are here to spend Christmas with relatives.

50 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 22, 1902

The merchants report that the business last Saturday was "the best ever."

Many of Belleville boys and girls will be home for Christmas and will be glad to receive a hearty welcome from their relatives and friends.

Mr. Ernest Ford is home to spend Christmas.

Mr. Sprague is home to spend the holidays.

Mr. Will Bollert is home from Queen's University to spend the Christmas vacation.

Mr. J. T. Laton of the city high school staff, and Mrs. Laton will spend Christmas with friends in Toronto.

Mr. Thomas C. Larier has returned home from South Africa.

Mr. Jack Rathbun is home from Upper Canada College to spend the Christmas vacation.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Here on the eve of Christmas, I have found a full-grown man, middle-aged, taking clouts at a bevvy of small children in the middle of a gusty morning the slushy and muddy corner of his lawn, making gouges in the ground, where even grass a month ago, and will be green grass again before long, with any luck.

"You young divvies," shouted the householder, furiously. "Keep off of here, do you understand?"

He tried to cuff one of them, and missed.

"Hey, hey!" I interposed, full of the Christmas spirit. "After all they are only kids."

The citizen stared at me.

"Okay" he said bitterly. "And I'm only an adult."

"Well, you must expect children to behave this way...." I suggested.

"Swell," said the angry man.

'Bevanism' Defined

(London Sunday Times)

To some extent Bevanism is a collection of miscellaneous discontents: Pacifism, extreme anti-capitalism, pro-Socialism, anti-Americanism, but the key to Bevanism is the policy known as "Socialism in One." The Bevanites believe in a socialist Britain detached from America and Russia.

Much More Difficult

(Peterborough Examiner)

An editor claims that the time will come when people will no longer be able to spend money they haven't got. If this should occur parents would be unable to buy things they cannot afford, which would no doubt be regarded as a calamity by many.

The Treasures of the Snow

(Montreal Gazette)

The weather these last few days may have been rather pleasant in its mildness, But it has been poor Christmas weather, as our needs mean.

An old and little-known verse of Scripture seems to apply these days. It is the verse from the Book of Job: "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow?"

Like many another of the world's natural treasures, its loss is felt only when it is withheld. Through these almost snowless days before Christmas, something like an April sunlight has decked Mount Royal and shone into the windows of offices and houses, while at times an almost spring-like softness has been felt in the air.

But April in December comes without welcome. It recalls the old Irish saying: "A green Christmas makes a fat churchyard." This grim old saying, even if only a superstition, expresses the longing that Christmas be about the thing for which it is decorated, with snow, with whiteness over field and tree, and on housetop and church spire.

* * *

Very old is this longing for a white Christmas. Shakespeare expressed it more than three centuries ago. Thus he wrote:

> At Christmas I no more desire a rose,
> Than wish a snow in May's newfangled mirth;
> But like of each thing that in season grows.

So then, is that Christmas ought to be really wintry? Perhaps it is. Why is it that Christmas out the season make it more fitting that way. It brings the season of the year when the poor have watched their flocks on a wintry night in Bethlehem, too, for the spirit of the carols, when the good King Wenceslas looked out to see the moon shining brightly over the crisp and even snow, though the night was cruel. It seems nearer, also, to the old spirit of the Christ Child, cradled with the holly and the mistletoe as the few green things that linger allows, and with snow lying on the path to church.

Perhaps for some deeper than that. For, the very glow of the season, the comfort and the cheer, need the cruel frost to make the contrast. Christmas, in its symbolism, is a light in the darkness and the cold. As Sir Walter Scott put it:

> Heap on more wood!—the wind is chill;
> But let it whistle as it will,
> We'll keep our Christmas merry still.

And at the very beginning of his "Christmas Carol," Charles Dickens creates the sense of approaching Christmas by describing the damp fog moving through London's streets, and the chill breath of the passers-by, and the workmen on the road stamping their feet, and even poor, Bob Cratchit trying to warm his chilled fingers at the candle on his desk.

* * *

It is the darkness and the cold that make the heart long for Christmas shrine. Happy indeed is the family that gathers round to capture the glory of the fireplace. For the fireplace is a thing of magic. It recalls Santa Claus and most of the illness that doctors attend masqueraders as "just a cold" in the early days of days.

While serving in the Marines on Guam, Corporal Chris Christensen, advanced to two Jims in the month of February. On the 28th, on the 10th when the temperature was around 100 and followed abruptly, he landed 10 days later in a temperature equivalent to Boston's February dressed in light cotton fatigue summer underwear and shivering so badly our teeth chattered. I managed to pass the night in a frigid fox-hole but believe me I really shivered all the time. Now I heartily applaud your teachings about "colds." I didn't have a whimper of a "cold" until I got back to civilization! (R. W.)

But that's only the half of it. Some back to civilization" implies exposure to respiratory infection.

Let no one try to impute to me the belief or teaching that suffering physical discomfort from cold, damp, draft or other rigors "hardens" or protects against illness. I'm as fond of personal comfort as you are. I cite the mother's observation about her children's "exposure" and the Marine Corporal's observation about his ordeal as bits of good common sense.

In the booklet Call it C R T, about the respiratory infections, tonsils and adenoids, sinusitis, bronchitis, etc. I quote the comment of a distinguished British authority:

"It is absurd to put on an overcoat when going out for a walk. It is good to go out and to be braced by the cold and so be impelled to take vigorous exercise."

The physical discomfort one may suffer from exposure to cold, damp, draft, wind or inadequate clothing or heating is bad enough, usually, but the risk of consequent illness (other than frost-bite).

It's An Old Story

(Nepeawa (Man.) Press)

We do not believe that war is inevitable. We do not believe that the Empire is doomed. We do not believe that we are due for a depression.

Quite so. How many fake prophets of the end of the world have spilled ink and paper in the good right on this continent! And what previous age has been so here to spend the end?

Depression-mongers are equally harmful on the body, economic and spiritual, as the prophets of doom. In fact invite it, if they can secure sufficient numbers of converts to their way of thinking. Encouraging in gloom, mostly based on fear alone, is not a good condition. Neither is that condition of exhilarated and false-security that many future Utopia which is not realized and gained by hard work by the individual.

But there have been prophets of doom in the past, and in the past it was a good thing for some people that they were. Periods of great stability in those days depressed many thirties to delve into history and dig up what great men were saying in the first and last half of the 19th century.

William Blake, for there is scarcely anything around us but ruin and despair.

Wilberforce, in the early 1800's, said: "I dare not marry, the future is too dark and threatening."

The Duke of Wellington, on the eve of his death in 1852, said: "God be merciful to me spared from seeing the consummation of ruin that is coming upon us."

Disraeli, in 1845: "In industry, in commerce and agriculture there is no hope."

Lord Shaftesbury, in 1846: "Ireland is the type of the British Empire from shipwreck."

Well, the ruin of the world is not so badly off as all that and the latest word is that there is plenty of room for optimists. Despite taxes, and there is hope of some relief here, despite strife, and vast armaments, concerned about a new car in 1953, despite inflation not thousands about a new home, and many thousands more about which keep up with the Joneses championship.

At this Christmas time, the world is not standing still, but on the cold peace continues. But it is peace, and unless all observing Christmas are blind or deluded, there is no promise of any break with the coming year. Certainly not, if free nations continue to arm for defence.

Lack of Humour

(Vancouver Sun)

Communism's greatest weakness is its complete lack of humour and harmless refreshments. Differences between man and the lower animals is the inability of the latter to laugh. We wonder if the Russians ever stop to reflect as they solemnly, tortured and relentless way, that they are not able to laugh either.

Office Parties

(Windsor Star)

The Liquor Control Board has appealed to employers to prohibit office parties where intoxicants are served. It would be well if this appeal were heeded. Almost each Christmas season there are persons who are killed in traffic accidents as a result of these affairs.

If either firms or employes will do their part to celebrate or celebrate the season, these can be done without the serving of intoxicants, and think very little. There can be exchanges of gifts, and there can be luncheons, with the money spent on liquor at office parties were put into the employer pay envelope. Some involved would appreciate it more.

In the end, one of office parties is that people who normally drink, or think they little, are apt to "let go" and get into a condition in which they can't take pride. Not being accustomed to alcoholic drinks, they are apt to make fools of themselves unseemly.

This Christmas season will be safer without office parties of the type the Liquor Control Board has in mind.

Costly Opposition

(Ottawa Citizen)

Premier Duplessis of Quebec scorned hypocrisy when explaining to the Legislature why Jehovah Witnesses in Quebec cannot have a newspaper licensed by the province, but must publish the literature, its self and charge tolls. By electing an opposition candidate, the province of Quebec proved the municipality had shown they wanted nothing from this administration. Seldom is political discrimination admitted so bluntly as that. Seldom does one statute as a self-proclaimed crusader for totalitarian forces. He himself seems to hanker for a one-party system.

Greeks Had a Word

(Boston Traveler)

If you take the word "idiot," which is from the Greek, you have the Greek "ídiotes." According to the Greeks, the "idiotes" was a man who did no voting. This makes just as much sense today as it did in the days of ancient Sparta. A citizen who does not use his right to vote is an idiot.

(Fort Arthur News-Chronicle)

With all this talk about the price for Canadian farmers, a question arises as to whether the sport news should now appear on the financial page.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THREE LITTLE BRADY BABES

I wrote you a year ago about my three Brady babies, writes a mother who now seeks advice about a problem which does not belong in a health column. The Brady babies, says their mother, gaily wade in mud puddles and slush in drafts with scanty clothing and disappoint the neighbors by not getting pneumonia or other illness.

So, hum. As long as even a few people harbor the nineteenth century notions such neighbors have about "exposure" to cold and damp, the indiscriminate spread of the respiratory infections will keep most of the doctors busy most of the time.

Three fourths of all the illness attended by doctors is directly or indirectly due to respiratory infection, and that includes a good deal of nose, throat, ear and chest surgery and the whole subject of appendectomies.

It stands to reason that if I think you think what I'm coming down with is "just a cold," I will be less conscientious about not giving it to you than I would be about giving you a case of typhoid.

While serving in the Marines on Guam, Corporal Chris Christensen, advanced to two Jims in the month of February. On the 28th, on the 10th when the temperature was around 100 and followed abruptly, he landed 10 days later in a temperature equivalent to Boston's February ample to me—my friends, teachers and parents. The idea that anyone owed me anything was put out of my mind. I felt I owed them something, for being here, with so many blessings and opportunities that were mine, and I appreciated and enjoyed them.

The influence of others has always been the controlling factor in the rise and success of those who have stood apart as useful human beings. Knowing newspaper publishers as I do, I have been inspired to note that many a one once sold the newspaper and later published, was once a newsboy for that paper. Those in the habit of reading that newspaper from the newsboy contributed to his later success.

Many have contributed to our success and happiness are so numerous we could not possibly make an estimate of the number. Every day of our lives someone helps to make us what we are! And it is a pleasant thought that we help to make others, in a way and manner that we never suspect. Wonderful! How delicious! We are "other-made," but are not a medium.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SO-CALLED "SELF MADE"

There are those who like to boast that they are self-made. None of us is self-made! We are largely made through the example and help of others. Even the almost miraculous softness that is found in Christmas and church—only then will Christmas have really come.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

A CHRISTIAN SOLDIER

We often hear the expression, "I would give my eyes" for this or that. I have a friend who actually gave his eyes. The Reverend Lucius Hopkins Miller, awhile more than 80 years now, told us the story of why he had some practically blind.

Thirty years ago when he was a missionary in China, he undertook a concordance of the Scriptures in Chinese. A concordance is a book which enables one to find any verse in the Bible immediately. Dr. Miller's task was to write such

25th Brigade Out for Rest During November

By BILL ROSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (CP)—Censorship now permits disclosure of the fact that it was "restful" November for the Canadians here.

After 81 days of constant enemy shelling, the 25th Canadian Infantry Brigade was pulled out of the line Nov. 1 to relax from the strain.

The time, however, was not spent idly.

There were two or three days of complete rest and parties to enable the men to blow off steam.

Then the brigade commander, Brig. P. P. Bogert of Ottawa, began preparing his soldiers for their next session in the line.

New Training

There was on individual training rather than on brigade up on tactics. In today's static war, essentially one of fixed positions with only raids, patrols and ambushes to break the monotony, the emphasis has returned to the individual soldier.

Bogert insisted that the men relearn how to break down and clean their weapons in the dark, to correct machine-gun stoppages and get them firing again in the cold, and to brush up on the 1,001 things the individual soldier must know how to do when he's fighting on his own.

Analyzing with his staff the lessons of the Oct. 23 "Battle of Gibraltar Spur," when the 1st battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment lost and recaptured a company position, Bogert has drawn many lessons. The brigade was taught them during November. Others

Several may not be disclosed but others are obvious and have become Canadian practice. Enemy shelling so disorganized the RCR position Oct. 25, and so scattered its ammunition reserves that the men could only fight until the ammunition in their weapons was exhausted.

Bogert has ordered that henceforth riflemen always carry a bandolier of ammunition around their waists, and machine-gunners carry pouches of ammo over their shoulders.

He has devised new tunneling techniques enabling men to shelter tactically during barrages and still be in position to fight instantly the barrage lifts.

Positions Strafed

SEOUL (AP) — Allied planes swept north of the battle line in freezing weather early today and bombed and strafed Communist positions from the western front to the Hasju peninsula on the east coast.

On the ground, Allied and Communist riflemen traded small arms and hand grenade fire in light contacts along the front as temperatures skidded below zero and snow fell in the west.

Sask. Soldier, 22, Is Awarded M.M.

OTTAWA (CP)—A fighting soldier who saved the lives of numerous comrades in two days of almost continuous enemy shelling has been awarded the Military Medal for his bravery.

The Canada Gazette disclosed the award to Tr. Roy Charles Stevenson, 22-year-old native of Viscour, Sask., whose wife lives in Calgary. His deeds were reported last month by Bill Boss, Canadian Press staff writer with the 25th brigade.

The citation says Tr. Stevenson, a member of the Lord Strathcona's Horse armored regiment, first exposed himself on the top of his tank to bring machine-gun fire to bear on an enemy position that had pinned down a Canadian infantry patrol at night. He did this while the tank was under intense mortar fire.

A fragment of a shell struck him and he had it removed. Another shell knocked him off the tank. But he went on firing until the patrol was saved.

Next day intense fire was taking a toll of infantry soldiers around the tank and Tr. Stevenson saw that there weren't enough stretchers. He climbed out of the tank, ran to a bunker to get a stretcher he knew was there and then went up and down the hill removing the wounded until he was ordered back into the tank.

PLAN APPROVED

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The Argentine Senate on Sunday gave unanimous and final approval to the government's second five-year plan and sent the measure to President Peron for signature. The plan is intended to bolster the country's industrial and agricultural economy.

Drama Critic Augustus Bridle Dies of Injuries

TORONTO (CP) — Augustus Bridle, 83, art, music and drama critic of the Toronto Daily Star for many years, died Sunday of injuries suffered in a traffic accident.

He suffered head and face bruises when he was knocked down by a truck Nov. 19 while crossing Bloor treet East and had been in hospital since. An autopsy will be held to determine cause of the death.

Widely known as a critic and author, Mr. Bridle had a unique skeletal style of writing, characterized by tight editing, brevity and omission of articles. He used words often invented by himself, to express the impression a production had made on him.

Mr. Bridle, born in Dorset, England in 1869, was educated in England and after he came to Canada attended public school at Deailtown, Ont. After graduating from Chatham Collegiate Institute, he went to the University of Toronto. Taught School

He taught school for a time and then became a newspaper writer. He was successively employed by the Toronto Herald, the Toronto News, the Edmonton Bulletin—the Herald now is the Bronze-Herald and the other papers no longer exist—and other publications. In 1923 he became a book reviewer and film and drama editor for the Star.

Until about six weeks ago, he contributed a regular weekly art and music column to the Star.

He long had been interested in choir work. He was choir leader at Blenheim, Ont., for several years, at Edmonton from 1900 to 1901 and at Stratford from 1901 to 1903.

Mr. Bridle presented the first Canadian stage production of carols at Massey Hall in 1922.

A series of 34 character sketches of Canadians prominent a generation ago entitled "Sons of Canada," was written by Mr. Bridle and published in 1917. A second work, "Masques of Ottawa," was printed in 1931. He was author of a novel, "Hannen," published in 1925.

OLD CHURCH BURNS

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Fire Sunday destroyed St. George's church, one of the oldest Roman Catholic edifices in the city, with a loss unofficially estimated at several hundred thousand dollars.

Three Persons Killed

BRUNSWICK, Germany (AP) —Three persons were killed and 15 were injured today, when a passenger and freight train collided head-on in heavy fog between Seesen and Dernsburg in the British zone, railroad officials reported.

Those killed were the freight engineer and fireman, and a postal clerk of the passenger train.

Several among the injured were listed as critical.

Behind Schedule, Freighter Battles Storm in Pacific

VANCOUVER (CP) — On the day she was scheduled to arrive in Vancouver, the freighter Skeena cove still battles a savage storm far out in the Pacific.

Winds continuing unabated at 60 miles an hour or more slammed at the freighter today as she wallowed 1,200 miles off the coast with a broken rudder.

The weather office said the 10,000-ton Canadian Pacific Steamships freighter will be in the storm "for quite a while yet."

Last reports placed the ocean tug Island Sovereign about 500 miles of the crippled vessel. The Island Sovereign is expected to reach the Maplecove late Tuesday or early Wednesday and shortly after begin the long tow back to Vancouver.

The Maplecove's rudder broke Thursday. It snapped again Saturday after temporary repairs enabled the vessel to navigate 60 miles closer to home on her return voyage from the Orient.

The Maplecove is under command of Capt. R. A. Leicester of Burnaby, B. C., and carries 65 crew members.

FELT PROBLEM

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Robbers escaped with 125 pelts valued at $4,000 from a Three Tuns, Pa., mink farm Sunday, but the operator of the farm says they may turn out to be a problem. Owner Morton Gittelman said the minks had just been killed and were not completely processed. Unless the robbers have adequate facilities for treating the skins, he added, they will soon spoil.

Three Arrested After Eluding Police Ambush

TORONTO (CP)—A bullet-riddled stolen wagon which escaped a police ambush at Lindsay Saturday night was stopped by a suburban Scarborough police cruiser Sunday.

It was found to contain a quantity of nitro-glycerin and detonators.

Three Toronto men, Albert J. Burton, 35, Joseph Ross, 34, and Joseph Bushman, 48, were arrested on a charge of possessing explosives.

The police ambush at Lindsay, 21 miles west of Peterborough, was set up after youths reported that two men left an auto to bury a sack near a hydro pole. The sack contained two revolvers.

While police waited, a station wagon pulled up and two men got out. One of them kicked the dirt and yelled: "they are not here."

A police roadblock jumped out from behind a bush but both men fled in the vehicle.

DEER RUN AMOK

EPPING FOREST, Eng. (AP) — A large stag Sunday night led a charge of 25 deer against an automobile on Epping new road and overturned the car over an embankment. Two occupants of the small vehicle, Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Coe, were injured.

CASUALTY LIST

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States defense department today identified 62 Korean war casualties in a new list that reported 23 dead, 33 wounded, two missing and four injured.

U.N. Denies Reports

PUSAN, Korea (AP)—The UN command today denied reports carried in some Korean newspapers that negotiations are under way to transfer control of Communist prisoners of war from United Nations forces to the Republic of Korea.

Maj.-Gen. Thomas W. Herren, chief of staff of the Korean communications zone which has immediate jurisdiction over POW's, said he asked Gen. Shin Pae Yung, South Korean defence minister, for a statement on the published reports.

Herren said also "I am having my people investigate to see where this report originated."

Six Plaintiffs Get Total of $12,634 In Damage Suit

KITCHENER (CP)—Six plaintiffs were awarded a total of $12,634 damages by Mr. Justice J. King Saturday in a Supreme Court hearing on an accident July 22, 1950, in which six persons were injured.

Negligence was apportioned two-thirds to Gordon Howling of New Dundee and one-third to Norbert Cole of Kitchener.

Damages awarded to three of the plaintiffs, Mr. and Mrs. Cole, and Mrs. Gordon Becker of Kitchener, total $9,537. The defendants in this action were Gordon Howling as driver and Manton Howling as owner of the car.

The other three plaintiffs, Calvin Holtzhauer of Roseville and Mrs. Jean Linn and Mrs. Elizabeth Schultz of Preston, were awarded a total of $2,697. The defendant was Norbert Cole.

Manton Howling, in a counter claim against Cole for damage to his car, was awarded $358, Gordon Howling was awarded $167 for damage to a suit.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

During the Yuletide festivities many visitors will be coming to the city, and many residents leaving to spend Christmas with relatives and friends in other places. The social editor would appreciate receiving personals of these events, either by mail or by telephone (4644). This social editor wishes also to correct a report that she is free for personals. Announcements of engagements, marriages, and "At Homes", only are charged a fee.

Mr. Donald P. Henderson and Mrs. Henderson, of Ottawa, are spending the Christmas week guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. White and Mrs. A. Henderson.

Miss Helen Pitt, 254 Coleman Street, is a patient in Bellefield General Hospital, following a recent appendectomy.

Mr. Henry Marquis has transferred to the Montreal branch of Northern Electric.

Mrs. Florences M. Lovering, of Mackay School, Montreal, spending the Christmas holidays at her home, 228 1-2 Front St.

Mrs. George Conners, R.R. 6, Belleville, is in Toronto, the guest of her son-in-law, Dr. Ross Hamilton, for the holiday season.

Weddings

NEWMAN—SAMMENSON

A pretty wedding ceremony was solemnized at Somerset United Church parsonage, when Gladys Ena Roberts, only daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sargisson, Belleville, became the bride of Lawrence Melvin Newman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Newman, of Harriston, Rev. A. L. Borland officiated.

The bride was charming in her floor-length bridal gown, of ivory satin with fitted bodice, topped with a net yoke, outlined with seed flowers, and buttoned down the back to the waist; the long, off-the-shoulder sleeves, which came to lily-points over the hands, were trimmed with lace flowers. Her gathered skirt fell gracefully into a slight train.

Her fingertip bridal veil was caught by a satin bridal crown, encrusted with seed pearls. She wore silver slippers and rhinestone necklace and earrings, and carried a classic bouquet of Bettchen roses tied with white lacelon ribbon.

Miss Yvonne Kellar, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing a floor-length gown of blue net over taffeta, with net yoke, and long off-the-shoulder sleeves, ending in points over the hands. Her fingertip veil was caught with a halo of blue flowers. She wore gold slippers, and carried a classic bouquet of Briarcliffe roses tied with white lacelon ribbon.

Mr. Clifford Newman, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

After the ceremony, a wedding supper was served by Misses Norma Kerr, Lorraine Dunbar, Ada Saumbaur and Marie Kerr, at the Legion Hall, to about 40 relatives of the bride and bridegroom. The hall was nicely decorated with pink and white streamers and white bells and the tables with pink and white roses, and a three-tier wedding cake.

In the evening, a reception was held in the Community Hall, where the bride's mother, received, in navy sheer, with black accessories, and corsage of pink roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore navy crepe and lace, with black accessories, and corsage of pink roses.

The bride and bridegroom received many beautiful and costly gifts.

The bride's gift to her bridegroom was luggage; to her bridesmaid and waitress, cameo jewellery. The bridegroom's gift to his bride, a chest of silverware, to the groomsman, gold cuff links and tie clip.

For the wedding trip to Toronto and other points, the bride chose a grey wool jersey dress trimmed with black velvet, and black and grey accessories.

Out-of-town guests were present from Belleville, Harriston, Owen Sound, Tara, Bethany, Hamburn, West Guilford, Eldorado and Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Newman will reside at Belleville.

CUNNINGHAM—SAMBER

Some on Saturday afternoon, November 29, in the United Church parsonage in Peterborough, Rev. J. Matthews united in marriage, Miss Doris Bamber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bamber, of Frankford, and Mr. George Cunningham, son of Mr. John Cunningham, of Ottawa and the late Mrs. Cunningham.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length blue net dress, and carrying a bouquet of pink and yellow roses.

Society May Soon Welcome Another Member Royal Family

LONDON (AP) — High society here may soon welcome another member of the royal family.

She is Alexandra Helen Elizabeth Olga Christabel, daughter of the Duchess of Kent and first cousin to the Queen and Princess Margaret.

Alex, as she is inevitably called, will be 16 on Christmas Day.

By the calculations of British society, at 16 it is high time for a young lady to emerge as a bright light. Alexandra already has begun to emerge.

She has been a cover girl. Picture Post, a fancy weekly magazine with a big circulation, has raved the misty, blue-eyed, fair-haired girl on the cover in a color photograph late in November.

She has appeared in several U.S. fashion and society magazines as well as continental publications, but until the last three or four months she has attracted little notice outside higher London circles.

The slim, long - legged young lady attends exclusive Heathfield school in Ascot.

Her home is with her mother, the Duchess, and her two brothers at a southern England country house, Nutwood, which indicates into an English lady. She still rides and hunts and that does not seem to bother London and its society.

Alexandra was first mentioned as a forthcoming social leader and as a competitor for Princess Margaret Rose years ago in another London paper. The paper predicted she would put Margaret a good race.

Alexandra and Margaret, who is 22, are similar in many respects, both in appearance and temperament.

Both are prankisters, witty and extroverted. Each loves to mimic and dance. Both ride often and each is an amateur historian. Both are fond of both girls.

One of the main differences between them is that Alexandra is fairly tall while Margaret is short.

The groomsman was a cousin of the bridegroom from Arnprior, Ontario.

Following the wedding ceremony, a reception was held in the King George Hotel, Peterborough, with the bride and her receiving in a street length dress of royal blue, and wearing a corsage of red roses.

After the reception, a dance was held in the Club Aragon in Peterborough. The happy couple left on a week's honeymoon in New York City. The bride wore for travelling, a navy velvet dress with black accessories, and a street length white coat with corsage of red roses. They will reside in Peterborough. Guests were present from Ottawa, Arnprior and Frankford.

Women's Activities

CANNINGTON W.M.S.

Canninton W.M.S. held its Christmas meeting at the home of Mrs. H. Eggleton with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. J. Williams, opened the meeting. A welcome was extended to the visitors and members.

Business followed and correspondence read.

Mrs. C. Mills was called upon and presented Mrs. Harry Brenton with a Life membership on her burial.

The worship service was taken from the Missionary Monthly, the theme "Christmas, the Season of Birth and Re-birth." Hymn "Christian Awake, Salute the Happy Morn", opened the service followed by Scripture reading by Mrs. W. Brenton, Mrs. Ewing, Mrs. Bateman and Mrs. D. Brenton. The meditation followed. Mrs. F. Furmidges favored with a lovely Christmas solo.

Mrs. W. D. Grant, vice-president of Belleville East Section, and guest speaker for the afternoon was introduced by Mrs. C. Brenton. Mrs. Grant told about the different kinds of gifts - birthday gift, wedding gift, anniversary gift but the most outstanding gift of all, was the gift of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world, who died that all may have eternal life. Mrs. Grant also told a beautiful Christmas story which was in keeping with the Christmas Spirit.

Mrs. C. Mills, on behalf of the ladies present, thanked Mrs. Grant for her Christmas message and Rev. W. R. Merrick tendered appreciation and closed the meeting.

The hostess and her helpers served refreshments and a social half-hour was spent.

GET TERMS IN PEN

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Three-year terms in penitentiary were imposed Saturday on William Titchener, 22, and Gordon Copeland, 25, for stealing a safe containing money from a drug store Nov. 4. The safe and its contents were valued at $500 altogether. Similarly charged, Donald Titchener, 19-year-old brother of William, was given nine months determinate and nine months indeterminate in reformatory.

Doubting Prince Takes no Chance On Going Short

LONDON (AP)—A crisis is reported building up in Buckingham Palace: Prince Charles is beginning to have his doubts about Santa Claus.

Word from the palace is that the four-year-old heir to the throne is beginning to ask some awkward questions. His grandmother was said to have emerged from one recent question-and-answer session with the word: "This is the last Christmas Charles will believe in Santa Claus."

Nevertheless, taking no chances, Charles has sent off a full list of requests to the north pole.

Queen's First Broadcast of Reign One More Feminine Achievement

By MURREL NARRAWAY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—When the Queen makes the first broadcast of her reign in Christmas Day message across the world, it will be one more feminine achievement in an age where women have won increasing recognition.

As the first Queen in British history to broadcast on Christmas Day it is certainly startled her grandfather George V—Elizabeth as woman, mother and Queen will give a message of special significance to her own sex everywhere.

With a predominant interest in fluence adding appeal to many royal events, women in Britain and Asia and a new year drew to a close, increasing attention was devoted to Princess Alexandra, daughter of the Duchess of Kent who will be 16 on Christmas Day, held to launch her mother's line of dress, Alexandra will add to the fashion interest of many coming months.

Meanwhile, the Queen showed in 1952 that she also can command fashion interest. Early in December at a dinner for Commonwealth prime ministers she wore a white lace crinoline, its three-tier embroidered skirt ending in scalloped edging. This had the same simple, commanding distance that made her stand out at this year's royal film performance. Then she wore a tailored gown of slipper satin, with black back, white front, halter neckline and deep revers.

On the food front, it was a fairly encouraging year for women. Tea is off the ration for the first time since rationing started in January, 1940, and it is expected eggs will soon return to the free market.

The ending of government control on the price and quality of furniture, announced in December, added to a feeling of greater freedom. Similar relaxation was noted in the clothing and textile scheme last March and clothing prices now are more competitive.

Among the notable social events of the year was the Aug. 14 wedding of Anthony Eden, Britain's foreign secretary. His bride was 32-year-old Clarissa Churchill, niece of the prime minister.

A ceremony with all the trimmings—top hats, Rolls Royces, flower, mixes and gardenias—was the Oct. 23 wedding of Scotland's Lord Ogilvie to American millionairess Virginia Ryan. It was attended by Princess Margaret and Queen Mother Elizabeth.

No. 1 Bachelor Girl

One of the favorite pastimes of women readers—picking a beau for Princess Margaret—had some of its excitement during the year.

Lord Ogilvie was struck off. Another young man frequently mentioned as a contender, Sir Karl of Dalkeith, announced his engagement in August. He is to marry Jane McNeill, a former model.

Margaret remains Britain's No. 1 bachelor girl. Since her father's death Princess Margaret has spent much of her time with her mother. Her night club and theatre outings have been few and given no indication of coming favorites.

FREE METHODIST W.M.S.

Marmora — The Women's Missionary Society of the Free Methodist Church held their Christmas service recently.

The vice president, Mrs. Stewart Hardy, opened the meeting with the singing of a Christmas carol. Each of the members present chose one of the South African missionaries as a prayer partner.

Mrs. Russell Wells read two interesting letters from Carrie Hazzard telling of her visit to Nombay and Calcutta. Wilbert Jones gave a talk from the study book on "South Africa."

Mrs. Berry presented a felt-o-gram study on "The Star." Beverly Border contributed a poem. Mrs. Ritchie Wells read a short reading "How Far is it to Bethlehem?"

9 DIE IN CRASH

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—A Syrian Airways Dakota plane rammed into a mountain near Mt. Hermon Sunday, killing nine of the 15 persons aboard. The plane was on a fact weather, from Damascus to Aleppo.

PLANE HITS MOUNTAIN

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Dutch military catalina flying boat with nine persons aboard crashed on a mountain slope in north Lebanon, the Lebanese civil aviation directorate announced. All nine were taken to a hospital in Tripoli.

Readers' Question Column

By Mary Moore

NOTE: The order of things is reversed this week because this is a special week. The day after Christmas look for a knock-out of a recipe for using leftover turkey. And on Saturday I will have a New Year's Eve Buffet Menu for you.

So—look and tomorrow this space is for readers' letters and my answers which usually take up all of Friday's and Saturday's allotment.

QUESTION:

I would like your measurements and method for making coffee for about 35 people.—Phyllis B.

ANSWER:

COFFEE FOR 25

Two cups fine grind coffee, 4 quarts water. Tie the coffee in triple cheesecloth bag, leaving plenty of room for coffee to swell. Let stand for several hours. Bring slowly to boiling point and boil 4 minutes. Remove the bag and keep coffee just below boiling, for serving. Serves 25.

QUESTION:

Last year at a club Christmas dinner each place was marked with a little edible Christmas tree—an inverted ice cream cone —frosted and popcorn coated. Have you the recipe for the icing used to make the popcorn adhere? Also do you have recipe for a party type dessert using slices of jelly roll (used to line the mold) filled with gelatine custard and cherry and whipped cream garnish.—Ethel M. W.

ANSWER:

You simply roll the cones in melted semi-sweet chocolate (melted over steaming water—not boiling) or in green-tinted melted fondant or in green-tinted butter icing. The popcorn will adhere to any of these when they are cold and set. Did you think of using silver dragees instead of popcorn for some of your cones?

For the Green-tinted Butter Icing cream 1-4 cup butter until very light, then slowly beat in 2 cups sifted icing sugar, adding 2 or 3 teaspoons cream as you beat, and a few drops of hot water to make it smooth enough to roll the cones in. Add green vegetable coloring to a shade that pleases you.

JELLY ROLL CHARLOTTE

(A fine Christmas dessert)

One jelly roll, 3 tablespoons gelatin, 1-3 cup cold water, 2 cups evaporated milk diluted with 1-3 cup cold water, 4 eggs, yolks and whites separated, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-4 cup whole maraschino cherries, cream for whipping, or make a jelly roll with red-colored filling. Soak the gelatin in the cold water for five minutes. Scald the milk. Mix together the egg yolks and 3-4 cup of the sugar and beat well then stir the hot milk into them, and return to top of double boiler and stir over boiling water until mixture will coat spoon. Remove from heat and stir in the soaked gelatin until dissolved. Cool. When it begins to thicken stir in remaining 1-3 cup sugar and the stiffly beaten egg whites carefully—sugar and egg whites being beaten together. Add vanilla. Add a few chopped maraschino cherries if you wish. Line sides and bottom of straight or slope-sided mold with slices of jelly roll. Pour in half of the custard mixture. Arrange a layer of jelly roll slices over it. Pour in remaining custard. Chill until firm. Turn out on silver tray or fancy large plate Pile whipped cream around log edge and make a border of whipped cream at bottom—using icing tube. Garnish centre and border with clusters of whole cherries — and if you wish, garnish these clusters with "leaves" of citron peel.

QUESTION:

Please advise method of frying pork and lamb chops? Should lid be on heavy frying pan. What temperature?—E. Morrow.

ANSWER:

If you have a broiler, heat it very hot and broil chops always. Both lamb and pork chops must be cooked through. My best method for pork chops is as follows:

BREADED BAKED PORK CHOPS

Have bread or cracker crumbs so fine you could sift them. Dip your pork (or lamb) chops in them, then in beaten egg to which you have added 1 tablespoon water, then in crumbs again. Place on baking dish. Sprinkle generously with salt, pepper, and paprika, and bake for 1 hour at 375 deg. Fahr. To make lovely served with baked sliced apple halves. If keeps the chops moist but thoroughly cooks the fat and gives a delicious crisp brown crust.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Beauty at Your Fingertips.

What about your hands, those faithful and willing servants that are always in the foreground to express your personality? They are not lovely because of their shape and size alone, but because they are soft, white and smooth, with satin pearly groomed.

What must be done to keep them in perfect trim? Use a soothing lotion, of course. But even more important is protection. Harsh cleaning agents are the enemy of pretty hands. If you are a hard-working housewife, wear rubber gloves. If you don't, your nails will suffer and your hands, they will thicken, may take on ridges, and will lose their delicate, shell-like appearance. When cleaning silver or furniture, wear cotton gloves.

Like the complexion, the hands and nails are benefitted by free applications of a soothing cream. Lotioning isn't enough, because it does not supply a substitute for the natural oil that is constantly being removed by soap and water.

When you have anointed your sacred complexion before slipping in between the sheets at night, give the leavings to your hands and nails. That practice, continued faithfully, will work-

SCOHARIE

Relative, Friends Honor Young Couple

SCOHARIE — A large crowd of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Theodore Foster recently, to tender a community shower for Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hanna (nee Shirley Foster).

The evening was spent in social chat, two tables of crokinole and music on piano accordion by Mrs. William McWilliam. Mrs. William McGee read an address to the newlyweds and Mary MacCauley and Paul Hanna carried in the decorated basket of gifts. This was filled several times and many lovely gifts were received by Shirley and Ronald who thanked their friends for their kindness. Refreshments were served by a number of young people, including a generous supply of ice cream furnished by the host. The guests departed leaving their best wishes with Shirley and Ronald.

George Grosse, Brantford, spent a recent week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Grosse and brother, Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Foster spent several days last week in Toronto with Mrs. Ronald Foster and little daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Jandrew and Brenda were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stone. Mrs. Jandrew and Brenda also spent a couple of days last week with her parents while Mr. Jandrew attended an ice cream makers' convention in Toronto.

Mr. Theodore Foster, Miss Norma Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Foster; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hanna; Mr. Keith Foster; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Foster and Ross attended the funeral of the late Harold Ruff at Picton on Saturday.

Ross Foster was a guest at the wedding reception at Maple Inn for Mr. and Mrs. Colin Hagerman (nee Lois Calnan).

Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Foster and Darlene were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Foster, East Lake.

Mrs. Harold Walters, Bloomfield, was hostess for the Christmas meeting of the Live Women's Circle. A large number were in attendance and a pleasant afternoon enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Foster were Thursday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Foster.

Mr. John Lloyd of Simpson's, Toronto, was a week-end guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lloyd.

Craftsman Ted Lloyd, Camp Borden, is enjoying a few weeks' holidays with his wife and friends here.

Mrs. Ronald Foster and little daughters of Toronto are expected to spent the Christmas season with her parents and relatives here.

4TH THURLOW

4TH THURLOW — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Treverton and Billie were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Eggleton, 3rd line.

Rev. W. R. Merrick took dinner on Sunday at the Cooley and Treverton home.

Several from this line attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Pearl Sheffield on Monday afternoon. Sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Cole and family spent Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Henry Cooke, Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Tunmon, Wayne and Dianne spent Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Treverton.

The 4th line school held its Christmas concert on Tuesday evening under the direction of the teacher, Miss Donna Phillips. The 3rd line school concert was held the same evening in charge of Miss Marjorie Ellerbeck. A fine program and a good attendance was reported at both schools.

WINTER SETS IN

NEW YORK (AP) — Today is autumn's last full 1952 day before bowing out until next year. Winter officially takes over at 4.44 p.m.

WALLBRIDGE

Wallbridge — Glad to report Mrs. Dorothy Wannamaker, who has been ill for the past month has returned to her home.

Mrs. R. Logan and son, Francis, of Hamilton, and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Tucker, of Belleville, were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris.

A number on the 5th. concession are having their homes wired for telephones.

Little Nancy Phillips is confined to her home under the doctor's care with pneumonia. Her friends and her little school chums wish her a speedy recovery.

On Tuesday evening the Orange Hall was filled to the doors with nearly every home represented to attend the annual Christmas concert put on by the teacher, Mrs. George Rikley and her pupils and Miss Pitman, as pianist, for the evening. Credit is due to all as the program was enjoyed. At the end of the program Santa Claus came bounding in with his Merry Christmas bells ringing and eager little faces were lit up with glee when he made his appearance and so Santa and the older children distributed presents to young and old. A very happy time was spent. The proceeds of the evening were $41.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Pound and baby Dale were Wednesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. Harris.

Cheese factory meeting was held in the Orange Hall on Wednesday with a good number of farmers attending, and as usual buns, cheese and coffee served at noon. Mr. Carleton is the cheese maker for next year and much praise was given to Mr. and Mrs. Carleton for the fine work they have done the past season.

TAKING NO CHANCES

KENILWORTH, England (CP)— Turkey breeder Maj. John Hibbert put an unusual guard over this year's Christmas stock. Three pedigreed Jersey bulls were spaced at intervals around his farm. The steers also bar a wide selection of Sunday visitors.

Don't let an ACCIDENT spoil your Holiday!

'Christmas and The New Year again usher in a season of festivity and good fellowship.

As in the past it will also be marked by increased dangers — more traffic, more hours of darkness, slippery roads, and holiday haste and impatience.

I appeal to Ontario citizens to overcome these added hazards by greater care and common sense when walking or driving.

Don't let an accident spoil holiday happiness for yourself or for others.

RECIPE for a Merry Christmas

from your DOMINION STORE

Take the crisp cold of a December night, add two generous parts of snow, stir in air so clear it tinkles.

Into a generous heart, mix the wonder of a little girl, the sparkle of a young boy's glance, the love of parents, and set gently before the chimney side.

Add the lightest touch of a reindeer's hooves, a sprig of holly, a scent of fir.

Set the mixture to rise in the warmth of a dream of good will to men. It will be almost ready to serve when it bubbles with warmth and good feeling.

Bedeck with the light of a star set in the East, garnish with shining balls of gold, silver and red. Serve to the tune of an ancient carol in the middle of the family table.

This recipe is sufficient for all the men and women you will ever meet.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas.

A Child's Life of Jesus

"They threw palm leaves down to make a green carpet for Him."

A CHILDS LIFE OF ST

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the last books written by the late Fulton Oursler, author of such volumes as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Nell O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER X

The people loved the stories Jesus told them. They loved Him more than anybody else in the world. The rulers of the country saw how the people loved Him and how they brought Him their sick to be healed. The rulers feared the people would want to make Jesus King. They were so scared that they decided to get rid of Jesus.

It was the Passover time. That is a great holiday, and comes about our Easter time. Jesus and His friends went to Jerusalem to celebrate. Jesus was riding on a donkey just like the one Mary and Joseph had when He was a little boy. Thousands of people met Him at the gates of the city. They threw palm leaves down on the road in front of Jesus and the donkey to make a green carpet for Him and they sang to Him:

"Glory— Hosanna — Blessed is the King of Israel who comes in the name of the Lord."

The rulers were more scared than ever. They said to themselves: "The people call Him king. The people love Him. Soon they will do only what He tells them and not what we tell them. We will have to kill this Jesus."

Jesus knew their cruel thoughts. He knew something even worse. He knew that one of His own twelve friends would leave Him and help the cruel rulers to kill Him.

And at the same time Jesus said: "I shall leave you, but I shall return to you."

They did not know what He meant but later they found out.

On Thursday night, Jesus sent all twelve to the upper room of a house in Jerusalem. They sat there and waited for Him. While they waited for Him they talked; soon they had an argument. What do you suppose they were arguing about? Who would sit nearest to Jesus! That was what each one wanted: to sit nearest to Jesus.

When Jesus opened the door and saw what a quarrel was going on He was sad. He took a bowl of water and a towel. One by one He washed the feet of the twelve. That was to show them how wrong it was to want to be greater than others. Jesus is the Son of God. He is truly God as well as truly man, but He washed the feet of His friends. The person who does most to help others is nearest to the Son of God.

Then Jesus sat down at a long table. All the twelve sat with Him. This was their Last Supper together. Jesus told them that they would never eat together again. His friends turned pale. Why did this have to be the Last Supper? What was going to happen?

Jesus told them He was going to be killed. Who would kill Him? Rulers in Jerusalem who were afraid of Him. They wanted to catch Him that night. But these rulers did not know where Jesus stayed at night. One of the twelve friends, Jesus said, would tell His enemies where to look for Him.

The friends began to ask:

"Lord, is it I?"

"Do you mean me?"

"Who is it, Lord?"

Only Judas said nothing. He was the twelfth and the weakest. He sat with one hand on the table. And Jesus said:

"The hand of him who will betray me is on the table."

The face of Judas turned very red first and then pale. He jumped up and ran out of the room.

Tomorrow: Jesus is betrayed by Judas.

Christmas Concert

ST. JOHN'S ANGLICAN CHURCH S.S.

Madoc — The Sunday Schools of St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc, and Bannockburn recently held their annual Christmas party in the Orange Hall, Madoc, which was filled to capacity with children and their parents.

Slides were shown on the "Life of Christ" and carol singing, with Mrs. Fred Pyear at the piano, gave the children an evening of entertainment. Rev. T. Goode extended a welcome to all in attendance and congratulated the Sunday Schools represented, on the splendid work they were doing, having made such wonderful progress through the recent years.

The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion and a gaily lighted Christmas tree, from which Santa presented gifts, candy, nuts and fruit all added to the spirit of the Christmas season.

Gifts were presented to over a 100 children. Special prizes in connection with Sunday School attendance were also presented: Nancy Griffin for two years' perfect attendance, Judy Whiteman for one year attendance. Other attendance prizes were given to Doug Danford, Anne Cooke, Neil Myles and Darlene Simpson.

Following the entertainment most bountiful refreshments were served by the ladies of the parish.

Williams, Allen Schools

Rawdon—On Thursday evening Mount Pleasant - Rawdon United Church hall was filled to capacity with folks from the two school sections and a large number of visitors from other points.

Mrs Russell Pyear and 20 pupils of the Williams School and Miss L. Port with 16 pupils of the Allen School, presented a concert of interest and variety. Festive decorations and lighted tree gave a seasonable atmosphere with the stage decorated for the occasion.

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver presided at the piano and Mr. Walter Wrightman manipulated the curtain.

Rev. R. R. Bonsteel was chairman for the occasion and extended a hearty welcome to all and two hours later, he voiced thanks on behalf of the audience to those who had made the concert a success.

Six Junior pupils of the Williams School gave a Christmas exercise in recitation style and the eight history of the Allen School sang a nice selection.

Ralph Reid recited "A present for Dad," and Gail Jeffs and Faye Davis sang "Ship Ahoy". Humorous Play

The Allen School pupils gave a humorous play entitled "Friendly Advice," with Roger Smith introducing the characters, Malcolm Reid, Eleanor Smith, Marilyn McConnell, David Mudd, Lois McConnell and Raeburn Scott.

Twelve Juniors from the Williams School sang "Sorry Eli," Lyle Couch recited "My Little Bedroom," and Dianne McAdam recited "I Saved My Cake For Santa."

Six boys from the Allen School sang "Little Red School House."

The Williams School gave a playette, "Slight Misunderstanding" with parts taken by Marie Simpson, Gail Jeffs, Jack Bailey, Bill Bailey and Paul Jeffs. Piano solos were given by Ina Scott and Eleanor Smith.

Four boys and four girls weaving evening gowns presented an intricate drill which was very pretty. The girls quartet, Lois McConnell, Marilyn McConnell, Ina Scott and Eleanor Smith sang "Calmi Mick," and "Ring Out Sweet Bells of Christmas," and Calvin Sharpe recited "Wouldn't it be Funny."

The pupils of the Williams School sang "Twas the Night Before Christmas," Mary Sleep recited "I Hate a Tattle Tale," and Gail Scott gave a selection entitled "Shop Early."

Three Scenes Play.

A play in three scenes, "Katie at the Bat," was given by six pupils of the Allen School with Malcolm Reid introducing the cast of David Polis, Ina Scott, Roger Smith, Lois McConnell and Eleanor Smith. At last Dad got appreciation from his family.

The closing number was a pageant by the Williams School pupils, "Let us Adore Him," Marie Simpson was the narrator and the Christmas Story was completets with Joseph, Mary, The Shepherds, Wisemen and Angels. A group of children sang various carols throughout the scenes as the Christmas Story was read and enacted. This was a splendid climax to a fine program.

Following the "Queen", Santa arrived with candy for all after which a large array of gifts was distributed.

The concert was well received and applauded and the teachers are to be commended for their efforts.

FIRE DESTROYS OUSE

OWEN SOUND (CP)—Fire early Sunday destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell MacDonald on the East Bay Shore road. The MacDonalds and their three children escaped unhurt. Christmas presents they had bought were set with all their other possessions.

VOTE TO DECERTIFY

KITCHENER (CP)—Employees of the Beaver Furniture Company have voted 29 to 4 to have the International Woodworkers' Union (CIO-CCL) decertified as their bargaining agent, it was announced Sunday. The union had been certified as bargaining agent in May, 1951. Last September a vote was held which ended in a tie, but a second vote was ordered for last Friday.

ANIMALS BLESSED

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—Nearly 100 cats, dogs, rabbits, chickens and other birds sat with their owners in St. Mark's Anglican Church here Sunday for the annual "Christmas blessing of household pets." Rev. C. L. Oliver said animals were the first creatures to behold the infant Jesus and it was only right they should be included in man's homage at Christmas time.

Winning Asian-Arab Support For Korean Peace Plan Is Seen As Major Success of UN Meet

By NORMAN ALISTAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Most delegates at the strife-ridden first part of the seventh United Nations general assembly agreed as they worked towards an adjournment that it marked up only one major achievement.

That was in winning Asian-Arab support for the UN's peace plan for Korea which was approved by 54 non-Communist members after six weeks of debate. It was the first time the entire Asian-Arab group backed a resolution on Korea.

Korea could be placed on the debit side also because the Communists — Chinese, North Koreans and Soviet bloc—turned the peace deal down flatly and abusively.

The next UN step on Korea will come in the second part of the session resuming Feb. 24 under the continued presidency of L. B. Pearson, Canada's external affairs minister.

The "Asian - Arab assembly" was the name some delegates applied to this nine-week session. The group of 13 countries from Asia and the Middle East took the initiative on a variety of problems including Korea, South African racial conflict, Palestine, Tunisia, and Morocco.

India was author of the Korean peace plan after weeks of negotiation in which Canada took an important part through Pearson and Health Minist... Paul Martin, leader of the Canadian delegation.

Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky of Russia bitterly denounced the proposal as an American trick. The resolution attempted, to get around the deadlock over repatriation of war prisoners in proposing that all prisoners be sent to a demilitarized zone under neutral control where they could decide free from any pressure whether they wished to return home.

The Asian - Arab group showed sharp resentment towards the West on problems other than that of Korea.

The "colonial" problems, South Africa, Tunisia and Morocco, were also on onto the Asi... 'ly's agen'a as Asian - Arab features over strong objection from the colonial powers and some of their supporters.

On South Africa, the Asian-Arab bloc gained approval of a resolution setting up a commission to investigate racial conflict in the Union—but South Africa made clear it will not allow such a commission to investigate at first hand.

In the case of Tunisia and Morocco the Arab - Asian countries lost out on their own tough resolutions calling stiff terms for more self - government for the French protectorates, but they had the satisfaction of seeing a milder-worded resolution passed urging direct negotiations between the French and Tunisian and Moroccan authorities.

Canada approved mild resolutions on all three questions but opposed sending an investigation commission to South Africa, warning that the UN could hurt the very people it sought to help by antagonizing the government concerned.

Canadian Troops To Have Turkey For Christmas

IN KOREA (Reuters)—Commonwealth troops in Korea will eat a hefty turkey dinner with all the trimmings on Christmas Day.

This is the menu:

Shrimp cocktail, roast young turkey with stuffing " cranberry sauce, roast pork, vegetables, fruit cake, candy, nuts and beer or soft drinks.

The food is actually left over from the U.S. Thanksgiving rations. At that time U.S. forces passed some of their rations on to the Commonwealth forces. But since the Commonwealth troops, including the Canadians, did not celebrate the U.S. Thanksgiving, they decided to save the rations for Christmas.

Marooned Week, Bush Pilot Flies Plane to Safety

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP)—Bush pilot Gunnar Laurell, 38, formerly of Herrljunas, Sweden, flew his plane back to safety Saturday after being marooned for a week on the blizzard-swept sub-arctic tundra, 1,000 miles north of Winnipeg.

Laurell landed on a lake 45 miles northeast of Baker Lake Dec. 13 after overshooting the outpost in a mounting storm while hauling freight from a copper-nickel development at Ferguson Lake.

An RCAF search plane found him Friday, and fellow-pilot Gunnar Ingebrigtson flew in a supply of fuel Saturday to the desolate lake. Both then flew back to Baker Lake. An RCAF plane "flew cover" for the operation in case of trouble.

Laurell, a Swedish Air Force veteran, sat out the storm in an igloo which he built 50 feet behind his plane.

Old Hotel Gutted In $100,000 Fire

DUNDAS (CP)—The Collins hotel, believed to be the oldest hotel in Ontario, was gutted by fire late Saturday night. Unofficial loss estimates ranged as high as $100,000.

Scores of persons attending a dance in the basement ballroom had walked calmly out of the building. Several guests in upstairs rooms also escaped.

The fire, believed to have started in the kitchen, was fought by Dundas volunteer firemen and firemen from Hamilton, six miles southeast.

Separated Twins Cling to Life

The separated Brodie Siamese twins still cling tenaciously to life after an unparalleled 12 hour and 40 minute operation at the University of Illinois Research hospital in Chicago. Although still on the critical list, Rodney is reported progressing better than his brother, Roger. Roger is the twin deprived of the single main brain drainage vein when surgeons decided to give it to Rodney, the twin found most biologically fit. — Central Press Canadian.

Hoodlum Raids Public Schools; Smashes Property

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Two schools were raided Saturday night by a hoodlum who stole nothing but left a trail of malicious damage in his wake.

The entries were at Empress Avenue school and Riverview school. At Empress the intruder kicked glass out of the front and rear doors.

In both schools record players were thrown to the floor and smashed. Two typewriters were damaged at Empress.

At Riverview there was a pool of water and five dead goldfish beside the smashed aquarium.

Two Planes Land At Trenton Port In Emergency

TRENTON (CP)—Two Dakotas, one carrying 14 injured Korea veterans, made an emergency landing at the RCAF station here Sunday night. Because of fog, they were unable to land at Toronto and were sent here.

Both planes landed safely. The other Dakota was a Trans-Canada Air Lines craft with 15 passengers on a trip from Ottawa to Toronto. They all went on to Toronto by train.

The RCAF found transportation for the soldiers so that they might all be home for Christmas.

Vessel Carrying Load of Pilgrims Runs Aground

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The 12,540-ton French passenger liner Champollion went aground today about four miles south of Beirut harbor. Eye-witnesses said she was slowly breaking apart in a heavy sea.

The witnesses said the ship was listing at a 20-degree angle about 600 yards offshore, but that so far no attempt had been made to take off her passengers or cargo.

It was not immediately known how many passengers were aboard. The ship was bound from Alexandria, Egypt, to Beirut.

Reuters said the ship carried 1,500 passengers, most of them Christmas pilgrims to the holy land.

Israeli tugs were dispatched from Haifa to aid in rescue efforts, but an Israeli military spokesman said the Lebanese authorities had prohibited them from entering Lebanon's territorial waters.

Lebanon's reported prohibition presumably stemmed from the strained relations between the Arab country and her Jewish neighbor. The two countries have been in a technical state of war since the 1948 Palestine conflict.

Charge Duo With Assault

TORONTO (CP)—Donald Lane, 27, and Donald O'Reilly, 22, were charged with assault and robbery Sunday following an all-night drinking spree in a Dundas St. cafe.

Police said William Charlton of Oshawa had registered at the hotel with the two accused men. They said the trio spent the night drinking and early Sunday Charlton was slugged over the head, bound and gagged, and robbed of $30, his coat and watch.

West Diplomats Concede Reds' 'Peace Congress' Helps to Stir Colonial Unrest; Soften Europe

By RICHARD O'REGAN

VIENNA (AP)—The Communist-sponsored "Congress of the Peoples for Peace" closed Saturday. It may have looked like a flop to many in the West. But Western diplomats said they believe the Kremlin had promoted two big projects:

1. A vast new effort to break the spirit of urgency and will of Western Europe by rents the Soviet Union.

2. Development of a world-wide attempt to stir up colonial unrest, particularly in restive Africa and Asia.

The main instrument of both drives, the diplomats believe, is the "Congress of the Peoples for Peace"—a new name for the three-year-old Communist peace offensive.

Week-Long Session

Concluding a week-long session here, the congress merely reiterated demands that Soviet foreign minister Andrei Vishinsky has voiced in the United Nations. But diplomats here say that actually Russia regards the congress and the entire peace movement as a tremendous success.

"Two years ago most Western Europeans feared a Russian attack at any moment. Today, most people feel more at ease, less sure of attack, in fact, doubting it.

This change of attitude, the diplomats believe, is largely due to the constant Communist talk of peace, backed in October by Prime Minister Stalin's newest statements on the possibility of "peaceful coexistence."

The lessening of suspicion already has slowed Western European defense, ratification of the Bonn and European Defence Community treaties and the deliberations of the North Atlantic council.

Now, say the diplomats, the Kremlin obviously hopes to press for further delays through the activities of the peace congress.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

1st Belleville St. Thomas' Church

The Wolf Cubs have been working hard passing various tests towards their first and second class stars and working on Fun Achievement. Three new leaders have joined the Pack, Mrs. Jean Smith, Howard Lord and George Reaney, pld chairman of the Group Committee.

Wolf Cubs David Robinson and Dick Fuks have obtained their second stars. Ronald Adams, Dorian Robinson, Bobby Anderson, Tommy Potter and Gary Thomsine recently went up from the Pack to the Troop. The following New Chums were recently invested as Tenderpads: Wayne Gilroy, Bobby Jeffries, Stewart McAllister, John Hosang, Arthur Liddle, David Chalmers, Mac Smith, Don Stevenson, Ronald Adams, Jerry Kingston and Wayne Kingston. A successful Christmas party was held on Wednesday evening when gifts were exchanged during a visit from Santa Claus. Refreshments and moving pictures were enjoyed.

The Scout Troop has now formed a Senior Patrol consisting of Queen Scouts only. This patrol now includes: Bill Deacon, Geo. Hosang, Roy Gatland and Alan Thom. Instead of the year regular meeting the whole Troop is having a hike on December 23rd. The first Canoeman's Badge earned by the Scout Troop in recent years goes to Troop Leader Bill Deacon.

The Rover crew is busy working on its Toy Repair project. Five to six hundred toys from various troops three nights a week and is repaired and painted over 400 toys and dolls which are being turned over to the Salvation Army for distribution to needy families. Practically all the old Rovers are either assistant Scoutmasters or assistant Cubmasters in various packs and troops and are helping out wherever they are needed.

2nd Belleville Christ Church

Akela Marg Kemp and her assistants are busy with the Cubs passing tests for badges in connection with their Achievement. The Cubs are working on details for their Christmas party scheduled for Monday. The last meeting for the Pack for the year will be held on Wednesday, December 31st.

3rd Belleville St. Michael's

A welcome newcomer to the Pack is Peter Holiday a First Star Cub recently transferred from the 21st Wilson Pack. The pack suffered a loss when Billy Pennylegion (Red Brother) moved to Hamilton. Cub his family.

The Cubs are working hard on semaphore signalling and all members of the pack are working hard to become the first Second Star Cub in the pack.

A successful Christmas party was held by the cubs and their sponsored by the Ladies' Auxiliary and the group committee. The Cubs presented a Wild West melodrama entitled the "Last Lollypop". The cast included W. Finkle, M. Tatham, K. Mallory, N. Murphy, J. Clapp, M. Mulcahy, D. Pallbin, R. Jarvah and T. Kelly. Other players and parents were active behind the scenes.

After some excellent movies including the "Littlest Angel", refreshments wound up a very enjoyable party.

4th Belleville, Kiwanis

Cubmaster Al Gardiner reports that his pack held its Christmas party on December 19th and all had a most enjoyable time. Cross for inter-six competition were won by the Blue Six with Sixer Bobby Julian receiving the cress. Billy Mazza is to be invested at the next meeting. Group Committee has earned his collector's badge.

5th Belleville, Prince of Wales School

The pack has been active with several rambles. Cubmaster John Townsend reports that the program of tests and badges is progressing very well. The Christmas party was held last Thursday.

Scoutmaster Bernard Fox recently took the district preliminary leaders' training course at Bellepeil and the troop, while still in the process of re-organization, is beginning to shape up again.

6th Belleville, Tabernacle United Church

Paul Twiddy was invested at the last meeting. Cubmaster John Babiak now has three assistants helping him to run the Cub Pack with the recent addition of Malcolm McClelland. Several of the boys are working hard on their tests to see who will be the first Cub to earn the first Star.

7th Belleville, Salvation Army

Akela Anne Cartwright is busy as the Pack now with 7 new Chums to be invested shortly. The Army group are finalizing plans for their father and son banquet to be held early in January.

Avondale School

The Cub Pack is now holding regular meetings under Cubmaster Rud Lloyd, taking over from Bob Mackenzie who has moved to Toronto.

The troop, which now consists of 17 boys under Scoutmaster Harold Armstrong, will go on a hike on Boxing Day. The boys are busy passing tests so that some of them will be able to be invested in January.

8th Belleville, Queen Mary and Prince Charles Schools

Akela Lillian Ashley reports that 37 boys have been invested since the beginning of the fall season, and that 19 Cubs went up to the Scout Troop of which half were Two Star and the other half One Star boys, three of which had all 13 of their badges.

The Pack is having its Christmas party Monday night and it will feature a world Christmas tree representing all nations. The Cubs are busy making the flags for this special event.

9th Belleville, Queen Elizabeth School

Akela Carson Elliott now has three assistants with the addition of Frank Benson. Group committee chairman. The Pack is now divided into four Sixes, who each produced a skit at the Christmas party Thursday evening. Len Strickland did his young audience with his impersonation of Santa. We are glad to hear that the group committee is working in complete harmony as evidenced by the Harbor Shop Quartet at the Christmas party.

10th Belleville, Holloway United Church

This is the new Scout Group sponsored by the Energizer Group of Holloway Street United Church. Harold Outingdyke is group committee chairman and Tony Lepore is cubmaster, with his wife as assistant cubmaster. The first meeting will be held on Friday, January 2. Harold Outingdyke's son is registered as the first New Chum in the pack and more boys are expected soon.

11th Belleville, Bridge Street United Church

Bridge Street United Church is again sponsoring a Scout Group this time under the banner of the 11th and under the sponsorship of the men's Club. Doctor Ed Hodgson is chairman of the group committee with Cubmaster Phillips secretary-treasurer. The cubmaster and assistant for the pack are Mr. and Mrs. R. Kellett of Albert College. Several boys are waiting to be signed up and a charter was applied for last week.

Local Association

A record number of 30 enthusiastic members attended the December executive meeting. The new president, Bill Hurst, welcomed the new executive members, who then took the Scout Promise with the assistance of A.D.C. Don Allan. The president outlined plans for the coming year's activities and said that the proceeds from the Community Chest were to go towards buying more tents, assisting in financing leader training courses at Camp Springs Scout Reserve Camp, assisting boys and leaders to go to the Second Canadian Jamboree at the plano.

Messrs. Jack Chard and Colin Fox presented two films, "Santa Claus" and "The Night Before Christmas," which the children thoroughly enjoyed.

A program of recitations and songs by the children followed. Those taking part were: Recitations, Sandra Wells, Brenda Stewart, Marbie Demerest, Edith Mayhew, Linda Lou Mayhew, Robert Vandervoort, Dennis Hessman, Marla Hessman, Robert Bell, Jean Davidson and Jane West.

A song by four girls: Sandra Wells, Jean Davidson, Mary Elizabeth Warren, Jean Mayhew; songs, Carol Belcour, Valerie Stewart, Marion Warren, Fairlie Warren with Wendy Warren as accompanist, and a song by Susan West with Sandra West as accompanist, was followed by a piano solo, Rose Ann Vandervoort.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cookies, tea and chocolate milk were enjoyed, after which Santa Claus arrived and presented each child with a gift and a bag of candy.

Mrs. Ed. Hessman moved a vote of thanks to the president and executive for the lovely evening.

Red Wings Appear Well On Way To Fifth N.H.L. Championship

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN!

It just goes to show that hockey, like married life, is liable to produce the strangest things. And the senior "B" scene in this district is no different to the rest. The leading three squads, Oshawa (at the moment), Bowmanville and Kingston are kicking the top spot around with all the abandon of a boot-wacky soccer forward. About the only consistent thing about the scrap is the Glen Marys. They've been in the fourth slot fairly consistently, holding off the lower teams' threat and bidding fair to displace any of those looking down on them.

It was the western division's turn to bowl Saturday night. The Clippers clipped our side in a hard-fought 6-3 game that saw the 1953 champions extended to the limit, with a two-goal third period onslaught carrying the day.

But the amazing upset of the week-end was the 11-5 shellacking the Orrills Pontiacs handed out to the Kingston team. In their last get-together the Goodies plastered a 15-5 defeat on the Pontiacs but the Tribe sharpened their tomahawks apparently and defeated the Goodyears but plenty in a startling reversal of form. Moral of the story is, don't sell any of 'em short.

As matters stand now the Oshawa Truckers are out front with 12 points, the Clippers are in second place with 11 and the Glen Marys in third one point behind. The Glens scrappy fourth slot with 10 points while the Pontiacs piggy-backed the Peter and hopped into fifth place with 9. The Peters trail with eight.

Jud Semark may be lost to the Glens for an indefinite period. The lineswoman suffered torn ligaments or muscles early in the first period Saturday night and was taken to hospital, but returned with the Glens.

GOOD JOB!

A news item the other day carried the story of a trophy presentation to a city bantam soccer club. The presentation was made by the mayor's dancer, William Harvey, Deacon, well known farmer city alderman, rallywaman and ex-member of the Board of Education.

No less proud was Bill in presenting the trophy than was youthful team captain Gary Lewis in receiving it. It was a big moment for both.

Bill is the type of Englishman, who, given a full face of his beloved soccer, roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, views the world through rose-colored glasses. All's well with the right little island if it can produce these things consistently.

Wimbledon tennis, or the roast beef has first claim on Bill's affection is not known. But to clear the point, William would apply the elephants against a team of giraffes. He likes the sport.

He should. He knows it from top to bottom; has played it with distinguished company and has done a yeoman job in supporting and furthering the game in a city which is not exactly soccer-minded. For years Bill, unheralded and unsung has worked quietly in the interests of the game, and especially among the younger fry. He has held positions on football associations executives and has given large, juicy quantities of his time, effort and finances in the game's behalf.

Bill reeked himself to sleep astride a soccer ball in his native Isle of Wight. He doubled on a referee's whistle. He played the game while a member of the King's First Dragoon Guards, crack British cavalry regiment while in South Africa. A genteel sport he played at all levels and other parts of the south of England. He devoted a lot of time to the sport while he was a steward in the Osborne Naval College on the Isle of Wight.

Bill came to Canada in 1906 and settled along the Lakeshore district. He lost little time in associating himself with his favorite sport and played for teams in Port Hope and Cobourg. In 1911 he moved to Belleville and immediately organized a team here.

Bill spent the next 35 years with the railway in the bridge and building department. In more recent years he has been associated with insurance. He saw his civic duty "and he done it." He was a member of the city council for a number of years and for eight years was a member of the school board.

He has never forgotten his first sports love and is just as ardent a devotee of England's famous game today as he was in his boyhood. Bill has done much for the game here. His interest has never flagged and he works with members of the Bay of Quinte Football Association consistently especially with the minor divisions.

FLAMING YOUTH!

Life begins at 6 a.m. Saturdays for some hockey players. A drowsy newspaper man on his way to "open the wires" at that unearthly hour, blinked "wide awake" last Saturday.

It was a few minutes past six with no sign of the poetical "wreck of dawn" in the heavens. The early "bird" swung sleepily into Don Thomas' tobacco and news emporium to pick up the morning daily, and there they stood.

They were two members of one of the peewee hockey teams which see action every Saturday a.m. around 7.30. They had skates and sticks slung over sweatered shoulders and they were munching ice cream and chocolate bars, to "kill time" until the arena doors swung open.

Gain 3 Points Over Week-End As Hawks Drop to 4th Place; Extend Winless String to 8

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A star flashed briefly across the National Hockey League horizon last week, scattering a shower of gold in its wake and promising more to come.

NHL officials couldn't help looking regretful as Jean-Marc Bellveau headed back to Quebec after completing his three-game tryout with Montreal Canadiens. The big guy looked like money in the bank.

Nobody begrudged the Canadiens the five goals Beliveau parked behind rival defenders while he was on loan from Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League. To a man, the league's other five clubowners were willing to chance more of the same, if it brought the prospect of throngs of fans, interested in seeing Beliveau perform. He drew 42,339 in his three-game stint.

Wait 'Till Next Year

But they'll have to wait till next year at least. Beliveau has commitments to his hometown, where Quebecers regard him as a sort of all-year Santa Claus, who presents them with a sackful of goals every winter.

The comfort to the Canadiens and their rivals was that the Montreal club had lured Beliveau onto an NHL rink, at least temporarily, after years of unsuccessful wooing. It looked like a good bet that the guy they call "le gros Bill" would be back for more next year.

Beliveau horned in on Boston Sunday, potting two goals against the Bruins and looking as much like a big-leaguer as when he scored three against New York Rangers in his Montreal debut last week. The biggest Boston crowd of the season—13,961 fans—watched him lead the Canadiens to their 3-1 victory over the Bruins and boost the Habitants into second place.

In other week-end games, Detroit Red Wings showed they intend to dominate the league until playoff time by trimming New York 5-3 Sunday night after tying 1-1 with cellar-dwellers Saturday night. Toronto and Chicago split the Maple Leafs winning 4-1 in Toronto Saturday night and the Black Hawks turning the tables 4-2 at home Sunday night.

Boston walloped Montreal 6-3 Saturday night, but wasn't the fault of Beliveau. He was capably looked after throughout the game by the Bruins. A crowd of 14,714 saw him Saturday night, more than the 14,641 who watched him in all three goals Thursday night.

The Red Wings gained three points in the week-end action. They now top the league with 39 points and appear well on the way to their fifth league championship.

By Boller's 65-foot shot with two minutes, 18 seconds left to play gave the Rangers their Saturday night tie when the Wings appeared to have the game sewed up on the strength of Lep Kelly's goal early in the last period.

Veteran Ted Lindsay Sunday scored his 200th goal in NHL competition as the Wings outplayed the New Yorkers. Metro Prystai netted his 100th and Marcel Pronovost scored two and got two assists. Glen Skov completed Detroit's scoring. Goals by Wally Hergesheimer and Nick Mickoski had given the Rangers a brief first-period lead.

Chicago's early-season wonders fell into No. 4 spot in their games with the Leafs. Jim Henry allowed less streak was extended to eight games Saturday night in Toronto as a crowd of 12,543, one of the smallest of the season, saw Sid Sloan, Tiverio Bodnar, Ron Stewart, and Bobby Hassard score for the Leafs. Al Rollins got Chicago's goal.

Two third-period goals by Bill Gadsby and Fred Glover enabled the Hawks to turn the tables at home. Up to that point the game was tied.

Stewart Loaned To Quebec Aces By Canadiens

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens announced they have loaned Gaye Stewart, acquired by waiver 10 days ago from New York Rangers, has been sent to Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League on loan.

The loan is for the remainder of the season but Stewart will be subject to immediate recall.

Stewart, 29-year-old left-winger who hails originally from Fort William has been in the NHL since the 1941-42 season and has played with all NHL clubs except Boston Bruins.

The announcement said the move is to help strengthen the Aces, currently in sixth place in the QHHL and also to help Stewart, who has not been playing regularly this season, to regain confidence, confidence and timing.

There was no hint that the move has any connection with the three-game, lend-lease stretch the Aces' star, Jean Beliveau, is serving with the Canadiens. In his first game, against Rangers Thursday night, Beliveau more than lived up to expectations by firing three goals. He tallied two more against Boston Sunday night.

Detroit Lions Trounce Rams 31-21 For National Football Title Berth

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit Lions won a National Football League championship playoff berth by defeating Los Angeles Rams 31-21 Sunday in fog-shrouded Briggs Stadium. The Lions came back from a late Los Angeles rally to punch over a game-clinching touchdown in the final 30 seconds of the game to win the National Conference title.

The Rams scored twice within three minutes in the final period to cut the Lions' lead to 24-21. But an interception by Lavern Torgeson gave Detroit possession of the ball on the Los Angeles 28 in the final minutes and Bob Hoernschemeyer went over from the nine for the Lions' final score.

Meet Browns

The loss thus won the right to meet Cleveland Browns, the NFL's American Conference champions, next Sunday at Cleveland for the league championship.

Pat Harder, an aging fullback who got into the starting backfield only because he could block, ran like a battering bull and scored 19 points for Detroit. He scored on 13-yard and four-yard plungers, kicked a 44-yard field goal and converted four tilties.

But it was still linebacker Torgeson, an unpublicized defensive workhorse, who saved the game with his timely interception. Detroit, slim pre-game favorites, didn't won a pro league divisional title in 17 years.

Harder, 30-year-old former Wisconsin star playing his seventh year of pro football, carried the ball eight times and gained 72 yards for a spectacular nine-yard average.

Stouffville Clippers Reverse Tables On Glen Roys With 6-3 Victory

Senior B Champions Clinch Win With Third-Period Drive; Take Over Group Second Spot

By GEO. E. CARVER
Sports Editor

Stouffville Clippers showed a home-town crowd Saturday night they are still a force to be reckoned with in this Senior "B" race despite defeats in their last two appearances. They avenged the 3-2 setback handed them by the Bellville Glen Roys by taking the long end of a 6-3 score from the Moira crew.

But the Glens pushed the 1952 senior "B" champions plumb to the wire. The Doran crew drew a couple of penalties costly in the third period and added the clincher just hoose a brace of insurance numbers.

The teams battled to a two-all tie in a rugged first period after the Glens ripped the puck past Eatough in the Clippers nets in the first twenty seconds of play.

Play remained fast in the second period with tempers flaring a bit and the Clippers grabbed a 4-3 lead. The homesters increased the lead to five-three after five minutes of play in the third beat and slammed home the clincher with three minutes left. Both goals were registered when Glens were a man short, Doran and Mulvihill sitting out sentences in the sin-bin.

Lost To Glens

Jud Semark may be lost to the Glens for an indefinite period. The defenceman suffered torn muscles in a leg midway through the first period and was rushed to hospital. However, after treatment, he was able to return to the game with the team.

Referee Maurice Walsh handed out ten penalties, six going to the Clippers. Parisi, Glen goalie, and Bell of the Clippers drew majors in the second period for fighting. Mr. Bell, it appears, got too close to the Parisi parking lot, so you know what happens. Wardhaugh and Gibson both went off for roughing in the same period.

Peter Jones, Vern Goyer and Jackie Wardhaugh were the sharp-shooters for the Glens with the big defenceman standing out with an other fine performance. He not only scored one but drew assists on both Jones' and Wardhaugh's goals. Red Doran also came up with a fine display setting up the players for Goyer's and Jones' goal.

As in the previous clash between the teams, Parisi and Eatough in the respective nets, stood out with the Stouffville guardian especially good in the third beat when the Glens fought desperately to narrow the margin.

Score in 20 Seconds

Peter Jones stunned the home-story fans when on the first play of the game he whipped the puck past Eatough from Doran and Goyer as the clock registered 20 seconds.

Play speeded up with both goals having narrow shaves and it was not until fifteen minutes had flashed past that Gilmour finally got the rubber in to tie the count. Jackie Wardhaugh gave the Glens the lead again three minutes later when he took Goyer's pass to beat Eatough. The lead was shortlived for a minute later the Clippers drew on even terms when captain Nick Bangay of flung home Black's pass from close-in.

Lewis gave the Clippers a 3-2 lead early in the rugged second period scoring from Minion after five minutes of play. The Glens fought back hard and took the offensive, tying the score for the third time with Goyer banging home Doran's relay. Parisi and Bell started a fistic argument and both drew majors. Bangay got in on it and drew two minutes for his trouble, a minute later Black, one of the Clippers' stars of the night, put the homesters one-up.

Fought Hard

The Glens fought hard for the equalizer in the third period but the Clippers hung on to their lead. The homesters increased the lead to five-three after five minutes of play in the third beat and slammed home the clincher with three minutes left. Both goals were registered when Glens were a man short, Doran and Mulvihill sitting out sentences in the sin-bin.

Curly Brown sat down and stared at the road. The worst thing that could happen to the place had happened. And just at a time when county council had decided to help the village—the new Mc Taggert house to pay their respects to the dead. They were in conversation with the widow who told them that she would leave shortly to reside with a sister in Belleville. And then they were ushered into a large room where Bill McTaggert lay. Curly stood and gazed thoughtfully at the familiar face and then, head bowed in grief, he spoke.

"Goodbye, Bill, my—my best friend," he said. And Hazel, wiping her eyes, touched him on the shoulder, "Come, Curly, come," she said.

The funeral of William McTaggert on the following Wednesday afternoon was the largest' ever seen in the Depot. The school and all business places were closed. The men from McTaggert's lumber camp, united township officials; everybody was in attendance. In the course of his oration Dr. Ian Gray, M.P., recalled that "a great man has fallen in Israel. Bill McTaggert," he said, "had lived to be reverenced for generations to come. No one could ever know the depth of his kindness, the broadness of his sympathy."

By next morning the Depot was recovering from the sudden shock in the death of Bill McTaggert of its main industry, but there was one man who did not seem to sleep. The village weather the storm before and who believed it would weather the storm again, and he had a planning ahead.

That man was Juley Belanger, son of Pierre Belanger, who had started the first store in the Depot back in the days of big timber. Jules was going to have a race track, and he asked Curly to build it for him.

With the first day before them—and the plans called for a half mile track with a high board fence, straight and flat—Constant that would seat a thousand persons or more, and stables galore—and Curly sat down to talk the matter over. The site Belanger had chosen for the purpose was on the north side of the road across the Riley farm and the east end of the Depot.

Curly, who had figured of Belanger's plans from his brother-in-law at the Lookout, pretended to be surprised, and he was surprised, but for a different reason. In the light of what had happened in the past few days, he had felt that Belanger would not care now to put money into such a venture. With McTaggert gone, the mill would not open and there was the possibility of a depression. But he didn't know Jules Belanger or how set he was. Belanger wanted a race track, had the money to build, and was going to go ahead with it.

"But Jules," Curly said, "I can't see how I can do this work for you. I'm pretty well tied up with my own business, and I'm short help right and they can't stand only so much. And you must remember they must haul gravel and stone for sidewalk construction just as soon as the hauling can be done. By the way, if you haven't ordered that cement for the walks, you better do it now."

"Curly," Belanger said, "you must build that track for me. I'll get all the help, men and teams to do the hauling. I'll ask on for more men to do the carpenting. You put Harry Foster after your team and every time he takes a load of lumber to the site he can bring back a load of gravel for the walks from the big bed at the back of the new track. You will be in full charge of the work and I'll pay you top wages. The Boer war will be over any day now, and we must have a place for celebration anyway. We must have this new track ready for Dominion Day, July 1st."

"But Jules," Curly said, "don't you fear hard times now that we have lost Bill McTaggert?"

"Curly, my boy," Jules Belanger said, "I've seen many ups and downs in the life of the Depot and the way I have figured out is, the lower the downs, the higher the ups. Hard times did I hear you say? And you the mayor of the united townships. Am I ashamed of you?"

It was some courage, Jules, Curly replied I do. Curly said, "and I'm greatly flattered by the trust you place in me, but this job of ours requires some thought and some careful planning. Tonight Hazel and I will sit down and talk it over and I'll be back with my answer in the morning. Right?"

"Right," Belanger agreed.

And that night Curly and Hazel did sit down and they did study Belanger's proposition insofar as it affected them. They came to the conclusion that since Belanger must have his race track and would have no one but Curly to supervise its construction, there was nothing else to do but take the job as he had suggested. After all Jules Belanger was not now a man. Probably not for now would labor sell so cheaply or the materials for buildings and the hauling bring such a price on the market. At the same time Curly and Hazel decided that it was time to retire Dandy and replace him with a horse of less years but more sturdiness for the continued daily grind.

That morning Curly Brown was in Belanger's store to tell the merchant that he was in the drawing jumbler to the site of the new road track within a few days. Belanger, delighted that he had occasion to call on Northcott, but he didn't say so, was closeted with Pat Gilroy, McTaggert's bush foreman.

Junior A. Hockey

The Flyers, who topped the standings early in the season but slowed out to Toronto Marlboros, are on the climb.

Strengthened by trades, Barrie is in second place, four points off the pace being set by the Marlies.

Barrie's 5-3 victory over Guelph day night was the Flyers' fifth straight victory. But the Marlies stayed four points in the lead with a 5-1 victory over Guelph Biltmores Sunday.

Generals Win

In other Saturday games St. Catharines defeated Toronto St. Michael's 4-3 and Oshawa trounced the Three Rivers 4-2 in an interlocking schedule game with the Quebec Junior League champs. St. Michael's tied St. Catharine 5-5, Windsor defeated Kitchener 2-0 and Montreal Canadiens smothered Oshawa Generals 7-1 in a Quebec league game, Quebec Citadelles blanked Three Rivers Reds 6-0.

Ray Thibeault scored the winning goal for Barrie while Galt was a team short by just two fellows. Bill Teal and Orv Tessier scored the other Barrie markers. Jim McBurney and John Sleaver tallied for Galt.

Billy Haas scored in an overtime period to give St. Catharines the win over Michael's. In regulation time Hugh Barlow scored two for the Terpsers and Alex Leslie notched one. Jim Caffery, Bill Knox and Les Dulf scored for the Collegians.

Oshawa won one, tied one and lost one in the Quebec tour. Saturday night Three Rivers twice tied Oshawa. Then came the Sunday tilt the final period gave the Generals the winning margin. Rip Collins, Harry Sinden, Bob Gray and Jack Armstrong scored for Oshawa. Louis Desrosiers and Jean-Marie Cossette counted for Three Rivers.

Coy Rousseau scored four tallies for the Canadiens in Sunday's rout of the Generals. It was the most one-sided victory in both leagues this season. Denis Boucher, Les Lilley and Claude Vinet each scored twice and Brian MacKay, Phil Goyette and Henri Richard notched one each. Roger Maisonneuve scored Oshawa's tally.

Windsor's victory over Kitchener was its ninth victory in their last 10 starts and widened the Spitfires' lead over Kitchener for eight points to five points. Ted Reid and Marlin McAlendin scored for the Spits.

Flyers Zoom to 2nd Spot in Jr. Race; Marlies Hold Lead With 5-1 Victory

Barons Beaten By Hornets; Retain Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons are still atop the American Hockey League today although they lost their only week-end game 4-2 to Pittsburgh Hornets. They were idle Sunday. In games today Buffalo 3-0 decisioned Hershey 6-3; Syracuse blanked Buffalo 3-0; and Pittsburgh defeated St. Louis 3-2.

Saturday Syracuse defeated St. Louis 4-3 and Hershey edged Providence by the same score.

Andy Bathgate got two goals and assisted on two others to lead the Hornets to their victory over St. Louis Flyers. The victory put Pittsburgh in second place, five points behind Cleveland.

Eric Pogue and Bill Gooden were the major marksmen for Syracuse Warriors with two each, in their 50 win Sunday night over Buffalo. Les Curtis notched the other. It was the fourth shutout of the season for Gordie Bell in the Syracuse nets.

The win for Providence over Hershey Sunday night broke a five-game losing streak of the Reds. They twice took the lead behind for the win.

Quakers Defeat Edmonton 9-4

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Saskatoon Quakers snapped out of their Western Hockey League slump with a vengeance Saturday night, whipping the tail-end Edmonton Flyers 9-4.

In other Saturday games, Calgary Stampeders beat 3-0 New Westminster Royals while Tacoma Rockets and Vancouver Canucks tied 1-1. In the only game Sunday, Seattle Bombers edged Fe'ew Westminster 3-2.

Jackie Hamilton and Ken Ullyot fired the Royals' goals that defeated Calgary.

Baseball Loop Will Have Eight Clubs

Eight clubs will be in the Ontario Baseball Association's Senior A league next season, it was announced at the annual meeting of the league in Toronto Saturday.

Hamilton Cubs, Toronto Maple Leafs, Toronto Nationals, Toronto Police, Toronto Shamrocks, Toronto Stanleys, Toronto Victorias and Toronto Yankees will be in the league.

Toronto Maple Leafs won the league championship this year.

Bowling League

Frankford—Division "A" of the Frankford Bowling League rolled their weekly competition Thursday this week, and saw little change in the standing. Ray Scott's Outlaws strengthened their league lead by taking five from Gib Gilmour's Gib's Gang; Ross Huffman's Racketeers also stayed in the running by taking seven from Lloyd Hanna's Robbers; Jack Carley's Hopefulate took five from Jack Farley's Jack's Jokers, thus extending their winning streak to five consecutive nights. Karl Austin's Curley's Cubs took five from Preston Chase's Jets.

Scores on the night of the annual turkey roll, and the wigners were Mrs. Jack Farley of the Hopefulate with 226 and Wilson Rankin of the Hopefulate with 288. They lavished their hidden score prize.

Next night of bowling will be on December 25, Monday at 7:00, in order to make up for one of the nights that would otherwise be lost time to Christmas and New Years holidays, coming on Thursday.

Standing: Outlaws 72 points; Racketeers 69; Gib's Gang 65; Robbers 58; Hopefulate 55; Jack's Jokers 49; Curley's Crew 46; Jets 34.

Division "B" of the league saw the second round of competition run through this week, with Elmer Rogers' Screwballs taking five points from the league leading Aristocrats of Milford Macauley, while S. Harper's Kanucks Kids took four from Earl Rogers' Merry Macs.

Standings: Aristocrats 80 points; Merry Macs 61; Screwballs 55; Yankees 54.

GERMANS WIN AT SOCCER

LUDWIGSHAFEN, Germany (AP)—West Germany beat Yugoslavia, 3-2 in a soccer game here Sunday. The German team of semi-professionals were in control through most of the game.

EVERYONE WELCOME

BY SAM GORDON

Canadian Bridge Editor

The numerous forcing signals in bridge are something of a chore to store in your mind. But those two will appear at them swear by them. Let me list some that come to mind.

Forcing for one round bids by the opening side include:

1. A takeout to a new suit when the chain is not broken;

2. Double for takeout by opener when partner has not yet bid;

3. Opener's redouble of a passed takeout double.

Forcing for one round bids by defending side include:

1. Double for takeout;

2. Redouble of a penalty double of a simple overcall;

3. Obligatory pass of a rescue bid.

Forcing to game bids by opening side include:

1. Any jump bid by responder or opener;

2. Any opening bid of two in a suit;

3. An immediate overcall in an opponent suit;

4. Opener's redouble of opponent's game double;

5. Any bid in response to an opening 4 no-trump.

Forcing to game bids by defending side include:

1. Any jump response to any bid;

2. Any bid in response to a jump overcall;

3. An overcall in opponent suit.

Non-forcing bids by opening side include:

1. A takeout to a new suit when the chain is broken;

2. A simple rebid (takeout) in the same suit;

3. A simple assist or no-trump reply to a bid of one;

4. A simple raise in no-trump;

5. An opening bid of one in either suit or no-trump.

Non-forcing bids by defending side include:

1. A simple overcall or simple response thereto;

2. A jump overcall that partners passes.

South, playing with a diamond fit, had a not forced to bid when west makes a jump overcall of two hearts with this hand:

AT THE BELLE

Tyrone Power and Joan Fontaine have found a perfect cast in Saperb Love Story "This Above All."

Hailed by critics as a superb love story, Eric Knight's "This Above All," based on one of the great novels of our generation, is showing today, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Belle Theatre, matinee daily.

Starring Tyrone' Power, Joan Fontaine, and a perfect cast including Thomas Mitchell, Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, Gladys Cooper, Philip Merivale, Sara Algood and Alexander Knox.

Myrna Loy in Tense Drama

Myrna Loy, who has been styled the "perfect wife" for her portrayal in the Thin Man series of films, which is featured with William Powell a number of years ago, plays a very different type of person in the sensational Gregory Ratoff production, "If This Be Sin," which is the added feature attraction on the same program. Miss Loy, who went to England to film this picture, her first to be made abroad, has a part as Lady Brooke, which provides a great opportunity for her to demonstrate the sensitivity of her acting talents.

The film was produced in England, with many of the scenes filmed at "Shots" taken on the romantic Isle of Capri, has a starring cast that includes Myrna Loy, Reginald Livesey, Peggy Cummins and Richard Green.

THEATRE FEATURE TIMES

AT THE BELLE—"This Above All"—72 reels. Power, Joan Fontaine. Showings 2:00-4:10-8:10-10:20. Mat. daily—Myrna Loy, Peggy Cummins, Richard Green. 2:00—8:10.

AT THE CAPITOL—"Face That Thrills" —Bill Williams, Steve Flagg. 2:10-4:10-6:10-8:10-10:10. "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon"—in Technicolor—John Wayne. 3:10-5:10-7:10-9:10.

AT THE McCARTHY—"Above and Beyond"—Stewart Granger, Joan Hopkins. 2:00-4:00-6:00-8:00-10:00. "The Brothers"—Patricia Roc, Maxwell Reed—2:30-5:30.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 23, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—We will have to tend to our knitting, take better interest in our civic affairs besides our personal ones. A somewhat trying period. Do your share.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—No unfavorable planetary aspects but there may be conditions that, if not well handled, could hurt good chances. Be alert to what's going on, be ready for changes.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Some very benefic rays a.m. taper off to "just fair" planet aspects, but stand early, be consistent and keen in your business. Don't waste energy.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—High achievement possible in constructive endeavors, especially those involving modern methods, science. Following further things requiring endurance, courage.

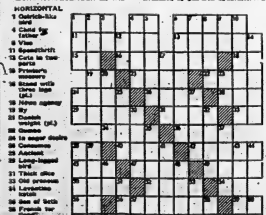
July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—May not get as far as you would like, but you can add to solid advancement in your work and social affairs. Keep going!

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Mining, engineering, building, housing projects, domestic interests under some excellent rays. But money and property deals could be left till more appropriate time.

September 24 to October 23 (Pisces)—Can be fine period for you and your worthy endeavors. Initiative approved. But—be extra careful in delicate situations, social and diplomatic affairs.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Today built on special strong effort, improvements, bettering household conditions, the welfare of children highly sponsored. Keep smiling.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Practical start of day. One that can be a so-so or "just great" if you make it that, so be alert, stress your capacity to carry through what you start.



December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—If you have the will you can surely make the very this solely stimulating day. Fresh opportunities for difficult tasks that you meet.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—The constancy with which you prosecute duties is all-important this on whole fair day. Reward will be commensurate with thought and energy expended.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Favorable for finishing incompleted matters or starting necessary undertakings. Challenging day but you should like it.

YOU BORN TODAY: are the liberal type; charitable and dependable. Are frank in our judgments, and with this rather exacting. Correct stubbornness; it can thwart great achievement and discourage friends, co-workers. Especially suited to work connected with society in general. Also make good artistic designer, able minister, stock raiser, lawyer, builder, statesman. Birthdate of: Chas. A. Sainte-Beuve, Fr. critic; Eric Blore, actor.

Scientists Turn Out Unique Line of Goods

By IAN FRASER

COLOGNE, Germany (Reuters) — A team of 60 German scientists, doctors, mechanics and artists here are turning out a line of goods they claim to be perfect copies of the human body in all kinds and materials, including flesh and bones.

Aluminum Bones

One of their proudest exhibits is a "glass man." His bones are of cast aluminum, his skin is of plexiglass and all his organs exactly reproduced in translucent plastic to life scale.

The organs from the brain down to the bladder light up from inside in logical sequence and the "glass man" himself describes the purpose of each in the resonant voice of a professional radio announcer. The "glass man" contains 20 miles of colored wire which illustrates the place, size and function of each vein, artery nerve and lymphatic canal.

The "German Health Museum," in a Cologne suburb, has also made several copies of the "glass woman"—priced at $15,000—and a "glass dancing girl" who can own a "glass giant," 12 feet tall.

In one of the museum's laboratories, a group of scientists preserve in alcohol parts of the human body bequeathed to them. A process the museum developed enables the exhibits to be made completely transparent. At the same time the veins, arteries and other canals are pumped full of different-colored liquids so that they can be seen through the transparent flesh walls.

Teach Health Habits

Fifty years ago, a group of German doctors founded the German hygiene museum in Dresden. The museum's task was an international one; they set themselves the job of teaching the human race to develop healthy habits.

In 43 years, up to 1944, when the closing phases of the war made continuation of their work impossible, the museum organized 1,500 exhibitions, 134 of them in foreign countries, visited by 34,000,000 persons.

In 1948, when the Communist authorities made it clear that they wanted to mix politics with science, the late Dr. Wolf Dresden staff, led by Dr. Georg Seiring, head of the museum, moved to Cologne. There they found the German health museum.

Within two years they were going at full steam again. They organized travelling exhibitions all over Germany and in many foreign countries.

In 1952, they visited Belgium, France, Luxembourg, Holland and Denmark and next year, they plan to send exhibitions to South America and to Africa.

OFFSHORE TV LICENCE FEE

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Essex county council Friday passed a resolution asking the federal government not to impose licence fees on television sets in this area until there is a Canadian TV station operating here. Reeve Barry E. Atkinson of Sandwich East said it would be "ridiculous" to pay a fee to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation when the CBC gives no television service to Windsor.

LONG DISTANCE is always "rushed" at Christmas. So many people want to greet absent friends and families that delays on many calls are simply unavoidable.

Calls reach their peak Christmas Eve and Christmas Day. Then, even though every switchboard is manned to capacity and every operator is working at top speed, delays will occur. And some calls to distant points like the far West, the Maritimes and south of the border may not get through at all.

That's why it's a good idea to call before the rush.

Please remember—
that Long Distance calls will go through much faster before Christmas Eve and after Christmas Day.
It always helps if you can give your Long Distance operator the out-of-town number you are calling.

20 DROWN TRYING ESCAPE FROM WRECKED SHIP

Six Tough Convicts Scoop 12 Tons Dirt To Make Escape

Bore 200-Foot Tunnel Under State Prison Walls

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP)—Six tough, patient convicts who scooped out 12 tons of dirt in boring a 200-foot tunnel under the Washington state prison walls were hunted through the Pacific northwest today.

Seven made spectacular escape early Monday. One, Ralph Courser, 43, was captured in Portland, Ore., six hours later.

The manhunt for the fugitives was one of the region's greatest.

It centred in the Portland area, where police believed at least three other escapees headed with Courser in a car stolen from Walla Walla.

Courser was alone when he was spotted by Portland police and wounded in the neck as he tried to flee on foot. He was tight-lipped at first, but later said he left all his companions in Walla Walla, 200 miles east of Portland.

All Are Dangerous

The six convicts still at large were described by prison officials as dangerous and "maximum security" prisoners.

The break astounded prison authorities who said the men must have worked for months digging out the dirt a spoonful or handful at a time.

The tunnel, about 15 inches in diameter, began in an ash pit near the prison powerhouse and came out near a guards' tower on the north wall. The dirt was carried after each day with the ashes and carted away.

One of the escapees, Bob Palmer has avowed he will never be taken alive.

Chaplin Given Fruit Barrage With Applause

The missiles flew out of a crowd of about 1,000 persons who lined the street in front of the Palazzo Sistina.

Most of them cheered and applauded as Chaplin stepped from his car in front of the brilliantly-lighted theatre. But as he waved and smiled apples, oranges, bananas and tomatoes flew out of the crowd.

Chaplin was struck several times in the body, but continued to smile and walked on into the theatre.

Dials Telephone With Tongue After Robbery

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A cab owner, his head and feet bound, summoned aid by dialing a telephone with his tongue after an attractive brunette and her male companion robbed him of $6,000.

Globalgio Ferraro, 48, was closing his cafe when a tall woman asked to use the phone last night.

Then, Ferraro told police, an armed, masked man entered, struck him and bound him.

He said the woman reappeared and held the pistol as the man stuffed a cash box.

Ferraro struggled to the phone, knocked the receiver from the hook, dialed operator with his tongue and shouted for help. The operator notified police.

Cross-Continent Flights to Bring Wounded Home

MONTREAL (CP) — An RCAF North Star will leave here for Rockcliffe airport today on a flight that will span the continent twice in 48 hours to fly wounded soldiers home for Christmas at home.

Nine transport aircraft from No. 426 Thunderbird squadron is scheduled to touch down at Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vancouver, Whitehorse, Yellowknife and Canadian Army brigade in Korea.

The plane is expected to drop the last of the veterans at Halifax Wednesday night. It will make stops at Edmonton, Winnipeg, London, Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal, St. John, N. B., and Halifax.

The trip is the 1st of a series of flights to bring Canadian troops, supplies and Christmas cheer to some of the most isolated and difficult to reach northern and remote spots.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP)—Synopsis

Rain coupled with temperatures near 40 dims southwestern Ontario's hopes for a white Christmas. But there was a few inches of snow on the ground in the Georgian Bay and Haliburton regions and it appeared before today is over. Some light snow is falling in the Timmins-Kapuskasing region but this will turn first to freezing drizzle then by early afternoon to light rain.

The precipitation is part of an extensive area on the northeast side of a low pressure centre which at present is moving eastnortheastward through southern Illinois.

Thirteen Killed As Plane Crashes Into Taxiing Craft

SEOUL (AP) — A single-engine plane taking off from a western Korean air base crashed today into a taxiing C-46 — manned air evacuation C-47 transport Monday, killing 13 persons including nine patients, the U.S. Fifth Air Force announced today.

There was only one survivor—the pilot of the transport plane.

The C-47, preparing to take off, was manned by four members of the Royal Hellenic Air Force. It was a U.S. Air Force plane.

The transport, with eight patients aboard, had just picked up the sixth at the air strip when the crash occurred.

It was the fourth serious plane accident in Korea since Oct. 16. A C-46 transport carried 25 men to death on that date. On Nov. 14 a C-54 smashed into a hillside near Seoul, killing 46. Eleven men were killed and seven injured when the east coast crash of a C-46 next day.

Sidewalk Santa in Tennessee Plays Real Santa Role to Needy

DYERSBURG, Tenn. (AP)—A sidewalk Santa Claus had $200 to give away today. Where did he get the money? From Santa Claus —who else?

The sidewalk Santa was hired by merchants to check the smalltrys' Christmas requests.

He often felt his heart sink when some thinly-clad boy or girl sat on his knee to dream aloud about Christmas.

Their dreams were usually modest, but Santa — with one eye on the worried mother hovering near —had to play it cautious.

"A doll that cries?" he'd boom. Then check with your mother on that. A football and a train? What does your mother say about that, Sonny?"

Monday, with the usual line of eager faces working toward Santa's sidewalk house, the p o s t m a n stopped by. He thrust a fat envelope into Santa's hand.

Inside were checques, each for $5, all signed "Santa Claus."

There was a note, too, telling Santa to distribute the checques "where they will do the most good."

Santa hustled to the nearby Chamber of Commerce office for advice.

George O. Wilson, executive secretary, phoned the bank on which the cheques were drawn.

"I'll check with my teller on that. A football and a train? What does your mother say about that, gold."

Premier Visits Marmora
Development of Iron Ore Mining of Great Importance To Ontario Says Prem. Frost

MARMORA (Staff) — The mining of iron and other metals will soon be making a greater contribution to the economy of Ontario than its precious metals, Ontario Premier Leslie M. Frost predicted here yesterday.

He spoke to a public meeting held in the Plaza Theatre following an inspection of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's large mining project east of this village, and the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company's plant at Deloro.

Mr. Frost was accompanied by the Hon. Phillip Kelly, minister of mines; Dr. M. E. Hurst, provincial geologist; M. C. Rickaby, deputy minister of mines, officials of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, civic and political dignitaries and members of the Marmora Chamber of Commerce.

He was introduced by Chamber of Commerce President Vaughan Glover.

Great Progress Made

The development of iron and steel has made great progress in Ontario during the past few years, the premier said. He pointed out that the mining industry is producing 400 million dollars of new wealth every year.

Geoffrey Rock, he said, is already well advanced on a program designed to increase by five times its present output of one and one-half million tons of ore per year. From another area, consisting of less than one-quarter of Steep Rock properties, steel producing ingots are anticipated to develop a minimum of three million tons annually.

In Algoma, he went on, the story is the same. The known ore reserves in the Helen Mines area have risen in the past three or four years from a surrounding area to cover many square miles, containing hundreds of millions of tons.

Algoma ore properties are not content with this. They are turning their eyes to the possibilities revealed in the Eastern Ontario, Mr. Frost said.

Fifteen companies are carrying on extensive exploration work near Calabogie in Renfrew County, and plans are now under way to bring extensive properties into production."

The premier said the government's magnetometer surveys have uncovered another three ore bodies within fifteen miles of Marmora, "which we have no doubt, will become commercial."

Steep Rock, he said, is a project which is now in the process of extensive testing. Mr. Frost said its cobalt refining has become one of the necessities of industry in the age of atomic production.

Magnetometer surveys are being carried out in 16 townships in the Sudbury area next January, the premier said, the same as in the Georgian Bay to Lake Simcoe and the Lake Huron Sound and Thunder Bay districts.

Science Aids Development

Science, he said, is making a revolutionary contribution to the development of Ontario's mineral resources. It is only a little over four years ago that the first magnetometer was flown over this country and today provincial surveys have been completed of millions of dollars are under way.

President of France Tries To Patch Tangled Situation After Premier Pinay Resigns

By GODFREY ANDERSON

PARIS (AP)—President Vincent Auriol today was trying to patch up France's creaking government, but it looked as if the country would have another cabinet crisis for Christmas.

Premier Rene Pinay, after nine uneasy months in office, resigned this morning in an announcement from the National Assembly floor. He acted after the Radical-Socialist Party, second in the politicali Populaire, part of his coalition cabinet. The Radicals refused to back him in the first of three confidence votes on 1953 budget proposals.

Although he declared after an hour-long talk with Auriol that his mind was firmly set on resigning, Pinay admitted Auriol had not yet accepted his ministers' portfolios.

"But my decision is taken," he told reporters. "It is not possible to carry any longer duties and responsibilities without a solid majority."

Auriol, an old hand at such crisis was expected to try in consultations with political leaders to persuade Pinay to carry on until the country has a balanced budget. The Pinay cabinet has failed to amend the government's broken pledge by asking MRP party leaders put aside party politics in the national interest.

If Pinay stands by his resignation decision, it will mean the end of the Pinay government's 9-month office since the country was liberated from Nazi occupation, in 1944. It means also the end to the "Pinay experiment," which aimed at protecting the purchasing power of the franc by fighting devaluation and by selling back prices wherever possible.

It was a new Pinay attempt to balance the budget for the fiscal year which finally broke the governmental crisis. He had won confidence motions on three financial proposals but even before the first could be voted, the MRP decided to abstain.

The split came on a relatively unimportant issue, a proposal to switch the surplus in one group of social security funds to cover deficits in other parts of the security system. Pinay said it looked as if there was a conspiracy against the cabinet.

Freighter May Not Make Port Under Own Power

VANCOUVER (CP)—The hazardous path being followed by the crippled freighter Maplecove was tracked again today by ships and planes on sea and it appeared the vessel wasn't going to fight back to Vancouver under her own power.

The Maplecove, which has been bucking toward safety in starts and stops, radioed she was unable to steer her partly-disabled rudder and of the fierce weather. She asked a salvage tug to buck the storm and make all possible speed to her side.

The 10,000-ton freighter's lonely battle started Thursday more than 1,000 miles off the British Columbia coast. Several times, its disabled steering mechanism was repaired and then failed.

The crew of 36 was rescued by the Maplecove, which is returning from her second run to the Orient. She carries a crew of 62 and her skipper is Capt. R. A. Leicester of Burnaby, B. C.

Monday, the weather ship St. Catharines, 45 miles from the Maplecove, reported winds of 80 miles an hour and "very rough" seas.

MORE WORKING THAN YEAR AGO SAY AUTHORITIES

114,000 of Labor Force Of 5,290,000 Now Idle

OTTAWA (CP) — Seasonal unemployment was moving in on Canada by late November but more people were working than a year earlier, the government statement said today.

Out of a civilian labor force of 5,290,000, there were 114,000 out of jobs and looking for work at Nov. 22, according to a joint statement by the Dominion bureau of statistics and the labor department. A total of 5,047,000 worked full or part time during the week.

The last week ended Nov. 3, 1951, 4,201,000 worked some time, while 100,000 were fully out of work.

The joint release was the first of a monthly series to be issued by the two departments. These will replace the periodic employment surveys of the labor department. Some figures in which were based on applications for jobs with national war services.

The DBS statistics are reached on a sampling basis and are regarded by government officials as a more accurate gauge of actual employment and unemployment.

On the basis of new figures, there were 5,290,000 persons seeking jobs at Nov. 22. This compared with 5,147,614 at Oct. 23 and 182,918 a year earlier.

In addition to those without jobs and seeking work at Nov. 22, the DBS estimated there were another 129,000 who had jobs but did not work at them because of bad weather, temporary lay-offs, illness or other reasons. The comparative figure for Nov. 3, 1951, was 119,000.

Of the 5,047,000 who worked during the 1952 week, the DBS said, 4,590,000 worked 35 hours or more—and 457,000 worked part of the week.

"Generally," the two departments said jointly, "employment levels in December are expected to exceed those of a year ago.

Expectant Mother Spends 7 Hours On Stormy Lake

LITTLE CURRENT (CP) — A baby boy was born, prematurely, on a baby, spent seven hours in a small boat on storm-tossed Georgian Bay Monday before she could be brought to hospital in this Manitoulin Island town late that night.

Minutes after her arrival a seven pound, 2-ounce boy was born to Mrs. Arthur Noble of Killarney.

The motor on the boat stopped pounding after seven hours. Provincial fire brigade from Beirut's interlake Sanatorium.

The ship's owners, the Messageries Maritimes, said in Paris that there were 328 persons aboard the ship which went aground Monday some 500 yards off the Lebanese coast, about four miles south of Beirut. Those aboard, they said, included 200 pilgrims and a crew of 108 pilgrim en route to the Holy Land for Christmas.

Threat of New Avalanches Terrorizes Inhabitants in Tiny Mountain Villages

VIENNA, Austria (CP) — The threat of fresh avalanches today terrorized inhabitants of scores of mountain villages throughout the Alps region. Twenty-eight persons have been killed by them since Saturday.

Warmer weather and fresh snow-falls in the last 24 hours increased the danger of new slides.

All persons in the Austrian Alps, authorities were having difficulties trying to identify most of the 23 tourists who were killed Monday when a giant avalanche swept their bus off a bridge and crushed it in a river bed 90 feet below. Only 20 of the dead were members of a British party.

The rest were believed to be all German, Dutch, French and Belgian nationality. Thirteen of the dead were women.

Other Passengers, Crew Removed From Pilgrim Ship

French Liner Aground Only 500 Yards from Shore

BEIRUT, Lebanon (CP). — The remaining passengers and crew were removed today from the French liner Champollion to end their 24-hour nightmare aboard the stricken vessel aground on a reef.

The passengers and crew were taken off a few hours after 20 of them drowned when the vessel jumped overboard and died in a desperate attempt to reach shore. Most of others who jumped over the boat made it safely.

The French liner is aground only 500 yards from shore with a wide split across her middle. Misinterpretation of shore beacons landed her there early Monday.

Efforts Handicapped

High seas handicapped efforts at small boats to take off those aboard but gradually the 108 passengers and 220 crew members—less those drowned—were brought to shore until the all clear signal was given by the R o y a l Navy cruiser Kenya which is standing by. A message from the cruiser said that the passengers were rescued "with great skill" in a heavy surf.

Three women and a 10-year-old boy were among those drowned in their attempt to swim to shore.

The sea was still as rough as it was yesterday when the liner went aground on its voyage from Marseille to Beirut. The gales had weakened, however.

Sixty today were partly clear of the first small craft able to dodge alongside the stricken liner to take off passengers when Beirut port's pilot ship, It loaded 15 passengers, mostly women, and headed for Beirut harbor four miles away, it was reported by Reuters correspondent at Beirut.

About the same time, a small motor launch put out from the reef-pounded beach, successfully made the 500 yards to the grounded and split vessel and brought back seven passengers. It then turned back for another load.

The rescued passengers were shivering and showed signs of shock. They were taken to the hospital.

Ten bodies were washed ashore when a lifeboat made a desperate attempt to reach shore but capsized. The survivors were picked up by Lebanese Army champion swimmers, constantly men and volunteers.

Three British planes made unsuccessful attempts to fly over the ship and drop a cable to connect the liner with shore before it broke.

The beach was filled with thousands of spectators who watched the rescue of passengers from the pounding surf and attempts of the fire brigade from Beirut's interlake Sanatorium.

The ship's owners, the Messageries Maritimes, said in Paris that there were 328 persons aboard the ship which went aground Monday some 500 yards off the Lebanese coast, about four miles south of Beirut. Those aboard, they said, included 200 pilgrims and a crew of 108 pilgrim en route to the Holy Land for Christmas.

Armored Vest Used in Korea Sheds Bullets

SEOUL (AP) — The army today said a soldier's armored vest fended off 15 Communist automatic rifle bullets and a closely-exploding Red grenade.

The soldier, Pic. Tom Miles, Decatur, Ill., was helping a wounded buddy during a recent action when a Red infantryman ran up and began firing at Miles.

"The impact of 10 slugs across his chest at close range knocked Miles down, but they didn't penetrate his armored vest," the army said.

Miles was still on the ground when a hand grenade exploded just a few feet away. He "recovered almost at once" killed his Red assailant with a burst from his carbine, the army added.

Russian Woman Given 18 Years For Espionage

BELGRADE (AP) — A Yugoslav court sentenced Ljuba Basic, an attractive brunette, today to 18 years in prison today on charges of spying for the Soviet Union.

The 31-year-old woman was convicted largely on the testimony of Vladimir Dedijer, a Russian-trained former Yugoslav flier who is serving a prison term himself on a Cominform collaborator.

Jovan Basic, the husband, testified at the deposition from prison, along with other witnesses, that Ljuba worked for Russia's dreaded NKVD secret police in close cooperation with the Soviet embassy some even before the Cominform denounced the Tito government in 1948.

The woman contended that her only contact with Russians in Belgrade came through two Soviet correspondents she met at the Soviet embassy. She said she became attracted to them "because they had such wonderful eyes."

Russian-Built MIG Shot Down At 45,000 Feet

SEOUL (AP)—Another Russian-built MIG jet fighter was shot down in flames over the Korean battle front clashed briefly with eight of the Red planes.

The fight, at 45,000 feet, was the only one reported today. The MIG was made by Lieut. John A. Imferrara, Watertown, Mass., who was flying his 98th mission. He now has downed two MiGs and damaged one.

Allied planes hit a troop concentration area in northwest Korea near Chaerryong. Other planes bombed the east airfild at the Red capital, Pyongyang. Pilots reported the Reds were trying to repair the strip.

Communist troop and supply centres near Pyongyang were hit Monday night by 12 B-29 bombers. The B-29s also bombed a section of the main rail line running north from Seoul.

On the ground Allied raids and skirmishes were held in many sagements. All the Red probing attacks were beaten off after short fights.

BREAKS COLLARBONE WHILE SKATING

Bill Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Foster, and leading scorer in the bantam hockey league, suffered a fractured collar bone while skating on Saturday night. Young Foster collided with another skater and fell heavily to the ice. He will be out of hockey for the next five weeks.

NO MAIL DELIVERY ON CHRISTMAS DAY

City mail carriers and rural couriers will take a holiday on Christmas day with no regular delivery of mail being scheduled. All post office wickets will be closed and all bus and stage services will be withdrawn. Special Delivery service will be given all day however.

The post office lobby will remain open until 6 p.m for his convenience of bondholders and one street letter box collection will be made in the evening.

FUNERAL COACH STOLEN AT DESERONTO, SOON RECOVERED

A party of joyriders were not particular as to what they used for transportation at Deseronto on Monday evening.

The Thomas Funeral Parlor management in that town reported the funeral coach was missing and police were notified of the theft.

Half an hour later the hearse was found abandoned but undamaged at Marysville, about five miles away. It was believed that a small part of soldiers was responsible for the disappearance of the funeral coach.

ROTARIANS GIVEN TURKEY DINNER

Reverend Duncan McTavish of Bridge Street United Church gave the Rotary club his interpretation of a "Christmas Carol" by Charles Dickens at the noon luncheon in the Hotel Quinte Monday.

Mr. McTavish's rendition of the old story was a portion of the Rotary Christmas presentation. Carols were sung, roast turkey was served and numerous comic gifts were given the members.

The minister was thanked by the president, George Campbell.

NEW HEAD SET GIVES 24 HOUR INFORMATION BOOTH

Christmas time is a time for gift giving, among other things. Apparently the custom has reached to city hall. Gordon Leggat, who conducts the information booth inside the doors of this city's administrative centre, was presented with a brand new headset for his switchboard, courtesy of the Bell Telephone Company today.

The set consists of an earphone and microphone combination unit. For some time Mr. Leggat has been laboring along in his work with a rather antiquated head set resembling an ancient ear-horn.

Today Miss Evelyn Donnelly from the telephone company brought over the newer and more compact unit and presented it to Mr. Leggat as a Christmas present from the company. Miss Donnelly is the instructress for Bell Telephone in this area.

LODGES HIS HOUSE

WINDSOR (CP)—A $4,000 fire Monday demolished the partially-built home of a retired Ford of Canada worker, Eustice Barker, 56. He had built most of it himself. Interior finishing and brickwork were all that remained to be done before the Barkers moved in.

Small Offering Of Fowl Seen On Local Market

A very small offering of fowl was offered on the pre-Christmas market today with only a comparatively slim attendance, both on the part of city housewives and farmer vendors.

Turkeys, geese, ducks and chicken were on the main items offered on the inside mart with prices holding generally at the same level as on Saturday. The general demand for fresh drawn turkeys was 65c per lb. Geese were quoted at 50c per lb. and roasting chickens, while checks ranged up to 60c per lb.

On the outside mart there were still plenty of Christmas trees offered for the householders who may not like the impending traditional Yuletide tree. Prices ranged from 75c to $1.75 each.

Mrs. C. Earle Takes Over Husband's Business

The company, Hall and Earle Insurance Limited at 210 Front Street, is being carried on by Mrs. Charles Earle, wife of the late Charles Earle. She will act as agent for the company in her husband's place. Mrs. Earle had been associated with her husband in the insurance field for a number of years.

To comply with regulations Mrs. Earle has written and passed examinations to obtain her insurance license. She will take care of all kinds of general insurance with the exception of life insurance.

Shriners Play Santa to 50 Crippled Children at Party

For a few hours Monday afternoon lag brazes were as light as feathers and crutches weighed less than matchsticks as more than 50 crippled and otherwise handicapped Belleville and district children attended the annual Christmas party given for them by Shriners at the Shrine Club.

To the children, most of whom learned early about the bad breaks of life, it was a wonderful party. To a more fortunate observer, it would seem that there would bring a lump to the throat of an unreformed Scrooge.

With Noble Charles Cawker at the piano and Noble Aubrey Coe in the conducting role, the party was started with a sing-song. It was quickly proven that "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" was ...mber one on the Hit Parade.

There followed a scene that both of which made a resounding impression on the youngsters present. Afterwards the kiddies were served a sumptuous lunch. Cokes and candies were also passed in generous quantities.

With President D. L. Storey in charge, the big moment arrived. The children were presented with a wide variety of gifts that could read like a Christmas catalogue. There were, however, some things that they could not get.

Noble Jack Bush was chairman of the program. Other Shriners taking an active part were Nobles Horace Wright and Dave Dunlop, transportation; Aubrey Coe and Cecil R. Bolton, decorations; George McIntosh and Willard Fawcett, entertainment; Tom Lewis and Aubrey Coe, food and treats; Jack Bush and Orlitz Lloyd, children's gifts and Lionel Crawford, secretarial and special duties.

"Good work," Mr. Storey told this reporter after the party, "deals only with children, who can be cured."

The reporter pointed to a youngster, whose affliction appeared hopeless.

Mr. Storey nodded his head, "Incurable," he said.

On the face of such a contradictory statement, another question was in order. But perhaps it is enough to say Bellehaven more than one thousand, nine hundred and fifty-two years ago.

Lifesize Models of Santa Claus, Reindeer Placed on Roof

Any misgiving which the younger fry may entertain about Santa Claus not coming down the chimney can be dispelled through a peek at the Jack Ellis home on the O.S.D. lane just north of the Bellecroft-Preston highway.

There in traditional Santa fashion the old Christmas himself is ready to climb down the chimney. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis are on the roof with his reindeer. Standing on the roof are lifesize models complete in the big sleigh packed full of Christmas gifts.

That is not real, of course, but the lifesize models fashioned by Mr. and Mrs. Ellis are realistic enough.

The idea of having a Santa on the roof of the house was dreamed up by Mrs. Ellis and during the past week Mr. and Mrs. Ellis have been busy fashioning the models in front of Bellehaven. The models were shellacked and painted in true to life colors and on the week-end were set on the roof of the Ellis residence.

The bright light illuminated the rooftop Santa and at night the effect is particularly striking. Needless to say the O.S.D. lane is a popular drive during the early evening for local parents with small kiddies.

Police Warn Public Against Drinking and Driving on Holiday

City and provincial police will be out in full force over the Christmas holiday in an ever vigilant check against drinking drivers.

That the police will be right on the job in an effort to cut down on holiday accidents as result of drivers with ability to drive impaired by alcohol, was emphasized by both Chief Walter Prophet of the city police force and by Inspector A. McDougall of the provincial police.

"I appreciate that old saying, 'If you drive, don't drink, and if you drink, don't drive' is a pretty well worn out, but there is still no better advice," Chief Prophet commented. "The fact is that a man who drinks has no business behind the wheel of an automobile."

"Police are going to crack down on those drinking driver. It is the only way to keep the accident count down," the chief warned.

The warning was echoed by Inspector McDougall of the provincial police who said that highway patrol officers would be on constant vigil checking for impaired drivers.

"We don't want to put anybody in jail for Christmas, but safety on the highways is at stake and it is the only course to follow if drunk drivers are found," he said.

The inspector urged co-operation on the part of the motorist to refrain from driving if they have taken any drinks. "Leave the car at home, or let someone else drive," he advised."

Show Pony Angrily Stamps Herself Out Of Six-Foot Grave

BROADSTAIRS, England (AP)—Minette found herself a hole in the ground that she seemed to prefer to her stable. She had it a dozen pony.

Just how she got there was a mystery, but Minette was found standing in an unoccupied grave by Reverend Cecil Ingrouse. Noting that Minette's flanks were close against the grave, he suggested they shovel earth into the pit.

As the dirt fell around her, Minette angrily stamped her hoofs, pounding the earth down and slowly building up the level of the grave floor. Soon she was up to ground level again, and the gravedigger faced the task of shovelling all the dirt out again.

Commission Visits Business Agents In Montreal

Re-establishing the policy followed for many years by the Commission, and abandoned of the city of seeking, through personal contact, to induce industries to settle in this municipality, the Industrial Commission, which included Chairman Harry Rollins, Aldermen William Argue, Arthur Keegan, Claude D. Tice and R. A. Pringle journeye dto Montreal on Sunday afternoon and returned home Monday evening.

On Monday at the Windsor Hotel a conference was held with Pat O'Shea, supervisor of business development for the Bank of Montreal, John Noel, manager of the press bureau of the C.N.R., Harry Wood, chief of business development of the C.N.R., Willard Newcombe, commissioner of development for the C.N.R., S. J. Raymond, industrial agent for the C.N.R. to Toronto, C. "Bud" Ayres, manager of business development for the Royal Bank in Canada, James Dunlop, industrial agent for the C.P.R., W. A. Macwell, industrial commissioner, C.P.R. and Keith Morrow of the Northern Electric Company, who formerly resided in this city.

It was explained by the Chairman of Industries that Belleville had approximately 50 acres of land available for industries serviced with, a siding. Other services can be added in a short space of time. Those who were in attendance asked many questions respecting facilities for education, housing, and other matters that would be advantageous to industries settling in the city. It was decided at a special meeting and many contacts were made which will be to the advantage of the city. It was learned that industry is building new and that all were agreed that the peak has not been reached.

The Industrial Commission has shown some progress in the past year and several industries have been made at the Trade Fair, two years ago, Belleville will have a new industry in the Dorothy Brothers who purchased seven acres of land in the Industrial area and have let the contract for their building. They expect to be in operation by the first of May.

B. G. H. Nurses Hold Christmas Party

A gathering of the student and graduate nurses, of Belleville General Hospital, along with the hospital administrator, Kenneth Bond, the interne; a number of the departmental heads, and the nursing supervisor, Miss Margaret Peart, held a Christmas party in the Nitchie Memorial residence last night.

The three and a half hour festivities were under the direction of the student nurses. The girls presented a Christmas program which included carol singing, refreshments and a visit from Santa Claus.

Householders Asked Not To Treat Deliverymen

Christmas goodwill spirit is a fine thing for this time of year, but city householders should draw the line when it comes to offering "spirits" to their kindly deliverymen.

This was the pre-Christmas warning emphasized by Police Chief Walter Probert today when he pointed out that offering a deliveryman a goodwill drink while he was still on duty was actually doing the man an injustice and one which could have disastrous results.

"It isn't the first drink taken by the milkman, the parcel delivery man or bread man which causes the trouble," the chief pointed out, "but when many drinks are taken during the course of a morning or evening the man so becomes incapable of performing his normal duties."

The chief went on to point out that most deliverymen are to charge of a vehicle of some sort, and a driver not normally alert can easily become involved in a serious accident.

"If employers of deliverymen would appreciate it very much, and householders would actually be doing the men a good turn if no drinks were offered," Chief Probert urged.

Good lambs sold at 25-25.50 and culls at 17.

14,000 Civilians End Japan Strike At Service Bases

TOKYO (CP) — About 14,000 Japanese civilian employees of British Commonwealth bases throughout Japan ended their five day strike today when commonwealth authorities granted their demands for a wage increase and year-end bonus.

The workers will receive a 20-per-cent increase in pay and an end-of-year bonus equal to about 26 days' pay.

A union spokesman said that Lt.-Gen. William Bridgeford, the Commonwealth forces commander, talked throughout the night with Setsuo Yamada, union chairman, to get the strike settled.

The first Commonwealth and other Commonwealth troops into house-maids, cooks, sweepers, laborers and boilermen — all jobs usually done by the Japanese.

One of the bases affected was at Kure which has headquarters and base installations for Commonwealth soldiers and normally has about 2,000 reinforcements. The total static population of Canadian troops at Kure is 1,000.

Kure is headquarters of the 25th Canadian reinforcement group, No. 2 Canadian administration unit, 2 Canadian hospital, Canadian lines-of-communication sub base troops and No. 1 Canadian postal wing.

Ben-Gurion Heads Coalition Group

JERUSALEM (Reuters)—Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion Monday announced formation of a new three-party coalition government which will give him the biggest majority in the short history of Israeli Parliament.

Ben-Gurion told his leadership are the country's two strongest parties—his own moderate Labor party (Mapai) and the religious National General Zionist party. Third party in the coalition will be a smaller Progressive group.

Among them, the three parties control 77 votes in the 120-seat house. This gives Ben-Gurion a safe margin.

Since September, when the two extreme religious parties withdrew their support because the government refused to exempt female religious students from compulsory military service, he had been governing along with a majority of only two.

The formula his new government he managed to line up the Zionist party with his Labor party by promising to withdraw from its liberal economic policy, aimed at lowering living costs and prices.

The new cabinet has nine Mapai ministers, four General Zionists and one Progressive.

SERVICEMEN TOSS

With that, he pulled the pin from the grenade—used by the armed forces as either an incendiary or flare—and sent it rolling like a ball of fire toward the bar.

The room exploded then fled and jumped in the taxi.

One of the off-duty policemen, John Dahill, 25, was burned; but the other two—Vincent Beckels, 29, and John Burson — escaped as Beckel's automobile which was parked nearby.

Car Forced to Curb

Beckels and Hurson caught the cab and forced it to the curb. The cabbie, Peter Schiffel as Patrick Shanahan, fled. Suter surrendered.

Then McDermott pulled out a hunting knife and slashed Beckels' right hand.

The injured patrolman fell to the street as he managed to fire a shot. The bullet struck McDermott in the head. The two patrolmen had fired three other shots during the chase.

The explosion of the bomb blew all the lights in the taxi cut out and ignited two tavern booths. Most of the injuries were minor cuts and burns. The blast rocked the area and sent scores of persons in night clothes into the street from neighboring apartment buildings.

EIGHT WATCHES STOLEN

TORONTO (CP)—Eight watches valued at about $1,000 and $3,000 were stolen from the window of a Bathurst street jewellery store window Monday. The thief or thieves, under the cover of Christmas shopping crowds, jimmied the window showcase of the Henry Birks and Sons, Limited, store.

SIX-MONTH SENTENCE

GUELPH (CP)—Charles Shultis, 32, charged in the death of an 11-year-old boy who was knocked from his bicycle by an automobile, Monday was sentenced to six months for failing to remain at the scene of an accident. Shultis was arrested after Jan Sloot was killed Dec. 6. He was also convicted of dangerous driving and fined $1! and costs or an additional six months.

Signals Dynamite Blast Premier Frost Inspects Bethlehem Steel's Huge Iron Mine Project at Marmora

MARMORA (Staff) — Ontario's Premier Leslie M. Frost, waved the "red flag"; was "taken for a ride" and shown the start as the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's Hastings County giant iron ore project near here yesterday.

Premier Frost, amid the good-natured jibes of cabinet ministers, steel corporation officials, civic and government representatives and a battery of newspaper men loosed aloft the "scarlet banner" that was the signal for a 2,500-pound dynamite blast that hurled 22,000 tons of rock overburden into a smouldering mushroom of limestone debris.

He was "taken for a ride" on a $180,000 steam shovel that gouges 6½ yards of debris at one "dig" and loads 22 tons into 22-ton monster trucks in three helpings.

And twenty of these mechanical giants make 20,000 tons of limestone to dump daily, or a month's average of 750,000 tons.

Suggests Mining Museum

He was "shown the works" at an inspection of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's mining project two miles southeast of this mid-Hastings county village.

The inspection followed a luncheon at the corporation's well-appointed "Pioneer" club on the western outskirts of the village, which was addressed by Lome Marsh ons Chamber of Commerce.

Following the inspection and a visit to the Marmora Smelting and Refining Company's plant at Deloro, Premier Frost addressed a public meeting at the Plaza Theatre.

With the premier were the Hon. Phillip Kelly, minister of mines; the Hon. E. Richard Gemmell, minister; Dr. M. E. Hurst, provincial geologist; T. A. Richard, vice-president, Bethlehem Steel Corporation; S. J. Shale, manager, S. S. C.; H. O. Olsen, general superintendent; C. A. Lorenson, general superintendent; S. S. Shaul, assistor; A. H. Baxter, D. F. Coleman and J. D. Donaldson, engineers; M. Hnycke, counsellor, R. G. Wallace general manager, Deloro Smelting and Refining Company; Dr. Leonhard, manager and reeve of Deloro, Elmer Sandercock, MLA; Roscoe Robson, MLA; George S. White, M.P.; Lee Grills, Hastings county M.P.; Lee Grills, Hastings county warden; Mrs. Vincent Lynch of Marmora; R. Wells, reeve-elect; E. McCoy, reeve Marmora and Lake township; Vaughan Glover, president Lake Ontario Steel Company; R. Neal, secretary and executive members. Also present was Mrs. Thomas Scott, former minister of Lands and Forests.

Premier Frost opened with some amazement the transformation in a little over a year of a twenty-covered tract of some sixty acres, into a rocky pit that is gradually deepening as steam shovels bite deeply into its ore-bearing rock.

For 130 feet below the surface lie some 20 million tons of iron ore quartz. Thirty feet with ease of surface or "overburden" must be removed, blasted, dug-dirt reached. Then straight down for another 370 feet lies the precious ore.

This will be the "pit." After that underground operations will take place.

Will Concentrate Ore

The average grade of the ore is 27.5 per cent iron. As this ore is not of commercial grade it must be enriched by concentration. The concentrate produced will contain 58 per cent iron.

The limestone overburden is being drilled by rotary drills making a 6¾-inch diameter hole at a speed of 22 feet per hour. Two of these drills are being used as well as one 32-ton steam shovels. At present there are 200 men employed.

A Quonset hut is being used temporarily as a shop and warehouse during construction of permanent buildings.

A permanent machine-shop, carpenter shop, warehouse, truck service shop, change-house for showers, dispensary and offices is being constructed under one roof. The building will be 280 feet by 80 feet. Two wings, 130 by 40 feet will be added.

Design and construction of a hoist, crushing plant, conveyors and milling equipment for concentrating or enriching low grade ore are now under preparation. The ore will be ground very fine and converted into pellets about three-quarters of an inch in diameter. The pellets will be loaded into railway cars on a special company siding and shipped to the port-side at Picton, Ont.

When in production, it is estimated that raw ore and waste hauled from the pit in a single shift operation, will be 4,250 tons per day or 1,270,000 tons per year. The pellet, the final product, will reach a production of 1,750 tons per day or 500,000 tons per year.

To make this production it is estimated that the water consumption of oil will be 1,600,000 gallons. Over 5,500 tons of coal will be required. Some 16,000,000 gallons of water will be circulated through the mill daily. This water is recovered and re-circulated so that only 2,100 gallons per minute of new water will be required.

In Operation by 1954

The Canadian National Railway will haul the pellets from Marmora to the port-side at Picton. It is estimated that with a few minor bridge changes, the initial production will be handled with one train of 35 cars per day.

At Picton, ore dumping and docking facilities will be located on a bluff about 80 feet above water level. A large pit 800 feet in length and 150 feet in depth has been provided to receive the pellets. Its capacity will be 100,000 tons. By a special belt conveyor method, ships will be loaded at a rate of 1,500 tons per hour.

During the winter season, huge sheds will cover the pellets from the pit and stock-pile them along railway bank.

Following the inspection of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's project, Premier Frost and party went to Deloro when they were given a brief tour of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company's plant. Mr. Gemmell Manager-Smelter escorted the party on the tour which included a visit to the laboratory where copper is refined and where cobalt is processed. Other intricate operations of refining and moulding were viewed.

Jail Door Slams To Shut Out Would-be Inmate

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP)—Derek Pickering, who announced his brother spent Christmas in jail than pay a £2 parkiag fine, knocked at the jail door today but couldn't get in.

Jailers at Birmingham prison told the disappointed Pickering they weren't ready for him yet. They shut the door in his face.

Alleged Communist Atrocities May be Probed by Next Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representative Daniel Flood (Dem. Pa.) said today there is "no doubt whatsoever" that the incoming 83rd Congress will approve an investigation of alleged Communist atrocities in Korea.

Flood, a member of a special House of Representatives committee which has been investigating the Katyn forest massacre of the Second World War, said a bill authorizing such an inquiry probably will be introduced soon after the new Congress convenes Jan. 3.

Flood's statement followed the final report of the Katyn committee which found a striking similarity" between the massacre of 15,000 Polish officers early in the Second World War and the reported Communist atrocities against UN troops in Korea.

Flood called the mass murders in the Katyn forest near Smolensk, Russia some time after 1940 a "blueprint" for Communist plans to liquidate their enemies on a wholesale scale.

The committee recommended that the next Congress undertake such an investigation, stating in its report:

"Communist tactics being used in Korea are identical to those followed at Katyn."

There is no indication, however, that the committee itas evidence of the participation of UN troops or of incidents not reported a year or more ago in the Korean conflict.

The UN command then put the number of atrocities in Korea at about 8,000.

The committee's report, coming after more than a year's inquiry into the Katyn forest murders, laid the guilt on Russia and recommended that the Soviet Union be arraigned before the international world court by the general assembly of the United Nations.

But there appeared to be no way in which the Katyn massacre could be brought before the world court jurisdiction of the court in a case concerning her. Without such acceptance, she could not be brought in as a defendant.

DEVELOPMENT

"The future of Marmora was modelled along other lines in the early days," Premier Frost said. "The possibility, now at Kingston, was supposed to have been built here, but plans were changed.

Marmora now has a much greater prosperity in view than that conceived by those grand men of many years back.

The Ontario Government's efforts to bring oil from Alberta will make the province an economy complete. All it lacked was production of iron ore and oil, said Minister of Mines Kelly, Marmora is adding to another evidence that Ontario has everything to offer the investing public. He predicted that Ontario would soon be the industrial centre of not only Ontario but the country as well.

M. C. Rickaby, deputy minister of mines, said that the future of Eastern Ontario is being more and more tied up in the mining possibilities. He had every reason to believe further search would reveal other bodies in the district.

Brief addresses were given by Elmer Sandercock, M.L.A.; Geo. S. White, M.P.; Warden Lee Grills, Reeve Lorne Marsh, Mayor P. D. Entrekin, vice-president, Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Hon. Harold Scott.

Appointed General Sales Manager

K. A. McNAUGHT

Mr. C. A. Bateman, president and general manager of Bateman Motors Limited, today announced the appointment of K. A. McNaught to the position of general sales manager.

In 1947 Mr. McNaught first became associated with the company as parts manager, and later was promoted to service salesman, and later to the new and used vehicle department, and in 1950 was promoted to assistant manager.

In 1952 Mr. McNaught became sales manager of the company's new branch in Trenton and has served in that capacity until the opening of the new premises.

Mr. McNaught will now be in charge of all of the company's operations, which will include further expansion.

Mr. Bateman stated that the opening of the next branch would be announced early in 1953.

MORE WORKING

In addition to the seasonal peak levels of September and October,

"With harvesting completed and fall work well ahead, agricultural employment fell noticeably."

Construction work declined, though it was higher than last year. Work picked up in the forest industries, and trade and service businesses took on more workers for the Christmas rush.

By regions, here are the National Employment Service figures on job applications at Nov. 20, with the Oct. 23 totals bracketed:

Atlantic, 23,574 (17,267); Quebec, 55,740 (44,285); Ontario, 50,278 (45,518); Prairie, 22,289 (18,557); British Columbia, 17,284 (16,409).

Canadian Barley To Go to Korea

By RILL ROSS
Canadian Press Correspondent

SEOUL (CP) — Canadian barley will be used as a food supplement to help overcome a bare shortage in battle-torn Korea.

The United Nations Korea reconstruction agency has purchased about 52,500,000 worth of Canadian barley to reach this country in about six weeks' time. The Canadian purchase was announced.

Altogether three shiploads, or about 5,000 tons, will reach the Canadian grain, are covered in the deal.

A VOTE OF THANKS

Canada has become singularly indebted to Josef Vissarionovich Stalin. It is strange that we should owe Uncle Joe a hearty vote of thanks but he has rendered us a signal service in designating James G. Endicott as a recipient of the "coveted" Stalin Peace Prize.

There will be no longer any phony pretences that the erstwhile Canadian missionary has been moved by Christian concern for the well-being of the Chinese people among whom he lived and worked for so many years. The citation by Stalin can leave no doubt that the spiritual home of Mr. Endicott is in Moscow, that his cause is the cause of Stalin, and his purpose to advance the designs of the Kremlin in this country primarily, and everywhere ultimately.

Whatever illusions were still being entertained by former colleagues of the one-time missionary they have been completely shattered. For the well-meaning folk who have believed that Mr. Endicott was indeed high-minded in his peace campaigns as an impartial observer, his true colors have been revealed.

And he has been so revealed by the indelible stamp of approval of Stalin himself. The whole world knows today that if there is a single man who could have valid qualifications for a peace award in the last year that man is Pandit Nehru whose plan for peace in Korea was rejected only a few days ago by Stalin, and with the fawning approval last week of Mr. Endicott at Uncle Joe's great "peace congress" in Vienna.

HUMOR AT LOW EBB IN COMMONS

Until the sensational Currie Report on army camp lootings galvanized the tempo of House of Commons debates press gallery correspondents were agreed that the session had been unusually dull and that Ottawa recess was a performance as dull and dreary as any they have seen.

Even when front benchers were in action they were lucky to have an audience of fifty or sixty of the 265 members of the House, and of these, probably a third paid any attention whatever to the speaker, while others read newspapers, wrote letters or chatted with colleagues about the most of the people's representatives were in their own offices attending to correspondence from constituents and preparing the questions and interjections which would be just as dull and warranting as little attention.

Only a few leading party apostles speak extemporaneously though there is a House rule against reading speeches. The result is that there is little cut and thrust of debating technique which one might associate with the exchanges between political antagonists in the Commons, and repartee of a lively sort is negligible... The UN session in the last month had removed the voices of such polished performers as John Diefenbaker and Mike Pearson. But at best the House of this day is a far cry from the moving oratory of the late R. B. Bennett or the brilliant rhetoric of Arthur Meighen in other years.

But even with the rare flillip to forensic effort which was provided by the Currie report disclosures, members, particularly the Conservative opposition members, say they were at such pains in registering shocked indignation at such goings-on as brazen thievery that the priceless spectacle of enlisted heroes on army payrolls almost entirely escaped their attention.

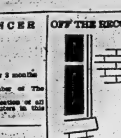
It was the third or fourth day of debate on the report before one Conservative member rose to the occasion. It was at a time when Acting Defence Minister Claxton had almost restored Liberal backbenchers to heart with his careful defence of the Defence Department's record.

Then came the defence effort," he declared with fervor," calls for co-ordination of all these elements, service, civilian, research, and . . ." "And the horses," roared Julian Reynolds (Simcoe North) from the chamber floor. That one thrust dissolved the House in laughter with even the worried Liberals joining.

It is a strange thing to us that someone in Opposition didn't at least suggest that the Government owed no less to the defendant horses than to retain Lady Wonder, Richmond's famed equine oracle and mouthpiece as counsel in the case. Indeed it is a strange thing to us that someone that however unreal the enlisted horses might be there was nothing imaginary about the nightmares some Liberal members have been experiencing of late when they have contrasted the Conservatives about scurrying up an 'oat fund' to keep the payroll horses in frisky fettle until they can be turned out to pasture on the hustings! It seems to us that a lot of ready opportunities for effective "nagging" went begging. Apparently in the House of today a wink is as good as a nod to a — but what's the use of flogging a dead one?

We feel obliged however to except the honorable member for Grey North East, Gordon Francis Higgins, Q.C., from any implication that the Commons is without a single member with a sense of humor. A day or two before the Currie report come to the House, Mr. Higgins brightened the first page of the Hansard report of the day's proceedings for Thursday, December 11, in these words:

"Mr. Speaker, today marks the fourth anniversary of the signing of the terms of union between Canada and Newfoundland. In spite of the somewhat shotgun character of the marriage, may I say that the union has been pretty happy. My purpose in rising at this time is not to comment on that fact but to present a petition from Newfoundland, the first that has been presented from that province."



For Friday, December 12, the first page of the Hansard report again quoted Mr. Higgins, in these words:

"Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a correction in Hansard of yesterday. In presenting a petition I stated that it was the first petition from Newfoundland. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre has drawn my attention to the fact there have been a number of divorce petitions so I wish to change what I have said and say that this is the first unadultered petition."

Thank you, Mr. Higgins. We will be watching for you in Hansard after this.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 22, 1932

Miss Elsie Cole is home from Whitby to spend the Christmas vacation with her parents at their home on Gordon street.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Rose and baby of Morrisburg are spending the Christmas holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ridley in the city.

Before the last bag of potatoes is given out by members of the Red Cross Society one hundred and ninety needy families in the city will have been cared for by the local boys in blue. This year saw an even spreading of names handed in to the members of the executive committee. A list in the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty names the list has now mounted to almost the two hundred mark. Huge quantities of vegetables and apples, honey, flour, apples and other goods have been donated so far and more will be given out before the end of the week. The list is given all members of the department as well as the public. Thanks is credited with organizing the dance from which the necessary funds were obtained and who was assisted by Assistant Chief Gerald Vance.

Something Different This Year

(From The New York Times)

It was quite some time before the head of the house was able to discover why getting ready for Christmas, 1952, seemed to be just a little different from the approach to Christmas past. He noted the same general air of enthusiasm radiating from the several members of the family and the same pre-holiday scrambling about from store to store in search of gifts, the same anxious scrutiny of personal budgets, and the same pre-occupied hush in the kitchen as the lady of the house that meant she was trying to remember the names of people to whom, last July, she had made mental note to send Christmas cards and whose names she now could not recall.

There were in this year as always, the same protestations from the better half of the house to the effect that she did not want the head of the house to give her anything—not anything, that is, except that which the head of the house dutifully replied that he did not want the senior lady of the house to give him anything, that this little ritual had been observed ever since there were children in the house, being a matter of record that custom was intended principally for them, and that only a couple of days before Christmas both the senior lady of the house and the head of the house would begin to have qualms, and on Christmas morning there would be a phone call from her to him, would be found under his bed, and the head of the house had an idea that this coming Christmas morning would be like the others, junior lady of the house would have made note of the perfume currently favored by the lady of the house and had made sure of the size of her stockings.

This year, as always, the children had been somewhat mixed-minded as to what they would like to find in their stockings on Christmas morning, and — what is equally important — what they would not like to find in their stockings. But the writer of this article is not to be trusted gracefully in these matters, for he has been prefers to call droopy gifts. Christmas should be a time to avoid, if possible, droopy gifts and lay one's plans so as not to acquire presents that might fall into that unpleasant category. With that in mind, head of the house has been planning a few hints of his own, hoping that he will not be disappointed this Christmas, with the droopy cigars bestowed upon him lovingly by his children last year.

Raking over a desk drawer in search of a wedding letter, the head of the house came across a picture of a chubby young man seated on the floor of a bathroom, studying a picture such as may be available in a life magazine. The young man patiently bends and ear to the requests of his little friends in the Santa's knee, wearing an expression of dazed delight, was the youngest member of the family. Was this picture taken a year ago? Two years ago? The senior lady of the house, coming along just then, answered the question: it was last year, she said, when photographer on Santa's knee. It was now clear to the head of the house why there was a shortage in this household of the clown, the lower lid, nose, gums and teeth or upper jaw; the third branch to the lower jaw.

Last summer I suggested the solutions of trichloryleine for the relief of tic douloureux, and mentioned that it is available only through prescription of your own physician.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

RELIEF FOR TIC DOULOUREUX

This is not a cure, but merely a relief. Here is what one sufferer reports:

"Upon reading your article I asking my doctor, who kindly gave me the necessary prescription for the trichlorethylene. I started using it, and immediately received relief. I have been using it for about five weeks now, as directed, and at least know what it is to be without constant pain ...certainly wish to thank you for having written that article. It is a wonderful feeling...after five years of living with it day and night...

The correspondent adds that several druggists in his vicinity told him trichlorethylene is now obsolete and hence they could not fill the prescription, but he obtained it eventually through an industrial plant where it is used in laboratory work.

We are told by industrial plant that the peculiar effect of inhalations of trichlorethylene was first observed, by Plesmer in 1934. Persons exposed to it felt a loss of sensibility over the area supplied by the trifacial nerve. Plesmer began to use some pharmaceutical houses supplied trichlorethylene in tiles, (415 drops) sealed glass tubes which the patient could crush in gauze or handkerchief to inhale it the same way patients with angina pectoris carry nitrites.

That's all I can tell you about the remedy. Some other doctor brushes his suggestion aside as "too good" or "too dangerous" until they have tried it on what your doctor deems good or safe enough.

Barracuda Strikes Once

(National Geographic Bulletin)

The biting habits of fish are unpredictable, and perhaps the most uncomfortable unpredictable of all is the great barracuda (Sphyraena barracuda), because it bites not only fishermen's baits, but sometimes human beings.

There are few fish in the sea that can equal the barracuda's bloodthirsty reputation.

This population often sends swimmers scurrying for shore when unknown fish are sighted offshore. Often such sightings and alarms are groundless, as large barracuda do not school and fish found near beaches in groups are usually lone hunters.

However, great barracuda do attack swimmers, and the attack is easily identified. Usually it is like teeth along both sides of one's flesh are torn away, straight cut that can cause a serious leg wound or even sever an arm at the wrist.

Many attacks attributed to sharks are the work of barracuda, but a shark bite can be identified by its curving edges, matching a shark's mouth. And a shark will return for further attacks, often upsetting its prey. A barracuda usually strikes only once.

Divers in the West Indies, where both shark and barracuda abound, report that barracuda as a rule are cowards and can be frightened away from swimmers. Barracuda are said to have poor eyesight, are very curious and have a violent temper. When they attack it is with lightning speed and the fish are seldom seen. On the other hand, the barracuda has been known to approach a person in full view, then shrink back and swim away with satisfied curiosity.

The great barracuda is only one of 21 known species of the fish, ranging from tropical Atlantic to Florida and the West Indies to Brazil. Smaller species are found in the tropics the world over, and the Pacific coast species is the California barracuda. The barracuda are considered good food fish, although the flesh of larger ones is widely believed to be unpalatable or poisonous.

In appearance the barracuda is a supremely streamlined, pencil-like—a long fish with a vicious-looking, undershot, tooth-filled jaw. The great barracuda reaches a length of six feet and weight of 100 pounds. Smaller, it is other fish and occasionally squid.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SOMETHING TO DO

Like children, if we always have something to do, we are not very liable to get into trouble. The idler is never a happy person. Of course, we must have things to do that are worth while. Only in the doing of interesting things, is there any satisfaction in the stimulated desire to create.

The main cause for the discontent of many people is that it does not choose something to do that they like. Many people who love their work keep growing in mind and increasing ability to do things better, and the thrills keep coming. A wider horizon of life is created. We think that it is the reward for work well done. We feel refreshment, after the regular work of the day is over. This can be gained by an interesting hobby or by interest in reading to improve the working of the mind, or by mastering some sort of a game. There are so many things to do that add to our personal pleasure and happiness, if we but organize ourselves. A person wrapped up in his little world is a dull bird.

Many years ago I read a most interesting biography of Cecil Rhodes. The statesman, as I later became known as "The Empire Builder" South Africa. It was reported that the last words of this remarkable man were, "So much to do, so little done." People who live long and useful lives always have much to accomplish go on, but they have no complaint to make. The late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes said in a radio talk at the age of ninety: "I have no fear of retirement."

People with nothing to do fail to take advantage of the wonderful possibility — to function, to be interested and enthusiastic. It doesn't matter what we put our minds to so long as that thing is stimulating, worth while, and warmed to useful action. We do many things for the sole purpose personal pleasure. And that is as it should be. It all adds up to a balanced life.

Avoid Tragedy At Christmas

(Toronto Star)

The current bulletin of the Ontario Safety League on Christmas contains a reminder that the pretty and pleasing glowing Christmas tree can be a fire hazard if care and thought-lessness are exercised. Electrical illumination, of course, offers more safety than candles, but even the electric cords, plastic and other materials which are used in decorating may be a source of danger.

It is high time the warning that flaring candles should not be used for tree decorations, the following suggestions, issued by Dr. W. Wallace McKay of the Ontario safety and maternal health bureau, to make sure that Christmas will be both safe and happy:

Inspect tree lights carefully, each year, to make sure there are no frayed cords or bare wires. Only government-inspected and approved equipment should be used.

Do not place tree too near to lights on the same circuit to avoid dangerous overloading.

Keep the tree as fresh and moist as possible. A dry tree is a fire hazard. As a rule two days after the tree moist is to stand it in water at least two inches. Bottom of the trunk should be cut diagonally, to permit greater absorption of water.

Do not place tree near radiator, stove or fireplace. Water should it be placed near major exists from the room.

When the tree becomes dry or brittle, or when needles begin to fall, it is time to take it down.

While the tree is standing, have a fire extinguisher, bucket of water or garden hose ready for use in emergencies. A dry Christmas tree burns like tinder. It will be well to turn the lights when no one is in the room with the tree.

Only non-combustible decorations should be used.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

RIGHT AND WRONG

Moral customs vary from time to time. A recent study in the early nineteenth century gentlemen might still risk killing or maiming one another in duels for the sake of what they called honor. Even earlier in duels for the sake of what they called honor. Even earlier in duels young unmarried women of good family were kept in the nunneries crowded. Even today such customs as trial marriage practiced in several parts of the world would be severely frowned upon in our society.

Is there, then, no fixed set of moral standards upon which we can depend? Are right and wrong just temporary classifications, determined by the customs of the time for the convenience of preachers and teachers in an ever-changing world? Some people would like us to think so.

But there is one unshakable code. It has lasted for more than three thousand years already, and it is known to more people now than ever before. Its influence is reflected in the laws of all the nations of Europe and North America. Its authorship is secret. It is the Ten Commandments.

Brief as the Ten Commandments are, they deal with life's fundamental issues—man's relationship with God, his parents, his wife, his community. Admittedly they do not contain detailed instructions for meeting all of life's complex problems. But to know them and follow them is still the firmest foundation for successful daily living.

JUST FOLKS

GOSSIP AT BETHLEHEM

Just as women talk today
When bits of news are brought to them,
They must have talked the selfsame way
That Christmas morn at Bethlehem.

"A couple in a serious plight,
Hungry and tired and travel-worn,
Were sent to the stable for the night
And in a stall a child was born.

"I've seen the mother where she lies
On straw, spread thickly on the floor,
But there was something in her eyes
Which I have never seen before.

"She seemed so radiant when she smiled,
As if some secret deep she knew;
A happy mother with her child,
And strangely she had callers, too,

"While I was there some shepherds came
Who said they'd journeyed from afar
To see the child and praise his name.
Led to the stable by a star.

"I'm wondering how could it be
Shepherds would leave their flock of sheep
And walk to Bethlehem to see
A baby in a manger sleep?"

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Having done my own Christmas shopping last October, I have found time to visit around the shops the last couple of days in order to report to you readers, without bias, on any aspects of last minute shopping.

The first of my findings is that the people who count all the jam today and tomorrow are people who don't know what they want, have no idea what they will be found, haven't a clue, and are in a condition very close to somnambulism, which means they are walking in their sleep.

They are both women and men; both young and old; and in all instances they have wandered about the stores in a state of hypnosis. They are crowd-drugged. No doubt they have down-town with a rough idea of what they wanted to do and buy; but within a few minutes of being caught in the vast human molasses which flows and creeps through the great stores, a kind of coma or stupor began to steal over them it is like anesthesia. Their mental and conscious thought was: "I'll just walk around and get an idea..."

But the miasma of Christmas rose up all around them, from all sides, from the crowds surging through, moving as in a slow-motion movie. And they walked in relief, in the black-out cane. And there they wander drifting with the inhuman rush hour, in that way, fearfully avoiding all eyes, with fixed, glassy look in their eyes, slightly perspiring, comatose.

If you haven't done your Christmas shopping until the last awful minute, here is a suggestion. It is not going to help this sad fate. Read this paper, right now, and close it and go to bed. Vertisements of the things you want to buy. If there are pictures of the things you want to buy. Don't trust to a written list. It will be impossible when the Christmas fog gets you.

Now, just before you enter the first store or shop, on arriving down-town, stick these advertisements, if you are a man, all around the band of your hat. If a lady, pin them to your lapels. By this means, the kindly store staff can guide and direct you. Remember the signs you wear, and you will probably escape home with most of the things you went after.

Christmas Concert

S.S. 12 SIDNEY

The pupils of Brookdale school presented their annual Christmas concert on Thursday evening before a packed school. Mr. Elmer Smith capably acted as chairman while the new music teacher, Miss Rhea [illegible], of Frankford, presided over the music and accompanied the children on the piano.

The school started the program with two choruses — "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day," and "It's Beginning to Look a Lot Like Christmas", followed by words of welcome from Arleen Dodds and Johnny Dodgeon. The girls of grade 7 and 8 sang "C-H-R-I-S-T-M-A-S," Sandra Gardner recited "The Turkey's Lament," and grade 1 sang five short songs.

After a few remarks by the chairman, the dialogue, "Painting a Chair," was put on. The senior boys favored with two choruses — "Mark the Herald Angels Sing," and "Santa Claus is Coming."

Before the chorus "Willie Claus," Dorothy Brown, dressed in suitable costume, recited "The Poor Crippled Dolly."

Comedy

The senior pupils now staged a comedy, "Benny's Mail Order Wife." After this, grades 1-4 sang "Frosty, the Snowman," "Christmas Cake Song," and put on a patriotic spelling "Merry Christmas." Marilyn Phillips rendered a piano solo, followed by a religious dialogue interspersed with the following carols, in pairs — "O List to the Story that Never Grows Old," "Star of the East," "Away in a Manger," "We Three Kings," and "Silent Night." Miss Rose played "The Fairies Dance," for a piano solo which was so heartily encored, she also played "Moonlight on the St. Lawrence."

The exciting moment of the evening came now. Mrs. Elmer Smith had made and donated a beautifully decorated three-layer Christmas Cake. The children sold 562 worth of tickets on it. The lucky ticket was drawn by little Miss Jean Rose, the winner being Mr. Morley Sine.

Thanks Tendered

Mr. Harold Frost, chairman of the school board, moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Smith for her kindness to the children in donating the cake. Mr. Clarence Copeland moved a vote of thanks to the music teacher and commented on the marked improvement in the music. Mr. Smith also voiced appreciation to the teacher, Mrs. Clare, for her part in training the children.

Proceeds of the concert and cake were $58.58 which will be used for baseball equipment and rhythm band instruments.

After singing the National Anthem, "Santa" arrived and unloaded the heavily laden tree of gifts and candy.

ST. JOHN'S ANGLICAN S.S.

Bancroft. — The parish hall of St. John's Anglican church, was filled with happy children Wednesday evening on the occasion of the annual Christmas party.

Several carols were sung by a quintet consisting of Marlene Thompson, Ruth Broughton, Diane Broughton, Anne Mullett and Anna Robbins. The girls were joined by the audience in a number of the carols. Reg. Blatherwick assisted at the piano.

A reading by Diane Broughton on the subject, "Queen Victoria" and a duet by Joyce Wiggins and Peggy O'Shaughnessy were much enjoyed by all.

Refreshments were served during the concert by the ladies of the W.A. with special treats of ice cream and chocolate milk for the kiddies.

Santa Claus arrived amid loud cheers of approval. He distributed many gifts and bags of candies assisted in this task by Mrs. Reg. Blatherwick.

The pastor, Rev. Walter Smith, and Mrs. Smith, were presented with a floor lamp on behalf of the congregation. Mr. Smith thanked the members of his congregation and expressed appreciation of the efforts of the W.A. in the past.

UNITED CHURCH S. S.

FRANKFORD—The Frankford United Church Sunday School held its annual Christmas concert in the community hall Friday night with a fine attendance. Mr. Sid Mewin, superintendent of the Sunday School acted as chairman, assisted by Paul Patrick and Don Phillips.

The program was as follows: "A Welcome," by Lynn Harrington; "A Jolly Day in Christmas," by Anne Harrington; class exercise, "Our Brother," a song by Mrs. Johns' class and Helen Charlesworth's class; a recitation, "Long Long Ago," by Vlasta Rabel; song, "Watching For Santa," by Mrs. Don Couture's class; "Merry Christmas," by Mrs. Tony Lawrence's class; recitation by Gwilyn Carlisle; a play, "Some Girls Have Everything," by Ann Woodcox's class; monologue, "Just Before Christmas," by Gary Harrington; "Stories of Jesus," by Mrs. Wessell's class, assisted by Glenna Wannamaker; acrostic by Anne Harrington's class; "That Christmas Dinner," by Bill Church; "A Christmas Song of Holland," by Mrs. Powell's class; "Christmas Dollies," by Mrs. Tony Lawrence's class; "Star of the East," by Kathleen and Ruth Bentzell; play, "Polly Put the Presents On," by Mrs. Sid Martin's class; "Shop Early," by Mervin Dafoe's class; "Intermediate Light Opera Company," by Gene Lohnes' class; "Monologue," by Kathleen Bonisteel; "The True Meaning of Christmas," Marilyn Wannamaker's class, assisted by Beverley Patrick; "Nativity Scene," Dorothy Moran's class; "Flower Drill," by Mrs. Everett Hall's class; a song, "Willy Claus," by Sharon Bush, Mildred Jones and Phyllis Hemley play, Canopener Christmas," by Mrs. Ken Lawrence class; "Fairy Lord Jesus," by older girls' choir, directed by Mrs. Sid Martin.

Superintendent Sid Martin called all officers and teachers to the platform and thanked them for the work they had done in preparing the concert. The audience gave them a hearty applause, and a loud "Merry Christmas."

Santa Claus made his appearance just as the program ended, shaking hands with the kiddies as he made his way up the centre aisle. Treats were given out by Santa to the children and gifts from the tree were distributed. It was noteworthy that folks co-operated splendidly with the committee, by limiting the number of presents on the tree.

Fingerprints Trip Seguin Wanted For Murder

CORNWALL (CP)—Fingerprints tripped up Henry Seguin half a continent away from the police who held a warrant for his arrest on a murder charge.

Seguin, wanted in the Aug. 18 slaying of Leonard Hurd, Maxville, Ont., business man, was identified Monday by Inspector William H. Lougheed as the guntoting bandit wounded in a blaze of revenge shots near Williams Lake, B.C. last Tuesday.

Inspector Lougheed, head of the criminal investigation department of the provincial police, said at Toronto that Seguin was wounded in a battle with the RCMP near Williams Lake after a holdup of a branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce there.

Taken to Hospital

He said Seguin was taken to hospital and charged with attempted murder of bank manager Leonard Hillier and with armed robbery.

Identification of Seguin ended a four-month search by Ontario provincial police and by the brutal murder of Hurd, 41-year-old Maxville garage and taxi owner.

Hurd's body, with three .22 bullet holes in the head and two in the chest, was discovered in one of his own taxis about a mile outside Maxville, 30 miles north of Cornwall. A small club bag was found in the back seat and in it was Hurd's driver discharge certificate. After issuance of the warrant provincial police circulated Seguin's fingerprints across the country.

Police said Hurd had been robbed of between $1,000 and $1,700. They said they found no other sums of money on his person. He was believed lured to the death scene by a motorist pleading by telephone he was out of gas.

Seen in Maxville

Police said then that Seguin was seen in Maxville the night of the killing and that near the spot where Hurd's body was found, Inspector Robert Wansell, head of charge of the intensive hunt for Seguin in his district next year [illegible] will go to Williams Lake to question Seguin. Inspector Lougheed said further disposition of the case was "a matter of a conference with the police there."

Seguin's arrest came a little more than a month after his car was found abandoned in Quebec about 75 miles northeast of Cornwall.

Seguin, travelling under various aliases in B.C., was charged there under the name of Henry James Redford.

17 MINERS RESCUED

LONDON (Reuters)—Seventeen Hungarian miners were rescued Monday night after being trapped for six days in a flooded coal mine, Budapest radio reported. Most miners working in the Borsod pit escaped when it was flooded, but the 17 were trapped in the deepest tunnel.

HITS TRAIN, LIVES

AYLMER, Ont. (CP)—Dr. George E. Harrison, 33, Aylmer veterinarian, died Monday of his demolished car with only minor cuts and bruises. Harrison told police he ran into a freight train at a level crossing about 2½ miles north of here. The impact derailed a box car.

Ship in Distress

The 10,000-ton Canadian freighter Maplecove ran into trouble 1,200 miles out of Vancouver. The vessel, returning from a voyage to the Orient, lay helpless with a broken rudder in a fierce Pacific storm, with gales up to 60 miles an hour. The Mapleccve is under command of Capt. R. A. Leicester of Burnaby, B.C., and carries 65 crew members. — (CP Photo.)

MARSH HILL

CHRISTMAS SERVICE

MARSH HILL—Christmas service was held Sunday morning at Marsh Hill Church, which was well filled and the singing of the Christmas hymns was led by a full choir. The pastor, Rev. H. Giffin, was in charge of the service.

The special music for the service was a solo, "Brightest and Best of the Sons of the Morning", by Miss Eva Giffin, and also one by Mr. Farley Lindenfield, "Holy Night".

Mr. Giffin delivered an inspiring sermon on the subject, "Wise Men of Today".

Mr. Giffin extended to all the season's greetings and thanked all for the cards which they had received at the parsonage.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mrs. Casey Ketcheson, nee Mr. Bill Ketcheson, of Trenton, visited Mr. Ritchie Ketcheson, in Kingston, recently. Mr. Ketcheson is improving.

Mrs. Campbell and pupils and their mothers had a Christmas party at Quinte View School on Friday morning. School is out for over two weeks and the children are enjoying the skating and tobogganing.

A Christmas concert was held at Bayside School on Friday evening under the direction of Mrs. Veitch, Mrs. Middleton and Miss Doreen Middleton.

A fine carol service was held in White's Church on Sunday afternoon following the Sunday School service. The large choir under the direction of Mrs. R. W. T. Middleton and the pianist, Mrs. Floyd Dudley, sang many of the lovely old carols. They also sang "They Dwelt in Old Judea" in parts, as follows: Duet, Misses Joan and Barbara Shoemaker; senior and junior girls, girls and boys, and junior girls with all joining in on the chorus.

The Rev. R. W. T. Middleton based his Sermon on the shepherds, and the Babe in the manger.

Weddings

BENNETT—FRYER

Beautiful white chrysanthemums adorned the candlelit altar of St. Ann's Church for the early winter wedding at Thursday, November 20, which united in marriage Beverly Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Fryer, of Flin Flon and Richard James Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Bennett, of Point Anne, Ontario.

Tulle bows marked the baskets of white mums, which decorated the altar railing, and white tulle bows on the guest pews completed the all-white setting.

The double ring ceremony and Nuptial Mass took place at ten o'clock in the morning with Rev. Father James McGrath officiating.

As the traditional Wedding March was played by Mrs. Ron Price, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She presented a charming picture in her all-white wedding ensemble, her gown being fashioned of nylon net and lace over satin. The strapless bodice was topped with a bottoned lace jacket, which was styled with wide revers, a V-shaped neckline and long lily-point sleeves fastened at the wrist with three tiny self buttons. The tiered ballerina length skirt, worn over a crinoline, was fashioned with ruffles, which billowed from the hipline to the edge of the skirt.

Her fingertip veil of nylon net, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, misted from a heart-shaped tiara which was encrusted with pearl pearls and silver beads. Her only ornament was a strand of small pearls and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and fern, accented with shaded mums on the streamers.

Miss Kathleen Fryer, who was her sister's maid of honor, wore a pretty ballerina length gown of white taffeta, worn over a crinoline. The matching nylon lace jacket, bottomed at the neckline, was styled with three-quarter length sleeves. She wore matching miniature, bandeau headdress of yellow tea roses and carried a Colonial bouquet of yellow tea roses.

Robert Fryer was best man and Mrs. James Allen, who was soloist, sang "On This Day", "Panis Angelicus", and at the signing of the register, "Ave Maria."

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at Johnny's Dining Room and in the early evening a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Company Apartment 10, Suite 2, where the white floral theme was carried out in the decorative motif.

Assisting in receiving were the parents of the bride, Mrs. Fryer, Cross, for her daughter's wedding, a frock of navy blue crepe, black accessories and a corsage of red roses.

A three-tiered wedding cake, flanked with tall white tapers, centred the attractively appointed bride's table, which was covered with a lace cloth.

Father McGrath fittingly proposed the toast to the bride at the wedding breakfast and messages of congratulations were read from Winnipeg, Salt Lake City, Utah, Oakland, California; Swan River, Man.; Point Anne, Ont.; Victoria, B.C. Summerland, B.C.; Ellenberg, Washington, and Belleville, Ont.

The happy young couple left by car for a honeymoon trip through the United States to Victoria, B.C., and will be at home to their friends after December 1.

For travelling the bride donned a smartly styled navy gabardine suit, with black accessories, topped with a mouton fur coat with which she wore a corsage of white daisy 'mums.

Mr., Mrs. C. Bailey Celebrate 40th Anniversary

A happy time was spent at the Masonic Temple Hall, Roslin, last Thursday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey, of Roslin, celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary with a surprising dinner, for which the United Church W.A. catered, under the convenership of Mrs. Ernest Colleton.

The 75 guests were received by the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey; Mrs. Bailey attractively attired in a navy sheer with lace trim and a corsage of pink carnations.

On December 16, 1912, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Holmes, Remington, their daughter, Mabel, became the bride of Charles Bailey, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bailey of Cooper, with the Reverend G. E. Ross officiating. Later they left by horse and buggy for a one-week honeymoon at Foxboro and Belleville.

The dinner tables were arranged in the form of a T with the bride and bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. S. Belgham, sister of the bride, and the immediate family seated at the cross-fetil brought back vivid memories of the happy memorable day.

Following the dinner, the Reverend Hope Smith, of Calvary Temple, Belleville, read the congratulatory vocal numbers to his own accompaniment on the piano selection, assisted by the Reverend Laurie Price, also of Calvary Temple. Lovely colored films were shown by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Way, of Trenton, of their recent trip to British Columbia and the Maritimes. Little Bobby Belgham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Bailey, also added his quota to the festivities by a Christmas recitation.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey have three children, two sons, Norman and Gerald, both of Roslin; and one daughter, Mrs. Reginald Scott, (Alitha), of Foxboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey were the recipients of several fine gifts in ruby color, as well as those of silver, by which they expressed their appreciation and thanks.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride was an electric teakettle.

All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Bailey good health for the future, and a joyous 50th anniversary.

Zion W. A. Elects Officers

Zion's Women's Association held its December meeting recently at the home of Mrs. T. J. Bateman, in Marmora Village.

It commenced with a pot luck dinner at which 13 members and two visitors were present.

The retiring president, Mrs. Ford Chambers, took the chair for the business of the afternoon. Scripture reading were taken by Mrs. Ed. Robinson and Mrs. Wilson Coe. Christmas carols were sung by the members.

New Officers

Following the routine of general business, new officers for 1953 were elected as follows:

President, Mrs. George Fox; vice-president, Mrs. Gordon Moffatt; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Garnet McCann.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended the retiring president for her years of faithful service in that capacity.

Next year the exchange of Christmas gifts.

It was decided to hold the January meeting at the home of Mrs. Ed. Robinson, Malone.

Airwomen Get New Lounge At Trenton

Trenton — Marking yet another step towards more enjoyable leisure hours for members of the women of RCAF Station, Trenton, Air Commodore W. W. Brown, C.D., Chief Staff Officer RCAF, Training Command, on Saturday, cut the ribbon to officially open the spacious building set aside for the exclusive use of the airwomen.

The Air Commodore was welcomed to the beautifully appointed lounge by Leading Airwoman J. F. Holland, president of the Airwomen's canteen and lounge committee, and Flying Officer N. M. Ross, the committee's honorary president.

The building itself is conveniently located just across the road from the girls' quarters. It is divided into two parts, the canteen and games room occupying one half, the other half being a lounge and reading room.

Pleasing Appearance

The lounge portion of the building "demonstrates how one of the older type of buildings can be tastefully redecorated and adapted to produce a lounge of inviting atmosphere and pleasing appearance. Furnished with comfortable leather chesterfields in pastel shades and carpeted and draped in colors of harmonious blends, the lounge is sure to be a popular place for the many Trenton-area Air Force Officers. Lighting is provided solely through the use of table and floor lamps, these together with floral decorations are placed in such a manner as to give the room a soft homey atmosphere.

A radio-phonograph combination will provide a generous supply of popular and classical records and from the room will a musical assist bound to take the chill of the long winter nights. For the more active side of life there is the games room with its ping pong table, dart board, and the inevitable jute box. Here the girls can at times for a change try out the latest dance step in preparation for the next guest nights per week. On Friday and Saturday they are permitted to invite their friends or escorts in for a sociable evening.

CHRISTMAS OF CHILDHOOD

Christmas times I sit and ponder
On the days that used to be
And I see the stockings hanging
By the fireside in a row;
Then the happy thoughts of childhood
Bring me back to long ago.

In the morning stuffed so tight,
What a scramble to discover
Gifts old Santa brought at night

How we gathered 'round the table
Faces red and round as moons,
Watching mother stuffed the dressing
Deftly using fork and spoon;
Getting in her way quite often
"Learnin' how" our sole excuse,
But our patient mother's exhausted
Watching mother stuff the goose.

We are grown, but often children
Hall with joy the Christmas cheer,
Hang their stockings by the chimney
Sweet their childish faith, and dear;
That each childish heart be happy
In the merry Christmas time,
Gifts we'll bring the trusting children
For the sake of "Auld Lang Syne."

DOGS UP TAX RATE

DURHAM, Ont. (CP)—Operations of sheep-killing dogs this year in Glenelg township are going to cost ratepayers there an additional two mills on the 1953 tax rate. Township officials reported Monday the extra levy was necessary to meet claims for close to $3,000 made by district farmers whose sheep flocks have been attacked by marauding dogs.

Harmony Studio Club Holds 'Carol Night'

On Saturday night, the Harmony Studio Club held a 'Carol Night' at the Salvation Army Citadel. Mrs. C. Scott, president of the Club, welcomed the members, and visiting guests.

The pupils of Mrs. E. Veley, R.M.C., were in a gay and festive mood as they took part in the program, and in turn, the large audience was most receptive. The program consisted of piano, vocal and singing of carols, several duets, interspersed by vocal numbers. As each carol was played Mrs. Scott outlined its origin.

Those taking part in the program were; Edna Hubble, Gordon Fudge, Heather Scott, Jeanette Horton, Sandra Burns, Sylvia Anderson, Wayne Flindell, Joanne Twining, Laurie Bowerbank, Patricia Chisholm, Wayne Wickett, Monty Flindell, Penny Tebworth, Wayne and Karen Flindell, Randell and Mary Cox-Ellis, Richard Hancock, Deirdre Sutton, Joyce Blackburn, Barbara Smith, Lois Bailey, Roger Lee, Dorothy Adams, Catharine Millard, Eileen Hancock and Gloria Whittle.

Duet numbers were played by the following: Peter and Nancy Tebworth, Wayne and Karen Flindell, Randell and Mary Cox-Ellis, Richard Hancock, Deirdre Sutton, Joyce Blackburn, Barbara Smith, Lois Bailey, Roger Lee, Dorothy Adams, Catharine Millard, Eileen Hancock and Gloria Whittle.

Duet numbers were played by the following: Jolly Old St. Nicholas' by little Susan Hunter, accompanied by his sister Marilyn Hunter; 'The Night Before Christmas', by Anna Gray, accompanied by Mrs. Veley; 'Away in a Manger' by Sharon McDowald, accompanied by Mrs. Veley.

Mrs. Scott, on behalf of the Harmony Studio Club, expressed thanks to Mrs. Veley for her time and efforts in preparing the pupils for the program. Sandra Kenny, on behalf of the pupils presented Mrs. Veley with a beautiful bouquet of red carnations, which she tendered appreciative thanks.

Treats were distributed to pupils and visiting children.

Simple Hints On Care Of Cut Flowers

With a little care the life of cut flowers can be prolonged considerably. As Christmas is a time when flowers are often given as gifts, Dr. A. P. Chase, chief of the greenhouses at the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, offers some simple hints on the proper treatment of cut flowers.

Sometimes flowers are wilted or show signs of wilting soon after arrival. They can be revived by cutting the stem ends and immersing the flowers in water right up to, but not covering the blooms, and placing them in a cool dark location for six hours or even longer.

When putting the flowers in vases cut the stems at a slant to provide a wide, fresh entrance for water and preservative. If they have a big woody stem, smash the stem up for about two inches to allow for a freer intake of water.

Cut flowers are susceptible to drafts and excessive heat and will last longer if these conditions can be avoided. Close up windows and immediately above hot water pipes or hot air registers are not suitable places for flowers. Actually the average living room is too warm for most cut flowers and it is always advisable to move them at night into the coolest place in the house. Forty degrees is ideal, but even a few degrees cooler than the living room would be beneficial.

Some florists supply a flower preservative when flowers are ordered. Used according to directions it will help to prolong the life of the flowers. It does this by slowing down the bacterial growth in the water which clogs up the stems and prevents the flowers from getting sufficient water. And as it also prevents slime from forming, frequent changes of water are unnecessary.

Phiat Sorority Holds Special Meeting

"At a special meeting of the Phiat Sorority last Thursday, Mr. Ross Booth of the Y's Men's Club drew the name of Mrs. Ruth Follwell as winner of the turkey draw. The sincere thanks of the club is extended to all who purchased tickets.

The remainder of the meeting was spent in packing candy baskets to send to the children who will be in the Belleville hospital at Christmas.

The last regular meeting of the club took the form of a "come-as-you-are" Christmas party, at Richardson's home. The plans of the program and social committees were complete in every detail even to having Rudolph, the red-nosed reindeer, give each member a lovely gift.

Soroptimist Club Holds Christmas Dinner Party

The Soroptimist Club held their annual Christmas dinner party recently at Lattimer's Town Room.

The tables were beautifully decorated with miniature Christmas trees, tinsel and candles, giving a most festive air to the occasion.

The guests were welcomed by the president, Frances Bennett, and a note of thanks was extended to Flora McKay and her staff for a delicious turkey dinner and for their kindness in taking care of the dinners throughout the year.

The program was in charge of Laura McLauchlin and Helen Keeler. Jessica Riggs led in the singing of Christmas carols, some contests were played and Muriel Yorke acted as Santa Claus giving each member and guest a gift.

The evening was brought to a close by the president wishing everyone a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

More Births In September

OTTAWA (CP) — There were 20 per cent more births in September than in the same month last year, the bureau of statistics reported today. Marriages and deaths also increased during the month.

September births totalled 35,522 compared with 29,530 in September 1951, bringing the nine-month total for 1952 to 295,565 as against 284,587 in the same period last year.

Deaths were 10, 332 compared with 8,980 last year.

Marriages in September numbered 15,047 against 14,254 in September last year, bringing the nine-month total to 93,308 compared with 94,556 in the corresponding period in 1951.

Queen Arrives With Children At Sandringham

By JAMES NORTHCOTT

SANDRINGHAM, Eng. (Reuters) —The Queen arrived here Monday with her children for the traditional Royal Christmas gathering in the rambling, red-brick house on their country estate.

For the benefit of young Prince Charles and Princess Anne it will be a cheerful, informal family affair, away from the strict etiquette of official duties.

But there will be a sad note as it is recalled that last year King George VI was still with them.

The young prince will be encouraged to enjoy himself opening presents, playing games. For soon it will be time to begin his training for his future role.

And from then on, even at Christmas time, he will never quite be able to forget that he is the future king.

Watching him opening his presents on Christmas morning will be three generations of queenly 85-year-old Dowager Queen Mary, the Queen M.ther, ' Elizabeth.

The family presents, laid out around a Christmas tree in the oak-panelled hall, will be handed around after breakfast on Christmas.

In the afternoon the Queen gives the traditional Royal Christmas speech from her study at Sandringham, broadcasting to the Commonwealth. The broadcast, scheduled for 3 p.m., London time, will be heard in Canada at 10 a.m. EST.

When the children are in 1 t e grown-ups will have dinner and sing around the piano, usua"y played by Princess Margaret.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wants to show appreciation for help received

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past few years, our family doctor and minister have rendered many services to my family free of charge, and now that we are better off financially, I feel we owe each of these wonderful people something in return. I would like to get each of them some sort of Christmas present, but, because I have never been in their homes, I am in doubt about what it should be.

Could you suggest something that would be suitable, and is it proper to buy something for the home rather than a personal gift?

—Mrs. R. J.

Dear Mrs. R. J.:

It is very pleasant indeed when someone has much real appreciation of the kind or help you have received, and wants to show it. So many people take the services of doctor and minister for granted, as a sort of right, and never think of a tangible sign of gratitude.

There are two things that I know of which people often send to such friends as this, and which are always sincerely appreciated. One is the usual large box of fruit, such as a crate of mixed oranges and grapefruit, or a large box of apples, or an attractive gift basket of assorted fruits. A second suggestion would be books—two or three, say, of the best new ones, both fiction and non-fiction.

You might perhaps send the fruit to your doctor and the books to your minister, with a nice note to each, expressing your appreciation for all he has done for you. I am quite certain they will be pleased with such gifts, and such acknowledgment that you feel indebted to them for their help.

I hope this does not come too late to help you with this matter, but this is the first opportunity I have had to answer your letter in my column.

This problem needs to be clarified

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Can there be any way out for a woman or man who promises to bring up children in one faith and does exactly the opposite, causing much distress to all parties concerned?

I hope you can print an answer to this question giving the whys and wherefores of such a promise and exactly what it means.—T. D.

Dear T.D.:

Your letter is so vague that I'm afraid you will have to clarify your question and give me more details as to just exactly what it is you want to know before I would be able to give you an answer.

As it stands now, I have no idea whether you are describing a theoretical difficulty in advance of making the kind of promise you mention, or whether somebody has already given one such promise and you want to know if there is any way of justifying such conduct.

If you would care to write me again and make the whole situation completely clear, I will do my best to give you a helpful reply. However, it seems to me the most sensible thing for you to do would be to get whatever information you want from your minister or priest.

Readers' Question Column

By Mary Moore

QUESTION:

Please give a recipe for shredded cabbage and paper thin carrots cold and with a vinegar flavor dressing. It was served with fish.—F. M. M.

ANSWER:

The slaw to which you refer is shredded on a special slaw shredder, one of which you may purchase in large hardware stores.

OLD-FASHIONED CABBAGE AND CARROT SLAW

Three cups cabbage shredded in half-like shreds, 1 cup finely shredded carrots. Mix together 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 2 tablespoons cream and 1 tablespoon boiled salad dressing to which you have added an extra 1-3 teaspoon dry mustard.

Another dressing for slaw is 1-4 cup each sour cream and vinegar, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and 1-8 or 1-4 teaspoon dry mustard. I hope one or those is like the one you tasted in the restaurant.

QUESTION:

While in New York recently we had a piece of Cheese Cake which was made with a base of graham wafers and a form of pie crust; it was not a cake base, a very light spongy cake and it seemed to me the cream cheese filling was put in between two layers of cake, but all cooked together. Did you ever taste it or hear of it. Would you be good enough to publish the recipe in your column as we read it always.—M. D.

ANSWER:

I'm so glad you said "all cooked together." That reminded me of a recipe I had in my files and sure enough I think it is what you want. Some of the filling does separates away from the mixture and becomes a spongy top and bottom.

SPONGE CHEESE CAKE

One-half cup melted butter, 2 cups powdered sugar, 1-2 cup powdered sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 4 eggs, 3-4 cup granulated sugar, 1-4 cup lemon juice. Three of 1-2 lemon grated, 1-2 teaspoon each salt and vanilla, 1 cup sour cream, 2 cups mashed white cream cheese, 1-4 cup flour. Combine butter, 1 cup crumbs, sugar and cinnamon. Blend thoroughly. Separate eggs. Combine yolks, granulated sugar and 1-3 cup water. Cook these stirring constantly in double-boiler until mixture coats spoon. Add lemon rind and juice, salt and vanilla. Beat egg whites slightly and stir into cream. Blend cheese thoroughly with the flour and blend into cream mixture, one cup at a time. Mix lightly. Stir in crumb mixture. Turn into greased baking dish and sprinkle remaining crumbs over top (if desired.) Bake in slow oven at 275 degrees F. for 1 hour. Leave cake in oven 45 minutes after cooking and shutting off stove is electric leave door half open during 45 minutes heat is turned off.

QUESTION:

You helped me before with pickles—now will you help me again? How to roast and stuff a half turkey? We have a large bird and a small family, so I would like to roast half of the bird at Christmas and the other half at New Years.—Mrs. Rex. M.

ANSWER:

Hello again. I'm glad you asked for this.

ROAST HALF STUFFED TURKEY

Singe and wash and clean turkey half. Rub skeen with salt, also the breast to the meat near the centre to prevent it shrinking during cooking and spoiling breast meat. Brush all skin with unsalted fat. The leg above joint securely to tail. Place on aluminum foil, cut to fit pan, and fold down open. Cover with cloth moistened with dripping. Roast at 300 deg. Fahr. The weight of bird is 5 or 10 lbs. it requires from 3 to 3 1-2 hours. Baste it half of that time, then lift it from the foil, place stuffing on the foil to mound the top. Cover with foil and replace over stuffing. Finish baking at 300 deg. Fahr. When transferring to hot platter lift it with egg-turners, foil and all to support if reseing. Tuck edges of foil that show under. Leaving the stuffing on the foil facilitates serving.

Be very careful to protect your second half of turkey in moisture-proof wrappings, as it will dry out if not carefully wrapped and cream, 2 cups mashed white cream cheese, 1-4 cup flour. Combine

GOING RIGHT ALONG with the popularity of the fine fabric coat is the smart little touch of fur, a small muff, a fur waistcoat, bag or glove cuffs. Attracting interest are such items as black suede or capeskin gloves with cuffs of black dyed fox, moleskin waistcoats dyed in luscious colors, and a satchel handbag of leopard framed and outlined in natural leather. Black dyed broadtail-processed lamb bordered in black leather makes a nice muff bag and of course there is the famous little muff of black dyed fox.

SOMETHING QUITE NEW for resort wear is a soft chesterfield made of beautiful Italian tie silk in black and silver. The collar is of black velvet, and fastenings and cuff buttons are shoe-buttons of jet.

DESIGNED primarily for the coming cruise and resort season is knitwear that is sure to be chosen for association prize for those of us who must perforce stick it out at home. Pale pink coral or aqua are the colors liked best for a new one piece knit with a two-piece look. Fashioned of wool chenille, the dress has a deep stand-away neckline marked by a cuff of ribbing. The ribbing also makes a wide midriff and cuffs the short puffed sleeves. A nice after-five job!

THERE'S NOTHING quite so entrancing for evening wear as filmy white lace chiffon or net. White lace hand-embroidered in gold over accordion-pleated white net is the formula for a beautiful evening dress. The lace forms a graduated peplum, the pleating trailing fullness in back. The basque bodice is of the lace with off-shoulder wing sleeves over the net pleating.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

When their employer gives them Christmas presents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are two girls with a Christmas problem and we would appreciate your help. We are the only two employees in the office of a small manufacturing company. Dorothy has worked here since last February, I since the April. Our boss is a very kind and generous man, and the girl whose place I took, a friend of mine who got married, told me that he always gives the girls in the office a Christmas present. Our questions:

1. If he does give us a gift this year, should we open it when he hands it to us?

2. Besides saying thank you, should we write him a thank you note?

3. Would it be proper for us to send him and his wife a Christmas card, or should we send one only to him, and addressed to the office? (We've met his wife once, when she and he came to the office, but of course we don't know her well.)—Sylvia and Dorothy.

1. I believe you'll find it more graceful, when you are handed a present when he hands it to you. Instead you may say, "I thank you very much, Mr. Hall. How very kind of you to give me a present. I'll open it now." Then open it.

2. Yes, you should each write a little thank-you note to him—friendly and prompt. If only his name is written on the enclosed card, write your note to him only and leave it on his desk. But if, as I suspect, his wife's name also is included on the card, write to both him and his wife, and mail it to their home—correctly.

3. Yes. . . send a card addressed to Mr. and Mrs. . ., at their home-address.

Everyone loves to receive a Christmas card!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it really proper to send Christmas cards to mere acquaintances? And to those acquaintances you in some way during the year? —Virginia L.

Yes, Virginia, yes, Ma'am. . . my enthusiastic and high-hearted answer to both questions. A Christmas card is a gracious gesture on good will, a pleasant thoughtfulness. And always remember this: to so many people who are mere acquaintances of yours, your sending a Christmas card may mean more than you would possibly think.

It's a wonderful plan to send (or give) Christmas cards to those kind people who serve you during the year. . . the milkman, the baker, the candlestick-maker. . . the errand boy at the grocery or butcher, the daughter . . . the mailman . . . your part-time helper. And perhaps give a gift or a Christmas tip to any of those who serve you always graciously accompanied by a thoughtfully - chosen Christmas card, with perhaps a personal appreciation added to the printed message. Perhaps "Christmas" greetings to you, and appreciation and best wishes for your New Year's."

How to sign Christmas cards from family-of-three

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In our family are myself, husband, 14-year-old daughter, and myself. Please tell me the proper signature for our Christmas cards.—D.M.

When a child is included in the signature, the father's name comes first. So sign the cards: Philip and Dorothy, and Cynthia Or, when the last name is necessary for identification: Phillip and Dorothy and Cynthia Martin. Or, also correct, and high-hearted Christmas greetings from the Martins, all Three. . . Phillip and Dorothy and Cynthia. . . The Three Martins . . . Phillip and Dorothy and Cynthia . . . send dearest love and Christmas greetings to The Three Thompsons, Jones and Theresa and Tommy

New Year's Day. Let's give a party!

New Year's Day . . . and hospitality is in the air. It's Open House for friendliness in step in. Perhaps it will be an Eggnog Party, the traditional party for this day. Or a welcoming-in Party. Or a Coffee Party, so popular today. Very often it's the day for the big party of the year . . . bidding farewell to the old year, greeting the new year with a high-hearted salute. It can be a wonderful reunion of the family relations, old friends—neighbors, too. A grand way to pay off an accumulation of social indebtedness . . . to give a bright social start to the New Year.

Going to give an Eggnog Party? If so, you'll probably have an eggnog recipe of your own, a friend or a good cook-book will share a good recipe with you. Or you won't have to bother with recipes to dramatize this rite of making merry. Because you can buy eggnog supply from your grocer, and serve it as is or added-to, as your own suggests.

With the eggnog, please don't serve anything sweet only. (Even though there is left so much of that fruit cake you got you haven't eaten it yet.) Eggnogs are the traditional and most successful accompaniment for hearty blandness is perfect with the sweetness of the egg-nog. Then make the beaten biscuits, or you can buy them packaged. For a delightful change from the tradition, split the biscuits, butter-toast them lightly, and add slivers of Virginia ham. Or insert thin slices of ham in tiny buns (or thoroughly heated tea-biscuits or finger rolls. Or serve crispy assorted thin bread-and-butter sandwiches, with or without the ham. Or heated crackers, definitely not soda crackers. Salted nuts are another appropriate accompaniment.

Thoughtful is the hostess who serves an alternative to eggnog . . . . for everyone is not an egg-nog enthusiast. Most hostesses have a "standby" punch at table. The eggnog service. . . punch bowl and small glasses on a large tray. Or it may be set on the buffet table or tea table, the tea or coffee service opposite. For the tea or coffee enthusiasts, simple sandwiches, plate of fruit cake and/or festive Christmas cookies.

Or, if an eggnog party is not your dish, invite your friends to a "Welcome-in" (warmth and friendliness in these words!) to "Open" or just to a "New Year's Day Party". Have the tea service or coffee urn on the buffet table service opposite. . . or, for either, substitute punch or whatever is your preference.

If it's a cold, cold day, you might have bright idea of some smart hostesses. . . set forth on the buffet table a large covered tureen of steaming-hot borsch soup, or delicious chicken or clam broth, to be served in bouillon cups or tea cups. Plenty of salty crackers, thoroughly heated. (Or, if you prefer, serve the soup or broth in cups in the kitchen and pass these on a tray.)

Setting your New Year's table gives you a fine chance to express yourself gloriously — with imagination, ingenuity. Covering bits of Christmas sparkle. Red, green, white, silver gold. Let your centrepiece sing with color. . . a huge dish of radiant, vari-colored (or one color) Christmas tree balls, or other ornaments will do the trick charmingly. Or a big cluster of gay balloons, later to be merrily released. Or a silver or white-glass or crystal bowl filled with holly and mistletoe or poinsettia, the base surrounded with garlands of pert, rosy-cheeked lady apples. Or make a star-design by filling a deep glass bowl with apples, bottom-balls with radiating ribbons of vari-colored metallic paper, starting from under the bowl and covering the top of the table. Arrange your serving-dishes on the table with a sure sense of orderly balance and convenience-to-the-guests.

You'll save space and add to convenience if you move your table, either to dining room or living room, against a wall. And, if possible, have your table candle-lighted, glowing hospitable welcome to your guests . . . and to a "Happy New Year!"

To Those Looking for Something Better

BEAUTY

It's feminine and fun to use a pale yellow cleansing cream that's designed to keep skin smooth and lovely

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE are complexions so perfect in texture and coloring that they need no other attention than scrupulous cleanliness and daily lubrication. As a rule, these beauty blessings are bestowed upon women of perfect health.

There are other types of skin that seem always to be in a condition of disturbance. Some will not accept soap and will flare up when in contact with it. Such complexions must be pampered with oily cleansings. Occasionally there will be a skin that is allergic to even the purest powder, but this is rare. Some complexions are affected unfavorably by certain foods that cause a rash. Tests will discover what dietary excesses cause this, and they should be avoided.

Troublesome Skin

These temperamental complexions must be petted. Find out what bothers them, and all will be well. As a rule, the more cream you force into the flesh, the better the appearance of your skin will be.

A light cream should be used for removing make-up, a heavy one for massage at night. If blackheads are present, a

FRANKFORD

Mrs. J. E. Finnigan Heads United Church W. M. Society

Frankford — The Christmas meeting of the Frankford United Church W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. C. D. Powell on Thursday afternoon. The beautiful decorations in her home brought a spirit of Christmas to the many members and visitors in attendance.

Mrs. Powell presided due to the absence of the president, Mrs. H. Beddjey reported the need for some clothing.

TOKYO STRIKE

Tokyo (Reuters) — Tokyo's street car and bus workers will "take leave" without permission this week and cut services to half, their union announced today. News of the latest strike reached the populace just as it was welcoming a return to normal of gas and electricity supplies and train services, all cut severely by strikes in recent weeks. The transport workers won higher wages and a year-end bonus.

A Child's Life of Jesus

"Now they knew which one to arrest. They tied His hands with cords. The soldiers grabbed Jesus.

A CHILD'S LIFE OF ETC

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the last books written by the late Fulton Oursler, noted author of such volumes as "The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Nell O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER XI

When Judas fled from the scene of the Last Supper, Jesus turned to the others, the eleven who really loved Him, and who had been true to Him. He took a piece of bread and broke it. He prayed and then gave a piece of the bread to each of his eleven friends, saying to them:

"This is My Body. Take you and eat."

He took some wine in a cup, wine made of the juice of good red grapes and He blessed it and gave thanks to God while He passed the cup to His apostles and said:

This is My blood. Drink you this."

And after they had each taken a sip, He said:

"Do this in memory of Me."

And today all over the world those of us who gather to take Holy Communion, as it is called, receiving His body and blood that we may become one with the life of Jesus.

When the night was dark, Jesus asked the eleven to come with Him to a garden of olive trees. It was called the Garden of Gethsemane. That was where He often spent the night.

It was too dark to see anything in the garden. The moon was not shining. How could the men who wanted to kill Him ever find Him here? Jesus knelt down beside a big rock. He asked His friends to keep watch while He prayed. Then He talked to God. He knew that they were getting ready to kill Him. He asked God if He could stop the men from killing Him. But He would do whatever God wanted Him to do. And that was the answer we all how to pray. We ask God for what we would like to have but tell Him we will give it up, and so forget about it, if He does not think it is wise for us to have our own way.

While He was praying Jesus heard a noise in the garden. He looked around. His friends were not watching. They were all asleep on the damp, cold grass. Only Jesus was awake. He saw lights near the garden gate. Soldiers were coming. Some carried burning staffs for lights. Others held long swords in their hands. But the man who led them all to Jesus had no sword, and so light. He was Judas. He came up to Jesus and kissed Him.

That kiss was a signal to the soldiers. Now they knew which one to arrest. The soldiers grabbed Jesus. They made Him their prisoner. They tied His hands with cords. They marched Him to a cell and then tried Him in court.

He had many judges to hear his case. What had He done wrong? He had healed the sick. Was that wrong? No! He had made the blind see. Was that wrong? No!

But He told people He was the Christ, the Son of God. The judges did not believe He was the Son of God.

But they could not kill Him right away. They had to go to a man named Pilate. He was the governor. Pilate did not want to kill Jesus but the crowd of frightened people yelled so loud that Pilate was scared too. So he let them take Jesus away to kill Him.

They were cruel to Jesus now. They made a crown of thorns and put it on His head and the thorns cut His forehead and made Him bleed. Pilate gave making fun of Him because some people called Him their King. But Jesus was not a King of things. He was a King of the hearts of the people. They beat Him and then He could hardly stand up. Then on Good Friday morning they nailed Him, hands and feet, to a big wooden cross. And they stood near to watch Him die.

Tomorrow: Jesus is risen from the grave.

Port authorities in Haifa reported that the Israeli tug Thorea refloated that it was standing by the ill-fated liner but were unable to aid in any way because of the continued heavy weather. Bright sunlight shone on the scene today. The thousands of horrified watchers on the beach could see the battered wreckage tossing and twisting under the massive waves, and hear the pitiful cries of those who trusted themselves to the sea.

A heavy boat with 13 experienced seamen put out from shore at 5:30 a.m., towing a line towards the ship. It lurched through the waves, now rising, now dropping. Then, only 50 yards from the stricken ship, it overturned, leaving its cre wmen to the water. All managed to struggle back to shore.

Drifted With Current

At 6 a.m. the passengers started to jump into the oil-covered water. They had seen rowboats racing coming from the ship was being carried to the beach aboard a Greek vessel. Many could not see them, their faces black with oil, let themselves go with the current, the waves tossing them wildly.

Rescue officials saw their plan and cleared that section of the beach to receive the survivors. Red volunteers waded knee-deep, waiting for them. Army trucks, ambulances and nurses set up first-aid posts.

Soon it appeared that the current was pushing this tragic cavalcade toward a section that was usually visible but now covered by water. The rescuers concentrated on this area.

It was a horrible scene. Some of the survivors disappeared under the waves.

Some survivors were seen bobbing inertly on the waves. These were the first to reach shore.

The first body, that of a young woman, was a mutilated mass covered by blood. At first four others were soon thrown ashore.

Swarm Over Rocks

By 7:30 the first survivors arrived. Some staggered through the swarming crowd to the rocks in dozens. Rescuers threw ropes to pull them clear, but a wave swept the rope to hold of and were thrown back into the sea.

After an hour's desperate struggle, 50 were rescued alive. This, plus the 278 picked ashore and dead by Monday, brought the total of Survivors to 78.

After this no other passengers figured into the story. They remained huddled on deck.

Until the RAF tried to drop rescue equipment. An only aboard ship was a French Dakota bomber which tried to drop provisions by parachute. Shallow water prevents ships from approaching close.

Seaman Joy Cain, a survivor, told correspondent Mrowa that the sea had got into the ship's fresh water tanks and that food had been lost when she broke in two.

Some were killed or injured when she cracked, he said.

The passengers were mostly French.

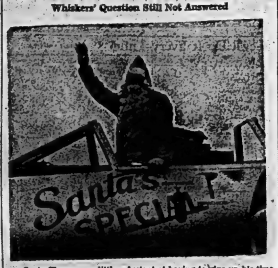
Blown on Reef

A fierce gale blew the liner, a 25 -year-old veteran of French shipping, on to the reef Monday as she battled toward Haifa. The fierce seas and surf broke her back and sent a wide crack down her amidships section, nearly splitting her apart.

The continuing fury of the storm so far had foiled attempts by air and sea rescuers of at least five countries to begin removal of the threatened hundreds on the ship. The stricken ship was without power and could communicate only by semaphore or blinker light.

The crew of the Champollion this morning made a vain attempt to launch a small boat for the pathetic journey to shore but the tiny craft quickly capsized. Five other crew members who lowered a cable from the ship to the shore by small boat Monday also were spilled in the sea but swam to land. The cable later broke.

These crew members said the ship crashed onto the reef after mistaking the beacon at Beirut's International Airport for the entrance light to the city's harbor, four miles to the north. The airport beacon was installed only three weeks ago.



HOTEL BURNS

BANGOR, Me. (AP) — Fire destroyed the four-storey Aller Hotel and three adjoining business establishments early today. Owner Earl Liddle estimated loss at more than $50,000. Forty guests were driven to the street in sub-freezing temperatures. Two were overcome by smoke but released after treatment.

FOG SHROUDS PARADE

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A Santa Claus parade here Saturday was more audible than visible as one of the worst fogs Windsor has ever had shrouded the city. Temperatures ranged from 33 to 36 degrees and humidity was about 92. Motorists had to use their lights throughout the day.

Whiskers' Question Still Not Answered

Santa Claus was a little reluctant at having to give up his time-honored sleigh and reindeer this year in favor of an RCAF CF-100, but he was compelled to admit on his arrival at RCAF station, Rockcliffe, Ottawa, that jet propulsion is faster than reindeer. Dropping in out of a snowy sky to see the pupils at Rockcliffe airport public school, Santa Claus, with his red robe, whiskers and magnificent stomach that had to be eased slowly and gently out of the cockpit, received a rousing reception from the pupils and took their orders for Christmas. Queried as to how he would manage this year travelling at such a speed, Santa laughed and whispered that his CF-100 is fitted with radar equipment which pin-points every house where good little children are fast asleep. And then, with a snort and a whoosh, he was off again, so fast that no one was able to determine if he travelled with his whiskers in or out of the cockpit. — Central Press Canadian.

Once Scene of Lusty Brawls British Commons Tame Show Compared With Ripe Old Days

By DON SCHWIND

LONDON (AP)—Britain's ancient House of Commons, once the home of brawls and Billingsgate, is so tame these days a member mustn't even say "boo" to a goose.

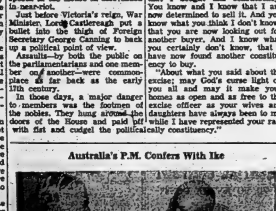
A recent session in which a Socialist called somebody a goose and his colleagues booed started a tide of public disapproval still washing around Parliament.

Nobody's quite sure whether the "goose" epithet was hung on Prime Minister Churchill or Tory chief whip P. G. Buchan-Hepburn.

The Daily Telegraph, staunchly Conservative, admonished: "Members need to watch their language and their conduct." Nobody loves a good donnybrook better than the mass-circulation Daily Mirror, but its editor greeted this one with the "disappointment at the sterile nastiness between the parties on which the House of Commons is wasting the nation's time."

It's a far cry from today's pantywaist Parliament to the ripe old days when England's solons used to trade a rule stipulating that a gangway three sword-lengths wide must separate the parties in the House. The gangway is still there even if parliamentary tempers are cooler now.

Brawling Common



Brawling in the House and its lobbies was a common sport in Queen Victoria's day. A Gladstone speech in the House in 1863 ended in near-riot.

Just before Victoria's reign, War Minister Lord Castlereagh put a bullet into the thigh of Foreign Secretary George Canning to back up a political point of view.

Assaults—by both the public on the parliamentarians and one member on another—were commonplace as far back as the early 17th century.

In those days, a major danger to members was the hostility of the nobles. They hung around the doors of the House and paid off with fist and cudgel the politically constituency."

Jean Beliveau Publicity Fails To Bother Gordie Howe, Top Goalgetter

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"GOOD w.i.l . . ."

Another Christmas has rolled around, and the old world doesn't appear to be much better off than it was a year ago. To quote something or other, "There's nothing wrong with the world —it's the people that live in it."

But this is the time of the year when every one practices or should practice the "Good Will Toward Men" qualities, especially in the sports world. People should be kind of those much maligned slaves of sport, referees, sports writers and even toss a sympathetic smile towards sports-casters.

Even Michael J. Rodden, sports editor of the Kingston Whig Standard, relaxes and tosses a friendly word towards the hockey arbiters. Of course Michael J. is one of the deans of hockey refereeing, having looted, if our memory serves up correctly, nearly 2,000 games in his ice-piccolo career. Blood apparently thicker than water, although Michael doesn't pull his punches, right or wrong.

He carefully cracks down on referee-baiting players while tossing in a plug for the harassed-at-times arbiters. Says Michael:

"Basically, hockey is a sport and should be waged fairly and scientifically. It is strenuous enough with heavy but legal bodychecking, a great deal of which is necessary to the showing of high-sticking and interference. Illegal tactics employed to handicap the stars do the sport no worth while service and make a mockery of skillful competition. The fault or failure does not rest wholly with referees, especially those who toil in so-called amateur leagues for woefully small stipends. Arbiters in the NHL are richly rewarded and could expect part of their salaries by setting examples that others would probably follow."

REGISTER SIXTH!

Bill Spafford's Belleville Moiras entry in the Bay of Quinte Intermediate Basketball League are beginning to hit their stride. Last night they took the measure of the Picton Athletics in a hard-fought game to register their fifth win in six starts and thereby take the lead on the top perch of the league. The consolidate their hold on the top perch of the league. The Moiras are a fast-moving, clean-playing outfit, said by court enthusiasts to be one of the better teams to represent the city in some time. They have plenty of balance and shooting ability, and should go places this season.

MINOR HOCKEY

Ontario Minor Hockey Association secretary Jack Chris, tie in a bulletin, today reminds prospective entries to the association that the lists for group play close on Friday of this week. Better get 'em in, boys.

One of the most popular moves ever made by the OMHA was the inauguration of the accident insurance plan whereby players are covered up to $250 for one dollar per season. Affiliations should be directed to secretary Jack Christie, 6 Glen Eden Crescent, Toronto, 12.

OMHA certificates, local league certificates, insurance applications and payment for insurance should be directed to the registrar and insurance manager, Jim Whiston, 93 Tiago Ave., Toronto, 13.

Organization of the new series, tejuitively known as the A-minor series is proving very popular according to Mr. Christie, and he making possible a general re-classification of teams all down the list. A complete list of classifications will be issued with the bulletin containing the groupings next week. Incidentally Belleville will be represented in the OMHA playdowns in all minor classifications.

GAD, WHEAT PLUNGERS!

Minister of Mines Phillip Kelly, apparently a dyed-in-the-wool Irisher, who like many of the "Sboys from the old sod," loves to tell a joke on their Scottish cousins, gave out with this one at the meeting held by Ontario premier Leslie M. Frost, in Marmora yesterday afternoon.

It seems a young Irish couple were on their way to America and the colleen was "expectant". The roll of the ship and other strenuous experiences brought the event up to date well ahead of time.

The young husband practically broke, was at his wits end, so the warm-hearted Irish skipper of the ship took up a collection from the passengers. He realized $267.03.

He presented the purse that night before a gathering of the passengers saying "Me Bhoy, your friends have donated $267.03 to yez. Bejabers, these warm-hearted laddybucks from Erin gave $267. Where the three cints came from I don't know unless there's one of thim Scotties aboord."

A voice piped up from the rear of the saloon.

"Aye, skipper, mon. There's three of us."

WHAT DO YOU THINK!

At the risk of incurring the displeasure of the "little woman" and the distaff side in general, we culled the following from the University of Toronto's "Varsity" magazine. It is a chemical analysis of woman.

SYMBOL: WO

ACCEPTED ATOMIC WEIGHT: 120 lbs.; physical properties: Soft at nothing, freezes at any minute, melts when properly treated, very bitter when used wrongly.

OCCURRENCE: Found wherever man exists. Chemical properties: possesses great affinity for gold, silver, platinum and precious stones; violent reaction if left alone; able to absorb great amounts of food; turns green when placed next to a better looking specimen.

USES: Highly ornamental. Useful as a tonic in the acceleration of low spirits; an equalizer in the distribution of wealth; probably the most effective income reducing agent known.

CAUTION: Highly explosive in inexperienced hands. —Emery.

Red Wings Star Leads League With Hergesheimer Close 2nd; Terry Sawchuk Tops Goalies

MONTREAL (CP)—At least 25 players in the National Hockey League likely have heard all they care to of Jean Beliveau for a while.

Those are the players who all season have failed to put together enough goals and assists to equal the five points big Jean scored in his three games with Montreal Canadiens. Actually, he scored his five goals in two of the three games he played on loan from Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League.

Notwithstanding the flurry of publicity over "le gros Bill," however, Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings continued to lead the NHL individual scoring race. His 17 goals and 18 assists gave him a total of 35 points.

Rocket Third

The NHL's official statistics, out today, show little Maurice Richard, member of New York Rangers still clinging grimly to second place with 33 points. Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Canadiens is fourth with 30 assists and 20 goals. Red Kelly of Detroit Red Wings continued to lead the NHL individual scoring race. His 17 goals and 18 assists gave him a total of 35 points.

Behind Howe came Sherman Ted Kennedy of Toronto Maple Leafs with 29, and then, a solid group with 28 apiece, from the league standings, Ted Lindsay, 28, Metro Prystai, 28, Alex Delvecchio, Red 25, of the Red Wings.

Red Kelly of Wings was still the highest-scoring defenceman with 22 points.

The Wings, with 39 points, were in front by four points in the team standings. The Canadiens were second by a point over the slipping Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto Maple Leafs. Boston Bruins Leafs were another two points behind. The league's basement was filled up the rear with 18 points.

The Vezina Trophy of Red Wings took a firmer grip on the goalies' average as best goals-against netminder. He had a brilliant 1.82 average. Gerry McNeil of Canadiens, giving up 11 goals in three games, fell back to 2.16. Jim Henry of the Bruins was third with 2.19.

Toronto Leafs were still the leagues bad boys, with a total of 443 minutes served in the penalty box.

Sport in Brief

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebecers bet $16,300,000 on flat and sulky racing this year through pari-mutuel, it was learned Sunday.

While exact figures could not be obtained, the round figure was a record and compared with $10,060,-000 in 1951.

The figure included approximately $3,917,000 wagered on flat racing at Montreal's Blue Bonnets and Hull's Connaught Park. Blue Bonnets' figure was $3,260,000 while Connaught Park was $657,000.

Meetings were held by the Valley-field Exhibition Association, Montreal Jockey Club and King's Park. Betting at each meeting was about even.

Quebec Exhibition Park led all sulky racing clubs with a total of $5,400,000 wagered during 98 racing days.

GUELPH (CP)—Jack Durston, who joined Guelph Biltmores two weeks ago as defencemen, has been released by the club, coach Al Pike announced Monday.

Durston said he "didn't get a chance" to prove himself with the team. Pike described the statement as "nonsense."

"Anybody who saw our recent games would better that I played him regularly in every game," he said.

Durston was offered to Kitchener and Montreal Royals for nothing, Pike said, but they said they weren't interested.

When both clubs failed to reach agreement, Durston appealed to the Ontario Hockey Association and later to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, but he was ordered to report back to the Biltmores.

MEAFORD (CP)—William Donald Butchart, 47, basketball coach whose high school teams won many provincial and district championships, died in Toronto Saturday night. He taught high school here for 17 years. Surviving are his mother, his widow and two daughters.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Providence Reds of the American Hockey League announced Monday night the signing of winger Al Bezart—teammate of high-scoring Richted Jean Beliveau of Quebec Aces in the Quebec Senior League. Bezarit, 24-year-old right shot, was formerly played for St. Louis of the AHL, came to terms for a three game trial with the Reds.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Country Cor, a Kentucky Derby hopeful, was sold Monday for a reported $140,000 by Mismi lawyer Dan Chappell and left later in the day by plane for California. The promising two-year-old race horse was purchased by the Silver Creek Ranch of Yountsrors, Nev., and has been nominated for the $100,000 Santa Anita Derby and Hialeah's $100,000 Flamingo Stakes.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Rookie Bill Hopes, who owner Bill Veeck hopes will be a regular shortstop next year, signed with St. Louis Browns Monday for a reported $10,-000. Hunter had been a member of Brooklyn Dodgers' organization and came to the Browns this year for $100,000 cash and three players—outfielder Ray Coleman and catcher Bob Mahoney and shortstop Stan Hopke.

CLEVELAND (AP)—Jim Hendy, general manager of Cleveland Barons; suggested Monday that retired linesmen be brought in for American Hockey League games at Hershey, Syracuse and Pittsburgh. He said there had been complaints from all parts of the league. He also said nobody blamed the locally-hired linesmen in those cities but that they were inexperienced. He added the officials were not accused of favoring home teams.

Walter Cartier, Langlois Battle To Bloody Draw

BROOKLYN (AP)—Walter Cartier of New York and Pierre Langlois of France battled to a bloody 10-round draw Monday night at the Eastern Parkway Arena in a bout advertised as an elimination for Sugar Ray Robinson's vacated middleweight crown. The favored Cartier weighed-161, Langlois 159½.

Judge Jack O'Sullivan scored five rounds for Cartier, three for Langlois and two even while the other judge, Harold Barnes had the rounds even at 5-5 and Langlois ahead 9-8 on points. The referee, George Walsh, gave each fighter five rounds and also scored the points even, 6-6.

The two middleweights finished the battle in a toe-to-toe slugfest with blood streaming from both of their faces.

Maple Leafs Call for Help

TORONTO (CP)—Centre Phil Maloney from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League and rightwinger Eric Nesterenko from Providence Reds of the Canadian Hockey Association Junior A series will be called up by the Toronto Maple Leafs to fill in for injured regulars.

Right-winger George Armstrong and Howie Meeker went into hospital after practice Sunday night's Chicago game. Armstrong will be out for two to three weeks with a knee injury. Meeker is nursing a sore knee, is a doubtful starter against Montreal here Christmas eve.

Belleville Moiras Defeat Picton In Basketball Tilt

Last night coach Bill Spafford's Moiras defeated the Picton Athletics 52-38 in a scheduled Bay of Quinte Intermediate "B" basketball game. This marked their fifth victory in their past six starts and leaves them in first place.

The Moiras piled up a commanding 23-14 lead in the first half but were outscored 22-19 by the homesters in the final half.

John Batchelor paced the winners bagging in 22 points. Captain John Hayman followed with 10 and Bill Muirhead contributed 9.

For the Picton Athletics Anderson scored 12, while Ackerman and Chalmers contributed 8 and 6, respectively.

Line-ups—

Golden Trail Looms for Beliveau; Habs Dangle $53,000 for 3 Seasons

By W. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—Jean Beliveau is running Santa Claus a close second as the most talked of man in Montreal today. He is just as elusive, too, as the whiskered old fellow.

If Montreal Canadiens' aren't making a renewed effort to get the 21-year-old whiz-bang for a centre-ice job, there's no such thing as lusty and huge bells or even business acumen.

Beliveau arrived in Montreal by air Monday from Boston, where he completed his three-game lend-lease stretch with Canadiens. During that whirl the sharpshooting youngster from Quebec Aces became the sensation of the National Hockey League by scoring five goals.

After his arrival, on his way to Quebec to rejoin his team in the Quebec Senior Hockey League, he dropped out of sight.

But his name was heard everywhere on the streets, in arenas and street cars.

Beliveau himself the other day shrugged off questions with "I'm under contract to Quebec." General Manager Frank Selke of the Canadiens said the only arrangement with the Aces was the lend-lease stipulation.

President Jack Latter of the Aces said there's no chance of a man-to-man trade this season. Latter thinks it would be unfair to Quebec fans to let big Jean go now. The youngster's advisers in Quebec are reported to feel the same way.

It is estimated Beliveau is making $15,000 this season by staying with the so-called amateur team. Unofficial figures have placed his salary at $7,000, plus $3,000 kicked in by the coliseum and $3,000 paid him by a dairy for publicity reasons.

Canadiens are reported unofficially to have offered him $53,000 for three years—$20,000 for signing and successive annual salaries of $10,000, $11,000 and $12,000.

I was dawdling pot long ere with a National Hockey League team, and the boys, on their way back home after a hard season, were busy relaxing at dinner.

One player had ordered a full double cut of ham, which is quite a lot of ham, a few poached eggs, and coffee, the latter preceded by orange juice and bread, and the other boys were twisting him on what they seemed a fairly safe bet was a breakfast.

They should have seen the late Harry Mummery tuck in the provender. That was something to talk about. Aussie Scalpers Match Yank Cousins; Hike Prices as Tennis Finals Near

By CATLIFE TALBOT

ADELAIDE (AP)—United States tennis hopefuls finally have reached the end of their long trip to defend of the Davis Cup and have settled down for the last few days of practice before facing the Australians in the challenge round next Monday.

Adelaide is a hot, arid little city where the temperatures already have gone as high as 100 degrees and might exceed that figure several notches by the time the matches begin. However, Tony Trabert and Vic Seixas, who will play both singles and doubles for the challengers, say they've felt hotter weather and that it won't bother them.

An Even Bet

They got their first view of the Aussie team in practice Monday but they still share the opinion that even bet at best to take the big mug home.

Australian bookmakers consider it a toss up, too, and are offering no odds either way.

Spectators among the big crowds watching the tennis practice and batting single seats for the three-day series at the modest limit of $5, or getting their facts face value.

Adelaide, which has fought long and stubbornly to win the challenge round away from the two major tennis citadels of Australia, Melbourne, isn't passing up any of the trappings.

The locals, by way of celebrating their victory over the "old crowd" from Melbourne, will stage a show for the official program which shows two expert Australian lawn tennis players right in the middle of the famous bowl.

Advance copies of the official specials of the Lawn Tennis Association in Sydney are available a few days ago with terrific impact.

Adelaide's high-spirited citizens intend to go right on and sell the offending programs. The local officials were reported to have agreed to have several hundred programs struck off bearing the old familiar cover. These will be distributed to the more staid officials of the Australian Association and stashed in boxes of other challenges.

That tradition will be served.

Beliveau Tops Quebec Scorers

MONTREAL (CP)—The big line of Sherman White, Bernie Geoffrion and Stan Smrke, playing for the second-place Chicoutimi Sagueneens, headed the Quebec Senior Hockey League scoring parade.

White is the pacesetter for the second straight week, league statistics show. He has 17 goals and 8 assists—leading the league in 25 points.

Bochanan follows with 14 goals and 24 assists for 38 points and Smrke has 13 goals and 25 assists for a similar 38 total.

Leading scorer is Jean Beliveau of the sixth-place Quebec Aces who recently scored five in a lend-lease three-game stint with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League. He has 19 goals.

Men's Commercial Bowling League

Bowling was at its best last Friday night as 60 bowlers on 10 teams of the Men's Commercial League battled for furbys and other prizes.

Star Welding, last year's champions, along with Stephens Adanac, were the only sweep-point winners, defeating O'Neil Sales and Balyz Brothers respectively.

Quinte Distributors established two league records with a high team single of 1468 and a high triple of 3775. The reward was meagre, however, as their opponents, Goode's, held them to three points while themselves salvaging four by rolling 1464 and winning two.

Prize winners for the night were Art Atkin, Doug Simpson, Ed Lattimore, Don Brooks, Ralph Bailey, M. Callaghan, Art Perkins, Gerry Balyz, Bill Brown and R. McDonald.

Art Atkin led the bowlers with 945. Other league leaders: Mickey Piperal, 858; Johnny Knott, 840; E. Peoples 834; Doug Simpson 784; Ron Stephenson 780; Vince Sagriff 738; Jack Doran, 733; S. Mulholland 722; Carl Bosdak, 720 and Ken Peacock 727.

League standings: Bosdak 35; Welding Cases 75; Pat's Barbershop 72; Quinte Distributors 71; Star Welding 67; Gourley 57; Stephens Adanac 52; Balyz Brothers 36; Alemite 31 and O'Neil Sales 18.

TURNER TKO'S MICKEY

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Gil Turner unleashed a smashing two-fisted attack to score a technical knockout over New York's Joe Micali Monday night in 39 seconds of the sixth round. Turner weighed 146½ and Micali 146¾. It was the scheduled 10-round welterweight scrap. Referee Pete Tomasso stopped the one-sided fight despite the vociferous objections of the angered Micali.

Orville Tessier New Junior A Point Leader

TORONTO (CP)—New Barrie Flyers forward Orville Tessier, recently obtained by the Flyers in a trade with Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts, climbed to the top of the ladder in the individual scoring statistics of the Ontario Junior A hockey circuit in the last week.

Tessier displaced Jim McMurray of Galt Black Hawks who was top man in the statistics issued last week. Wally Maxwell of Toronto Marlboros also forged ahead of McBurney.

Maxwell now is six points behind McBurney and two points in front of McBurney.

McBurney leads the circuit in goals with 23 and Maxwell is tops in the assist department with 36.

Scoring Leaders:

Bears Forwards Top American Scoring Race

NEW YORK (CP) — Hershey Bears are in third place in the American Hockey League, but three of their forwards are on top of the league scoring race.

George (Red) Sullivan is setting the pace with 17 goals and 20 assists, making 37 points. Close behind him is defenceman Lorne Ferguson 4s in second place with 16 goals and 20 assists for 36 points and Dilic Fisher is third with 20 goals—top output—and 12 assists for 32 points.

Johnny Bower of Cleveland Barons continues to lead the goaltenders with 59 goals in 26 games for an average of 2.27. He also has first shutout, a 3-0 blank against Hershey.

The Barons, with two victories and one defeat last week, continues at the top of the standings with 38 points, four better than second-place Pittsburgh Hornets.

Old Age Tip

'Don't Worry'

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP)—Connie Mack, the grand old man of baseball, celebrated his 90th birthday Monday and passed along this tip for those of age—don't worry.

"There's not a thing in the world worth worrying about," he said. "I've lived more than 90 years and anything else I know."

The retired Philadelphia Athletics chieftain celebrated his birthday Monday instead of Dec. 25 as he was born about midnight Dec. 22.

Argyel Grattan Named Harness Horse-of-Year

TILLSONBURG (CP) — Argyel Grattan, four-year-old Steinway Grattan pacer gelding owned by Dana Campbell and son of Allas Craig, Ont., has been selected Canadian harness horse of the year in a poll of 60 qualified writers who are without a point after 24 years.

The Owen Sound attack was led by Roy Hanks who notched three goals, Doug Gillespie, Ray McCallum and Joe McArthur each scored one. Hugo Bolzon accepted Hamilton's marker.

At Lowe, Cam Fiehi

Fighting broke out in the penalty box during the second period between Murray Dunstie and McArthur, who had been sent off for slashing. Police were called to hold back players and fans. Both players were given misconduct penalties.

In addition to the two miscondiction games with Penshoro Lumber Kings of the Eastern Canada League and remained in front to win 10-6.

Mercurys Snap at Heels of Indians; Tigers Without Point in 24 Starts

(By The Canadian Press)

Owen Sound Mercurys are snapping at the heels of Stratford Indians' pace-setters of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A race.

The Mercurys defeated the winless Hamilton Tigers 6-1 Monday night to move within one point of Stratford. The Indians are without a point after 24 starts.

The Owen Sound attack was led by Roy Hanks who notched three goals, Doug Gillespie, Ray McCallum and Joe McArthur each scored one. Hugo Bolzon accepted Hamilton's marker.

At Lowe, Cam Fiehi

Fighting broke out in the penalty box during the second period between Murray Dunstie and McArthur, who had been sent off for slashing. Police were called to hold back players and fans. Both players were given misconduct penalties.

Tax-Free Art 'Elevating Influence?' Phooey, Says Hard-Hit Racing Britons

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON (CP) — The names of actress Vivien Leigh and jockey Charlie Smirke have been coupled in an effort to show that British racing gets a dirty deal from the tax collector.

Miss Leigh, wife of Sir Laurence Olivier and one of Britain's most elegant performers on stage and screen, had the leading role in the London stage production of Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire." Smirke rode the Aga Khan's wonder horse Tulyar, Sir Alfred Munnings' last star of the flat-racing season.

The jockey and "Streetcar" escaped entertainment tax on the ground that "art" is an elevating influence, whereas the Aga Khan's bid deeply into horse racing-taking a £700,000 toll from the parimutuels to pay his bills.

This prompted an after-dinner speaker to contend:

"Art an elevating influence? The racing public of Miss Leigh in 'Streetcar' are no more elevating than those of Smirke on another form of transport named Tulyar."

Urges the Reduction

The complaint was made by Jack Gerber, a British owner who has had phenomenal success in the last two years with a four-horse stable. Gerber, part-owner of the filly Reine Grande, spoke at an annual dinner staged by executives of York racecourse, in northern England.

In a plea for reduced taxes on racing, Gerber asked these questions:

"Is it because British breeders continue to breed what are claimed to be the world's best horses when other countries have increased purse money 50 per cent and sale prices declined only 10 per cent, all in a six-year period?

"How can Britain continue to produce champions when the £71,000 royalty, without a thriving home industry?

Gerber brought up what has become a familiar lament — that the best British thoroughbreds are being sold for export, seriously endangering the future of the bloodstock industry.

Remember When

Jack Dempsey, fully aware of Negro dislike for Jim Crow in all fields, announced 15 years ago today that he would conduct a "white hope" tournament among Canadian and United States boxers. Elimination bouts were held but the tournaries but no one was unearthed to halt the Brown Bomber's rise to the heavyweight championship.

Minor League

Rangers, Canadiens and Red Wings won the bantam hockey league games at Memorial Arena defeating Bruins, Leafs and Black Hawks.

Red Wings edged the Bruins by a 4-3 score with Canadiens getting by the Leafs 2-1. Rangers shut out the Black Hawks 3-0.

Gordie St. Louis scored a pair of the Ranger goals with assists by Harrison and Maybe getting the others. Foster notched two, and Campbell were the Bruin markers.

Wannasacker came up with the three-goal hat-trick in the Rangers 4-0 win over the Hawks with Huddleston getting the others.

MARRIAGE ON ROCKS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The stormy marriage of Anne Baxter and John Hodiak is on the rocks, the couple announced Monday. They feel beastick and defeated that in spite of our honest efforts at understanding, basic incompatibilities have made our life together impossible," they said in a joint statement. Miss Baxter's lawyer predicted a divorce suit, the statement said.

WOULD FIGHT TURPIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Archie Moore's manager Monday officially notified the state athletic commission that the newly-crowned light heavyweight champion is ready to defend his title against Randy Turpin if the British fighter wants a shot. Manager Charley Johnson told Bob Christenberry, chairman of the commission, Moore is willing to meet Turpin in New York next summer or sooner.

Wilhelm, Roberts Top Flingers In National Loop

NEW YORK (AP)—Hoyt Wilhelm, New York Giants' freshman relief hurler, and Philadelphia's Robin Roberts captured most of the National League pitching honors, according to official statistics released today.

Wilhelm becomes the first rookie in NL history to lead both in earned runs and won-and-lost percentage the same year.

The 31-year-old knuckleballer gave up 42 earned runs in 158 innings for a 2.43 E.R.A. to finish ahead of the 2.56 mark produced by Chicago's Warren Hacker.

Associated Press compilations released last October also listed Wilhelm on top with 2.43 and Hacker the runner-up with 2.58.

Win 23 Games

The Giants', righthander won 15 games and lost three for a leadership .833 percentage. Roberts, who finished third in the earned run race at 2.75, won 23 more games, for the first time a National League hurl came up with that many victories since Dizzy Dean of St. Louis chalked up 28 triumphs in 1934.

The hard-working Philadelphia hurler also set the pace in most pitching departments, hurling 346 games, 30, and most innings pitched, 346.

Behind Roberts in the earned-run derby came Bob Rush of Chicago and Carl Erskine of Brooklyn, each with 2.70, and Karl Spooner, also of Brooklyn, 2.71.

Joe Black, the league's rookie of the year, had a 2.72 earned-run mark but the Brooklyn moundsman hurled 143 innings, 12 short of the minimum.

Curt Simmonds of Philadelphia and Harvey Haddix of Baltimore recorded the most shutouts, six apiece. Boston's Warren Spahn, for the fourth straight year, was high in strikeouts with 183.

CHARGED IN CAR DEATH

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—George Harold Kumpitz, 19, Monday was committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter arising from the death of Constable Ralph E. Koutz was a passenger in a car driven by Kumpitz when it overturned. Dr. John Fisher, pathologist said the youth suffered fractures of skull and brain and that both lungs were punctured.

SIX-MONTH SENTENCE

GUELPH (CP)—Charles Shullis, 32, charged in the death of an 11-year-old boy who was knocked from his bicycle by an automobile, December 7, was sentenced to six months for failing to remain at the scene of an accident. Shullis was arrested after Jan Skoot was killed Dec. 6. His car also was ordered of dangerous driving and fined $11 and costs or an additional six months.

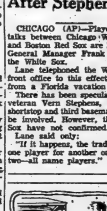
Yanks, Red Sox Duel for Hurler

NEW YORK (AP)—The world champion New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox have passed the $50,000 mark in an effort to outbid each other for Bill Greason Negro right-hander from Oklahoma City.

The Red Sox are reported set to go as high as $100,000 for the right-hander who won nine games and lost one for Oklahoma City last year.

The Yankees and Red Sox are two of the dozen major league teams that have no Negro players on their squads.

White Sox After Stephens?



CHICAGO (AP)—Player trade talks between Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox are hot, says General Manager Frank Lane of the White Sox.

Lane telephoned the White Sox front office to this editor Monday from a Florida vacation spot.

There has been speculation that veteran Vern Stephens, Red Sox shortstop and third baseman, might be involved. However, the White Sox have not confirmed this.

Lane said only:

"If I recall, the trade will be one player for another or two for two—all name players."

Pearson Predicts UN Will Succeed In Bringing Peace

By NORMAN ALSTEDTYER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Assembly President L. B. Pearson of Canada predicted Monday that United Nations will succeed in bringing peace to Korea.

Canada's external affairs minister said in a statement following the recess of the assembly that the session's efforts on the Korean problem, although rejected by the Communists, have not been in vain.

Pearson flew to Ottawa soon after the assembly adjourned.

The next UN step in Korea was expected to be the big issue when the session resumes Feb. 24.

Pearson said in his 1,000-word statement as assembly president that the assembly's five-point peace plan represents "a major achievement in the history of the seventh session."

"To bring the fighting in Korea to an end and to move forward into the positive phases of reconstruction and peaceful settlement is still . . . the great task which faces the United Nations.

"I have no doubt that, through our organization, we shall persist and we shall succeed in finding a joint effort to achieve this objective, which remains our only objective."

Crew Removed

HONOLULU (AP)—The 37-man crew of the freighter Quartette was removed Monday from the storm-battered vessel, hard aground on a treacherous reef 80 miles east of Midway.

Subsiding seas permitted the transfer, halted once before in the storm and early morning darkness, to the nearby Frontenac Victory and a U.S. Navy patrol craft.

Capt. Leo Catsaitis of the Quartette feared the 7,186-ton Liberty ship, which ran aground Sunday, might crack up in the crashing seas. Catsaitis and three of his crew remained at the scene aboard the patrol boat pending arrival of the salvage tug One from Honolulu.

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!
HANDBALL: THE STRAIGHT-ARM UNDERHAND STROKE

1 On this stroke, player must face the front wall. Feet point forwards in walking position. Right arm is swung back and swings back from the shoulder. Body weight shift to right leg, body knee depends on height ball is taken.
2 To strike ball, arm swings through from shoulder. Stroke is parallel to body. Left foot steps forward as ball is hit and knees are bent depending on what height the ball is played.
3 Full weight is on left leg for the follow-through. Arm and right shoulder achieve follow-through by moving in the direction which ball has taken. This stroke is very effective for low placement shots.
Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in handball as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and game.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Put me down as a rule bidder. Because I am convinced that a rule bid brings best results in the great majority of cases. But this does not mean that I disapprove of rule breaking in spots.

If you know the rule bid and have reason for breaking it, let me be the first to side with you. Even if it turns out wrong. What I object to is a rule breaker who insists his bid is right.

South held the hand shown here.

♠ A K Q 4
♥ A K
♦ A K 7
♣ A J 4 3

The correct opening bid with this hand is one spade. It lacks nothing that such a bid promises; at least five tricks, at least four high cards, at least two sure tricks, a spade suit biddable.

You may have a preference for bidding the club suit first. If so, it would be wrong. Because, with two biddable suits of equal length, you have to bid the higher rank first.

True, this hand has considerably more than a bid of one shown. But it lacks something in any other bid that would show a better hand. Consequently, one spade is the only correct opening.

Knowing this, an experienced player could find a number of reasons for using a different opening. He would probably not be justified in his selection of some other bid.

This would be bad, because, he knows what is correct, he takes into consideration what others there may be in his deviation. So, he will be prepared to protect himself in the future situation.

This would not be so if a player was unaware of the fact that some other opening is slightly shy. Because then his deviation was not with good reason. It would be from ignorance of what was right.

What other bid might be justified by a player who knew what was right? What reasons would prompt such a player for selecting a different bid? Such things are worth discussing.

GATINEAU MILLS, Que. (CP)—Gerard Belanger, 31, was fatally injured Monday when he fell 85 feet from a scaffolding at the Canadian International Paper Company plant in this town, about five miles west of Ottawa.

Brigade Giving Party to 700 German Orphans

HANNOVER, Germany (Reuters) —More than 700 German orphans are being entertained at Christmas parties given by the Canadian 27th infantry brigade this week.

Some individual units held their parties Sunday. Some were held Monday, and the rest are today.

Monday it was the 1st Canadian Highland battalion's turn to play host. Under the benevolent supervision of the unit's commander, Lt.-Col. H. A. Parker of Oakville, Ont., some 100 orphans were feted in the mess hall.

But in less time than it takes to say "Christmas," the small fry were munching goodies, admiring the big candle-lit Christmas tree or playing pick-a-back with the soldiers.

Climax of the party came when Santa Claus distributed gifts of clothing, dolls for the girls and mechanical toys for the boys.

Party organizers were two sergeant-majors, R. B. Hume of Camp Borden, Ont., and W. G. Tobin of Montreal. They knew how to please the kids—Simple is the best of three children' and Tobin has two.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A summer ago, Vivian Vance was appearing in "Voice of the Turtle" at the La Jolla, Calif., playhouse. Little did she realize that she was trying out for what might be a lifetime job.

In the audience one night were Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz. They were looking for players to appear in a TV show they were planning. "I Love Lucy." They chose her to play Lucy's neighbor, Ethel.

The second to the story is TV history. "I Love Lucy" climbed to the top of the ratings and has stayed there. A recent survey estimated the show had 42,000,000 viewers.

"If I had realized that night at La Jolla that I would be trying out for a part in the No. 1 TV show," said Miss Vance, "I would have been too nervous to go on the stage."

"I Love Lucy" has done amazing things for Vivian. Previously, she has been typed to play hard, brassy dames.

She now is living up a couple of pictures, because the shooting of "Lucy" series is recessed until after the Arnaz baby arrives. One of the roles she was up for was a witchy character such as she had always played. But the casting man said: "I don't know whether she can do the part; she's too sweet!"

The citizens of Albuquerque, N.M., her home town, were responsible for Vivian's career. She made a hit in a play and the town raised money to send her to New York.

She managed to land in hits like "Music in the Air," "Red, Hot and Blue" and "Skylark." Then came night clubs, more shows, Hollywood and "Lucy."

COIN TOSS DECIDES JOB

PORT STANLEY (CP)—The toss of a coin Monday made Phillip Pensa deputy levy of Port Stanley for 1953. A recount of votes cast Dec. 1 was conducted by Judge J. F. McMillan. It was found that both Mr. Pensa and his opponent, Garnet Spence, had each received 277 votes. Joseph Burke, municipal clerk, tossed the coin.

AT THE McCARTHY—Jeff Chandler and Scott Brady star with screen newscomer Suzan Ball in Universal-International's Technicolor "Yankee Buccaneer." Chandler and Brady are seen as U.S. navel officers who are forced to pose as pirate leaders in order to capture a band of buccaneers. The film opens Wednesday at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre.

AT NEW BELLE—Two popular stars, Myrna Loy, William Powell, Richard Greene are co-starred in "It This Be Sin" a tense dramatic story, showing at the Belle Theatre today and Wednesday. The major feature "This Above All" stars Tyrone Power and Joan Fontaine, and 4 favorite stars.

AT THE CAPITOL—Cornel Wilde fights for freedom in Columbia Pictures' "California Conquest," which co-stars Teresa Wright at the Capitol Theatre in color by Technicolor. John Dehner wields the knife. On the same program dirt track racing in "Army Bound" starring Stanley Clements. Both attractions start Christmas night and continuous Friday Boxing-Day and Saturday.

Must be Strong

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect Eisenhower said Monday if the United States is to be strong "we must be strong first in our spiritual convictions."

"And those convictions must be those that appeal to men," he added, as he discussed American-Soviet frictions in an address to the Freedoms Foundation.

"If we are going to win this fight, we are going to have to go back to the fundamentals. If we can be strong enough to sell ourselves this idea at home, we can win this ideological war."

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, DEC. 24, 1952.

A very happy and blessed Christmas to all!

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Splendid vibrations for most worthy activities this holy time of the year. Do not go to extremes nor indulge unsavory pleasures. Pray strive for world peace and unfortunate peoples.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Your Venus and other planets favorably situated remind us this should be a time of thanksgiving for our blessings. Out of the goodness of heart we should give generously to the poor.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—You, too, have reason for happy planning. Are you thinking of dear ones, of those in the armed services? Have you done anything substantial to make others happier or less sad?

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Friendly influences for last-minute needs, cheerful get-togethers, children's interests, domestic and social matters. We all should think of the true significance of this blessed season.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—In last-minute preparations be sure to include prayers for those far from home and its comforts ... to aid the lonely, children and old folks. Blessings!

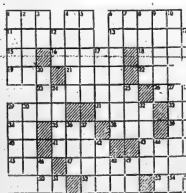
August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Should be amendable day for activities, interests permit it to this season. Pray to the Infant Saviour for all mankind, and for world peace.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Read Taurus and Cancer, your indications similar now. Don't spoil the true meaning of this Holy Season by any wild indulgence or excesses of any kind. Family, church first!

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Can be a thriving day for small shops, and large institutions. Day has favorable aspects but does warn against unexpected changes and hasty decisions in matters running efficiently.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Carelessness in spending advised against; true charity is urged and is much needed now both at home and for countries devastated by war and other privations.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Mild pleasant influences. Don't neglect little details at home that add to domestic harmony and prepare for Christmas with spiritual as well as temporal generosity.



January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Your Uranus today promises smoothness of action and thoughtfulness for better health and true happiness. May time for urgent business sane safety.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Neptune wisely advises moderation in confidential matters. Day on whole is encouraging, benefic for your interests.

YOU BORN TODAY are study, dependable in character, may be judged solemn, too serious at times, but deep down in your heart you enjoy wholesome fun and possess great affection for the finer things in life. Don't be overcreative. Smile, care for health properly, and pray daily for guidance.

Birthdate of: Ignatius Loyola, saint and founder of the Society of the Jesus; Matthew, Arnold, Eng. poet, writer.

Large Santa Claus Parade Delights Children at Wellington

Picton — Wellington on Saturday staged what was without doubt the largest and finest Santa Claus parade in any Ontario village. A record crowd saw a long and colorful array of floats and two bands pass through the business section and return. It was a fine demonstration of community co-operation, with nearly every business in the village represented, as well as organizations and district farmers. There were 46 entries in the parade.

After the parade, the RCAF Band of Trenton Station gave a program in the consolidated school hall while Santa presented each of the hundreds of children with a bag of candy, a balloon and an ice cream cone, the latter donated by Quinte Milk Products.

The parade was sponsored by Wellington Board of Trade and Wellington Branch of the Canadian Legion. Very few costumes were presented, the ingenuity being shown by those preparing the floats.

The parade was headed by the trumpet band of the RCSA (AA), Trenton, under RSM B. Jones with the RCAF band preceding the Santa Claus float on which St. Nick rode in a red sleigh driving his deer. Additional music was provided by record tunes, carol singers and old tyme orchestras.

One of the most eye-catching floats was that of Wellington Fuels and Farm Supplies, depicting Little Jack Horner, Brilliant in red and white, with candy canes, was the Peppermint Prince who was seated on a red candy cane and surrounded by 4 attendants; entered by the L. J. Green Candies. The Queen of Hearts rode in splendor in a setting of red, with candy canes on Walker's grocery float. Yellow lollipops were on each corner of Nash Hardware float on which rode Miss Lollipops (Wanda Downs.)

Bowerman's Sunday School had a double float. The evergreen float carried carol singers while the second had a beautiful scene of the Nativity. Canadian Canners snow queen saw a beautiful setting of white with everpresent red poinsettias and holly. Eileen Yott was queen.

Although never were two floats which showed hobos headed for the Land of Jauja (Easy Life) had a group of darkies who were riding in comfort and carrying a variety of watermelon in the old car. Don Jolley had three hobos bound for the Land of Jauja and they, too, carried a variety of humorous articles along.

The Red Kettle float also showed heading for the parade with a pot boiling over with youngsters and children. Reeve Lewis Wright of Hillier, was recognized under such auspices as the Pied Piper.

Bailey and Ogilvie had "Baby Bunting Daddy Goes a Hunting" as its theme, with Mrs. Bailey nursing a baby patient.

An old car with hay on top and filled with more hobos, arranged by Sidney Ketcheson, created more fun. Music and comedy were provided by the Bailey float with old-tyme musicians, clowns, with a small, old-tyme hobo playing violin.

Old Mother Hubbard and her bare cupboard was depicted by Maybee Woodworking float; a float with fishermen by the Tourist Association, and a float of scenes by Quinte Milk Products; a gaily decorated car by Ontario Steel Products Limited; decorated truck by Robertson Garage; decorated car by Canners Service; Christmas scene reptiles with trees and toys by D. E. Chatterson and Son; a very young bride and groom in an old car by Bell Bros.; a Santa Claus on a horse-drawn sleigh; a decorated truck and van to represent a huge package, by Bailey Bros. The Night Before Christmas" by D. R. MacDonald; a float with Lunch; a decorated truck with the three bears by A. C. Platt; a beautifully decorated truck by Quality Meats; hockey players in action by the Recreation Board Association; a square dance by Prince Edward Dairy Limited; a huge egg sucking a soda thru a straw by Slaven's Egg grading station; the three little bears by Sayers; the Snowman, Bird and Santa by Wellington Auxiliary; Miss W.C.S. of 1932, several students in old time gowns, by Wellington Consolidated school; Wellington racing boats (Pinky and Cecil and Cecil Platt) with their speed boats; decorated car by Downs; Clifford Lowery, decorated car; square dancers by United Canners; decorated sound truck by Quinte Radio and Electric; sound truck for the Salvation Army; Eldridge's modern fire truck; decorated car, J. H. Rutter; clowns by Wright Feeds.

Dressed as a hobo and trying to hitch a ride, Art Ogilvy gave a performance worthy of Charlie Chaplin and with as few words.

Interspersed in the parade were groups of horses, a number provided by George Atkinson, of Bloomfield, and Howard Anderson, of Wellington and Picton. There was also a decorated bicycle.

The village was bright with holiday decorations and the huge crowd was a tribute to the work of the many hours of work which had gone into organizing the big day.
